NUMBER 14.

MISS TUCKER, OFFICIAL REPRESENTATIVE AT AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION

At the thirty-ninth meeting of the American Historical Association which was held at the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond, December 27-31, Miss Sarah B. Tucker, associate teacher of history at S. T. C., Farmville, and Dr. I. L. Morton, professor of history at William and Mary, were appointed to act as official representatives of the Virginia Society of History Teachers. This association has had a far-reaching influence during its existence of nearly four years.

Charles McLean Andrews, of Yale University served as acting president to succeed the late president of the association, Woodrow Wilson, who died in office. Dr. Andrews gave a resume of what had been accomplished since the organization of the association and he discussed that purpose of the organization.

The meeting was of international importance, having representatives who took part on the program, from Oxford, Cambridge, University of London, Edinburgh, Dublin, Toronto, and Montreal. These representatives are history professors and members of the Historical Association of the British Empire.

It is of general interest to know that history is now less prolific than before the association was founded, but it is more accurate. The outlook of history is controlled by the colleges. History at present, tends to work for the good of the whole world, rather than for the good of sections, localities, or individual countries.

Diaries form an excellent source for history, for they have been kept day by day and so are of more value than memoirs.

During recent years, special committees of this association have outlined what history courses should be offered in the public schools of our country.

Special excursions were taken by members of the association to the following historic places: battlefields around Richmond; historic points in Richmond; Westover, the home of William Byrd, who founded Richmond; Battle of the Crater, Petersburg; William and Mary College, Williamsburg; Jamestown and Yorktown. Receptions were tendered by Governor E. Lee Trinkle, and also by the Colonial Dames.

Dr. Morris K. Turner, head of the department of History at S. T. C., was also in attendance at the meetings.

Prominent speakers showed that during the next forty years, much should be done in constructive and creative thought. This is a period of progress: the historian is now encouraging and strengthening world fellowship.

OUR NEW DINING ROOM

It was terrible to have to leave home and good times and settle down again to work. But think of our big compensation—the New Dining Room that awaited our return to school. It is indeed with pride, as well as hunger,—that we enter it three times a day. Even the tea room holds no lure for us now.

Ever since the fire, we have been watching it grow—brick by brick—and anxiously awaiting the time when it would really be finished. Now that it is completed, we have as our very own one of the finest, best equipped and furnished dining rooms in the South. It is exceeded by none. By this we not only mean it is the best college dining room, but it equals in beauty and completeness any hotel dining room of its size. It is a joy to stand just inside, look at it, and realize that it is finished—and best of all, that it is ours. Getting up these cold mornings, doesn't seem half so bad now that we can eat breakfast in such a wonderful place.

The shape of the dining room hall is that of a Greek cross. The walls are tinted a soft olive gray; the woodwork is covered with ivory paint, while the waxed floors are of oak. The massive columns supporting the lofty roof are finished in ivory. Along the eastern and western sides extend mezzanine floors or balconies, similar to those now so much used in the most luxurious hotels. By day the hall is pleasantly lighted by forty windows and a skylight. Numerous hanging lights add to beauty of the room. Electric fans insure a breeze during the warm summer days. Small, round oak tables with immaculate linen add to the homelike appearance.

At the rear of the dining hall is a new kitchen, complete in every detail, with steam tables, electrical appliances. On the same floor, are bakery, butler's pantry, linen room, housekeeper's office, and servants' dining room.

On the ground floor, are the cold storage plant, storage rooms for meat, flour, canned goods, general supplies. A large recreation hall with a stage, adds to the social life of the students.

With the opening of the new dining room, comes the realization that "blessings never come singly"—we will soon have access to the gymnasium.

Who knows but that the first varsity game may be played in the best gymnasium in the State—at the State Teachers College, Farmville, Va.?

Girls, watch for the new Beauty Shop that's going to be right in the dormitory, and it's going to be a good one, too. Do you know why? Well, I'll tell you: The Sophomores are putting it here just for you, so you must all be loyal and patronize it. Hear? MISS WAITE TO SPEAK OF KINDERGARTEN EXTENSION

On Thursday afternoon, January 15, at 4:30, Miss Mary G. Waite, Kindergarten Specialist, in the United States Bureau of Education, will speak in the State Teachers College auditorium under the auspices of the Kindergarten and First Grade, Mother's Club and the Student Branch of the International Kindergarten Union.

Miss Waite will speak in the interests of Kindergarten Extension, and will show how the Kindergarten prepares for the work of the grades. In a recent study of school attendance, the Superintendent of the Minneapolis Schools says the Kindergarten children get off on the right foot and it is easy for these fortunate children to go from grade to grade without stumbling."

A CORRECTION

The staff of The Rotunda wishes to express its sincere regret for a mistake which appeared in the last issue of the paper. In our haste to proclaim to all the world the profound victory of the Freshmen basketball team, we did not have time to have the proof read, therefore, much to our sorrow, the mistake was made of printing the score of the last game—seven, to one—when it should have been twenty-seven to one. We plead forgiveness for our grave error.

HAMPTON ROADS, THE PORT

State Chamber of Commerce Launches Plans to Advertise Its Advantages.

Hampton Roads can be made the port of the United States. Nature kindly fitted it to take this place, but the people of Virginia have been sitting back and letting the products that could be shipped thru this port, slip by to New York, Boston and other distant harbors.

Far-sighted Virginians and people interested in the State's welfare, have seen visions of Virginia's future, if her port is developed. Rapidly, we will spring to the front in matters of wealth, enterprise, and development.

Recently, the Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch, issued a Hampton Roads Port Development Edition, a part of one of the editorials, follows:

Undaunted by the refusal of the Virginia general assembly to initiate amendments to the State Constitution designed to permit the people to vote on State port aid as recommended by the Hampton Roads Port Commission, a campaign of education throughout the State is being undertaken on a broad scale, starting with the high schools and continuing in every direction.

Pledges by candidates for office to reorganize the value of the port to the State presage favorable action in the future, provided aggressive methods are continued to inform the people themselves as to the asset they possess in Hampton Roads.

Organization of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, with a five-five program placing the development of Hampton Roads first on the list, then tax reform, water power development, agricultural aid, and other phases in turn assures a medium through which information may be disseminated, and interest in port development aroused.

Bringing of the Virginia delegation in congress solidly between the protection of the interests of Hampton Roads at Washington and for the first time in history, the army and navy bills affecting the port, and rivers and harbors appropriations will have the concerted and aggressive interest of our senators and representatives.

The President of the United States recognizes the value of Hampton Roads to the State and nation, as is shown in his letter printed in this edition of the Ledger-Dispatch; the Governor of Virginia, presidents of railroads, and leaders everywhere show their appreciation of our port as a world gateway.

President Coolidge, with that intimate knowledge of the economic importance of Hampton Roads that has characterized his administration writes:

"They (the Hampton Roads) ports form a gateway for national commerce on which Virginia has reason to pride herself. As a group they handled, in 1923, nearly nineteen million tons of waterborne commerce, which would place them in point of tonnage among the largest of the world's salt water ports."

"You may be assured of my continued interest of the State and city authorities looking to the further sound development of the locality."

With these facts and comments in mind, the future offers possibilities that rest on ourselves. Hampton Roads will no longer be neglected, but it can not grow, it can not get that support and financial assistance it requires without concerted, well-directed effort on the part of our own people and those of the State and nation. There is much to be done, but nothing is impossible of accomplishment.

Adoption of and subscription to a creed that calls for full co-operation, for an appreciation of what we have and what we want, the determination to go after it—that is what we proclaim without reservation.

Y. W. C. A. STARTS YEAR WITH IMPORTANT PROJECT

The Y. W. C. A. is starting the year 1925 with a project new to our campus tho it has been tried quite successfully in other colleges.

The girls who attended the Conference at Blue Ridge last summer and those who went to the Curry Institute this fall, were deeply impressed by the value of discussion groups. It is generally agreed that indifference is one of the worst evils to be feared on this campus, and so when these girls saw groups of students so intensely interested in campus and world problems, they came home with the firm resolve to set the same leaven to work in Farmville.

A group of possible leaders has been organized and several meetings have been under the leadership of Miss Mary P. Jones, who accompanied our delegates to the Curry Institute. Much interest has been shown in the subjects already discussed, in fact it has sometimes been very difficult to bring the discussions to a close in time enough for the girls to reach the dining room before the doors are closed so intent were they in following some idea or suggestion. The Y. W. C. A. hopes that clearer thinking and better living may come as a result of these discussions.

Another important feature of the Y. W. C. A. work for the winter term is the series of lectures on Christian Fundamentals. Dr. Smart conducted these lectures last year and charmed the girls with his clear, sympathetic, yet firm views of college life and its relation to Christianity. The speaker for this year has not been definitely decided upon but plans are being made and the Y. W. C. A. feels sure that the person selected, will be one who understands college life and its problems.

An inter-collegiate debate between the University of Hawaii and Oxford is to take place in Honolulu some time in January. The Oxford debate team has been debating in leading American colleges and will visit Hawaii before proceeding to Austria, where they will engage the island continent's best debaters.

EDITORIAL

When New Year's Day rolls around, we all begin to think about what we can do to make this year more a beneficial one for ourselves and for others. We make our resolutions with every intention of keeping them unbroken, yet, a great number of them are broken before one week has passed. This discourages us and this resolution is dropped until another year shall roll around. Why need this be true? We can make each day a new year and start out once more and try this time to overcome the mistakes we make.

Why should we wait for New Year's Day

To come—and disappear?

Whenever conscience moves, or duty pleads,

Then make resolves, and of resolves make deeds,

And make each day begin a new and happy year.

It has been the custom for a number of years, for each class to get out one issue of THE ROTUNDA a year. The class has entire charge, they appoint their own staff, write all the articles and the competition for the best issue usually makes these four among the best of the year. This year we have done such exceptionally good work along other lines, that there is no reason why the class issue of THE ROTUNDA should not be more clever and show more originality, than ever before. Unless interest is to be shown, which will make these issues of benefit, it will be useless to have them. How about each class getting together, thinking out your idea of what you want and planning to have for your issue something entirely new and different? It can be done if everyone backs up the staff which you elect and does her best for the class.

A WORTH-WHILE THOUGHT

A New Leaf.

To the desk of his teacher, a little lad came
With his eyes downcast and his cheeks aflame;
And he said in a trembling and hesitant tone,
"I've spoiled this leaf; may I have a new one?"
In place of the sheet so stained and blotted,
She gave him a new one, clean, unspotted;
His tear-stained face she lifted, then smiled
And said: "Try to do better now, my child."

To my teacher I went on my knees, alone;
The days had passed by, and another year flown;
"Dear Father, hast Thou not a new leaf for me?
I've blotted so badly this other, I see."
God took the old leaf, so soiled and blotted,
And gave me a new one, clean unspotted,
And into my sorrowing heart he smiled,
Saying: "Try to do better now, My child."—Selected.

OUR GRATITUDE

Dear Doctor Jarman:
Again we wish to say,
A few more words of thanks,
For our "extra holiday."

We appreciate sincerely
The kindness you expressed,
And are glad we did our part
When we were put to test.

Now once more dear Dr. Jarman,
Hearty thanks we give to you,
And tell you that forever
To you we will be true.

A Note from Me to You

I think about you often,
And I'd write you every day,
But there is so very little
That it seems worth while to say.
It either rains or it doesn't rain;
It's either hot or cold—
The news is all uninteresting,
Or else it is all been told.
The only thing that matters
Is the fact that you are there,
And I am here without you,
And it's lonesome everywhere.
I think about the way you smile
And I recall your touch
And distance lends enchantment and I miss you very much!

Washington and Lee University practices the honor system with a vengeance. In addition to conducting the examination with the utmost freedom permissible to the students, the faculty runs the co-operative store on the same principle. A student enters the store, selects what he wants, rings up the amount on the cash register, makes his own change or leaves his check and walks out with his purchase.
There is no one to watch, every student acting strictly on his honor.

FRESHMAN COMMISSION ORGANIZED

The Y. W. C. A. has taken another step forward this year and organized a Freshman Commission. The need for such an organization has been felt for some time but not until this year has the Y. W. C. A. felt able to enter on this new venture.

The commission is to fill the gap between the already organized Y. W. C.
A. and the new girls. It now only brings the plans and purposes of the Y. W.
C. A. to the Freshman, but takes their new ideas to the Y. W. C. A. and thus gives it new strength and vigor. The commission is elected by the Freshman Class which it represents. It does all sorts and kinds of work assigned to it by the cabinet and thus performs many services in the school.

The officers for the Commission this year, are:

Amanda Gray, President.

Evelyn Dulaney, Vice-President.

Mary Alice Blanton, Secretary.

The following girls were elected to membership on the commission:

Virginia Noel, Eleanor Zacharias,
Mary Banks, Virginia Updike, Frances Valk, Polly Riddle, Margaret Robinson, Lois Westbrooke, Mary Alice Blanton, Evelyn Peak, Virginia Perkins, Geneva Lionberger, Virginia Graves, Louise Jones, Helen Hull, Lillian Savage, Evelyn Dulaney, Elizabeth Arnfield, Virginia Hull, Amanda Gray.

Following the precedent of last year,
Wellesley will again debate a man's school. This time the subject will be on capital punishment and the school debated with will be Dartmouth.

THE SPIRIT OF '25

We are told that poets are born, not made, but this is certainly not true of a good sportsman.

The more you see the school girls, the more you realize how few fundamental ideas of sportsmanship they possess. Of course, I believe that every one has the capability of being a true sportsman but it is so hard to rouse these feelings.

We tell a girl:-

"Be a sport now," and perhaps she desires above all else to be a good sportsman, but does not know what it is to be one, the essentials thereof.

Here is our problem — The words "Sport" and "good sport," are such misused words. Sport, means to the ordinary run of school girls, a boy who will give them a good time. Hip-pocket refreshments, cigarettes, and petting parties. A girl is a good sport who will thus indulge. Here in school life a sport is one who knows that a person is breaking an essential rule and yet does not report it to proper authorities, the one who will lie to save a friend from punishment. These are the usual meanings given to the words "good sport."

But what an entirely different thing is meant by real sportsmanship. It simply means playing the game fairly — abiding by the rules, and accepting the decisions with the best of grace.

Shakespeare said that all the world was a stage but I think it can be as truly said that all the world is a game and we are the players therein. Of course, we know that it is the highest of organized team-games, and that teamwork is the first requirement.

Kipling says all that is necessary to say about teamwork when he says:

"It ain't the guns of armament
Nor the funds that they can pay
But the close co-operation that makes them win the day.
It ain't the individual
Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlasting team-work
Of every blooming soul."

But how can we be good sportsmen here in school?

First—We have leaders here in our school life—Student Government officials, Class officers, and Committeemen of all sorts for a short or long time. Having elected these leaders ourselves by the will of the majority, we should not criticize or knock our leaders. That reacts on the very people who practice it. They undermine their own chances of achievement.

As long as a person is your leader, and if she is true to the duties and responsibilities to which you have elected her, give her your absolute loyalty, play her game to the limit, shut your mouth against making any criticisms of her. Of course, if any leaders fail to play the game according to the rules why such a leader should be removed for the good of the whole.

Another important thing to be remembered about this game of school life, is that, what we get out of it, depends on how much we put into it. We must make the game a personal thing, remembering that we can't win to day on what we did yesterday.

I think every school girl could take the motto of the Japanese as her guide along the road of good sportsmanship. Surely a clean sportsman "sees no evil, hears no evil, and speaks no evil."

Nothing is more destructive to the best that is in school life, than a scandal-monger!

But after all, one of the most important things for a good sportsman is to be true to himself in the highest sense of the word. You can't play the game of life fairly with anyone, unless you are playing fairly with yourself. Edgar A. Guest said it all when he said:

"I have to live with myself, and so I want to fit myself to know."

I want to be able, as the days go by, Always to look myself straight in the eye;

I don't want to stand with the setting sun,

And have myself for the things I've done.

I don't want to keep on a closet shelf A lot of secrets about myself

And fool myself, as I come and go, Into thinking that nobody else will know—

So kind or mean I really am;

I don't want to dress up myself in sham.

I want to go with my head erect,

I want to deserve all men's respect;

But here in the struggle for fame and self,

I want to be able to like myself.

I don't want to look at myself and know

That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show.

I can never hide myself from me;

I see what others may never see;

I know what others may never know.

I never can fool myself and so—

Whatever happens, I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free."

In order to meet the new and enlarged needs of the modern dining room and kitchen, Mrs. J. S. Martin, of Smithfield, was engaged to assist Mrs. Jamison and Mrs. Perry.

VOLUME V

FARMVILLE, VA., SATURDAY, JANUARY 17 1925.

NUMBER 15.

LYCEUM NUMBER

THE INTERNATIONAL ARTISTS PRESENT DELIGHTFUL

COCERT HERE

On Wednesday, January 14 1925, in the college auditorium, the International Artists presented a delightful and entertaining program. The company consists of Nicholas Vasilieff, tenor; Ary Dulfier, violinist, and Fela Rybier, pianist and accompanist.

Mr. Vasilieff was the organizer and director of the famous Russian Cathedral Sextette which came to Farmville after the fire in November, 1923. He is a man of great charm and personality. He has a beautiful tenor voice,—its smoothness and volume at once proving him to be a true artist.

Mr. Dulfier is a distinguished Dutch violinist, who has been concert master of orchestras in the noted musical centers of Europe, and has appeared as soloist with various symphony orchestras there. He is a sincere artist with rich, expressive tone.

The third member of the company, Miss Rybier, is a talented young Polish pianist. She also has met with unusual success in European musical circles. Her playing is characterized by originality of interpretation and brilliancy of technique.

The program was filled with variety. Mr. Vasilieff sang many well-known songs. With each song, the enthusiasm of the audience became more pronounced, but it was not until he sang "At Downing," that the climax of the evening was reached.

Mr. Dulfier's selections were well-chosen and varied from silvery sonatas to fiery dances. Many of these selections were composed by Mr. Dulfier himself.

Miss Rybier accompanied Mr. Dulfier, and Mr. Vasilieff with ease and grace, but it was when she played various selections by Rachmaninoff, Liszt and Chopin, that she held her audience.

The concert was expressed by many as one of the best of the season.

THE JAPANESE GIRL

The Glee Club has begun work on its annual presentation this year, to be an operetta entitled: "The Japanese Girl."

The cast has been chosen, and rehearsals are already well under way.

The cast of characters:

O Hane San Norma Fuqua
O Kitee San Katherine Kiser
O Kaya San Pattie Smith
Chaya (a Tea-Server) Amanda Gray
Nora Twinn (twin American girls).....
..... Virginia Vincent
Dora Twinn (twin American girls).....
..... Helen Hodges
Miss Knowall (their governess) Ruth Bartholmew

Kato Mable Edwards
Jetsy Rose Powell
Singing Girl Dorothy Hudson

In addition to this cast, there will be a chorus of one hundred voices with full orchestra accompaniment.

VARSITY PRACTICE BEGINS

Are you vitally intrested in the Varsity Basketball team this year? Its success depends upon your spirit and co-operation. We want you to help the team to get the winning spirit. Above everything else, we want good sportsmanship to prevail. The Varsity will play the cleanest, fastest game it is capable of, and to go with that, we want the support of every student. This will enable us to put Victorious with Varsity.

Practice is held every evening, excepting Monday, in the Armory, after Prayers, until Study Hour. We soon hope to change the place of the practice to our own beautiful new gym. New material is wanted. Get in to practice as soon as possible. The squad meets every day at 10:45 for a brisk walk of fifteen minutes duration. The Varsity letter "F" will be awarded to those who meet the necessary requirements. The number of Varsity games this year will be limited to enable us to carry on a wider and greater number of athletic events here at the college.

The policy of the Athletic Association this year is "Athletics for all who care to participate." It's up to you. If you want to earn the right to wear your college monogram, S. T. C., you will be given the opportunity to do so. Practice periods will be held every day after chapel on the Athletic Field and every afternoon in the gym from 5:15 to 5:45. Try-outs for points will be held every Saturday from 10 to 12 in the gym. Come on girls, let's get behind the Athletic Council and work off points this season. Let's have some monograms on the front of the new Christmas sweaters and at the same time, let's get some of the rouge that won't wash off.

FIRST MEETING OF SENATE HELD

The first meeting of the College Senate, was held on Thursday evening, January 8. Vice-President Quinn, of the Student Government Association presided and work was begun in earnest. There was a splendid representation from each of the four classes. The Senate plans to work on a highly organized and efficient basis this year. Members of a committee on rules have already been appointed by the presiding officer and will have a definite plan of procedure by the February meeting which will follow the Student-Body meeting on the first Monday evening of each month. Mary Ruth Winn was elected Secretary of the Senate.

A plea was made that correct parliamentary procedure be employed, and that the legislative body of our country be used as a criterion. One may therefore see that the Senate is in earnest and intends to work with true senatorial solemnity and dignity. Such an august and zealous body should inspire the confidence of those who are there represented, and should effect most desirable and wise measures for our college.

A new student organization has been formed, known as the "Eight."

THE YELLOW JACKET

What is this something which fascinates, lures, attracts us when we behold or hear anything Chinese or Oriental? Is it the mysteriousness, the ancientness, the wisdom of it all? Did you ever stop to consider how old the Chinese drama is? It is old—old—old—old, and very unchanged. The Chinese stage is still one of the greatest simplicity, the scenery quite scarce. I might say the scenery on a Chinese stage depends entirely on the individual's imagination! Alarming, is it not? And yet, quite true. The individual sees with his physical eyes only a few chairs, a few crude pieces of wood representing a bridge, house or something—yet the eyes of his imagination see moss-covered paths, beautiful gardens, a babbling brook, magnificent temples and gorgeous halls. Some placards may give information concerning the scene, but on a Chinese stage there is not the bountiful adornment that we find on our American stage.

The actors in a Chinese drama announce who they are and their purpose in the play. The property man sits on the stage to announce the scenes and render aid to the actors, also to supply them with any articles they desire.

It all sounds a bit queer and yet, aren't we all fascinated by and attracted to the thing that is different,—unusual?

The Dramatic Club will present "The Yellow Jacket," a Chinese play, January 24, at 8 p. m., in the S. T. C. auditorium. Reserve your seats at White Drug Co's store. Prices $1.00, and .50.

Thrill, mystery, and true enjoyment await you.

AESTHETIC DANCING CLASS ORGANIZED BY MISS BARLOWE

The most interesting class in the school, has recently been organized. Miss Barlowe has kindly consented to teach dancing. She has at present, fourteen students in her class, which meets twice a week.

Miss Barlowe is fast turning out some fairies. She is untiring in her efforts, and a wonderful instructor. The proceeds from the class will go to the Student Building Fund.

First Women's Debate

Four years ago, the Women's Literary Society of McGill University, Canada, sent a challenge to the women of the University of Toronto, for a debate. Later, the co-eds of Queens College, Ontario, began to entertain forensic ambitions. Consequently, for the first time in history ladies met in inter-collegiate debates on dominion soil, November 21.

The subject for debate was: "Resolved that unions of employed workers are beneficial to society."

The co-eds of McGill carried away the honors, defeating the Toronto "team" which upheld the affirmative and also the Queens "team." The third battle was won by Toronto.—The New Student.

MISS WAITE SPEAKS AT S. T. C.

On Thursday afternoon, January 15, at 4:30, Miss Mary G. Waite, Kindergarten Specialist, of the United States Bureau of Education, spoke at the State Teachers College, under the auspices of the Kindergarten, and First Grade Mothers' Club, and the International Kindergarten Union.

Dr. Jarman introduced the speaker. He stressed the great demand and need for more and better Kindergartens in the United States. He also mentioned that the State Teachers College was among the first colleges to connect Kindergarten with Primary work.

Miss Waite spoke on the interests of Kindergarten grades and showed how Kindergarten prepared for the work of the grades, by means of slides and explanation. In her opening paragraph, she summed up what was said by Dr. Jarman and also stated that 75 per cent. of all the Training Schools in the United States have Kindergarten and Primary courses connected.

Miss Waite showed photographs of children in different countries and States, such as China, California, New York and many other places. These slides together with her speech, were

MONOGRAM CLUB

EVA McKINNEY, PRESIDENT
CELEST WHALEY, SEC.-TREAS.

As the season of Varsity Basketball draws near, it seems fitting to tell the students of the Monogram Club.

The Monogram Club is composed of the wearers of the "F"—those students who have represented this school in inter-collegiate athletics. At present, these students are only basketball players, as this is the only inter-collegiate sport. To play in an inter-collegiate game, is not enough to gain the honor of wearing the "F", but the players must come up to certain standards set by the school athletic authorities, and the Monogram Club. The final admission to the Monogram Club is decided by the members thereof.

The Monogram Club was organized in 1923—the original members being: Rebecca Ames, Elsie Bell, Nell McArdle, Margaret Matthews, Kitty Morgan, Louise Parson, Manie Sexton, Anna Belle Treake.

The members admitted since, are: Henrietta Hall, Mildred Hall, Rosabelle Walton, Julia Reid, Etta Sawyer, Edna Hall, Eva McKinney, Celest Whaley, Miss Buford.

Miss Buford being an alumnae of the school, and Athletic Coach, for three years, was voted an "F" and membership in the Monogram Club.

The purpose of the Monogram Club as stated in its constitution, is—to promote and encourage all forms of athletics in the Farmville State Teachers College; to work for good clean inter-collegiate rivalry; to broaden the field of inter-collegiate sports; and above all, to stand for the highest degree of sportsmanship in all things.

The highest athletic honor in the school is to be a wearer of the "F" and all basketball players should keep this ever before them.

After the Varsity season, the Monogram Club will take great pleasure in initiating, formally and informally, all new students who come up to the standard.

most interesting. Some were out-door scenes of children at play, or communing with nature. Others were indoor scenes, representing the children at work in the Kindergarten and Primary grades, with and without supervision. The speaker explained how co-operation, tolerance, and democracy, were developed in the Kindergarten and lower grades.

Miss Mix, teacher of child literature at S. T. C., announced that a Mothers' Club had been organized and that the first meeting would be held Thursday, January 22, at 4 o'clock, in Room 1 of the college. All mothers of Farmville, are invited to become members.

This most enjoyable lecture was repeated Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

EDITORIAL

In practically every college paper we pick up, we find a column or so, devoted to "Debating." There are either inter-class debates or inter-collegiate debates. The subject seems to be of great interest and of paramount importance. Not yet, have we had so much as a mention of a Debate at S. T. C. Literary subjects seem to be gradually declining. This will never do, if we are to be a college in the true sense of the word. We must be interested in and take part in things in which other colleges are taking part. There is not one of us who, whether we play or not, is not interested in our inter-Collegiate basketball games. Great enthusiasm is shown at every game; why cannot the same thing be true in regard to Debates? Why can't we make them a living part of our school life, and cheer our team to victory with the same enthusiasm and pride with which we cheer our Varsity? Let's arouse interest, by showing it, and put S. T. C. on the map in a literary, as well as athletic sense.

Now that we are enjoying the beauty and comfort of the new dining-room, let us not forget that we have our part to play in making it a real success. Since the floor space is much larger than we have been accustomed to, we find that there is more need for quiet attention during the blessing, and when the notices are being read. We hear complaints that the notices cannot be heard. But are we really doing our part? Even if all of us are not interested in hearing the notices, we should remember that there are others who may be seriously inconvenienced by our thoughtlessness in keeping them from hearing. If after doing our part it is still difficult to hear we feel sure that the Home Department will devise some method to relieve the situation.

ALUMNAE NEWS

Mrs. William Watkins (Kate Woodbridge) acting president, entertained the Norfolk chapter of the Farmville Alumnae Association at her home December 13. Tables were laid for bridge and while some played, the rest, with the aid of clothespins, toothpicks and other essentials made and dressed dolls to represent college faculty members and celebrities. The prize was awarded to Miss Catherine Kemp, whose masterly interpretation of Mrs. Jamison won by a small margin over a clever representation of Miss Maude Taliaferro. Others gaining honorable mention, were: Misses Jennie Tabb, and Brownie Taliaferro and Dr. Jarman. (Dr. Jarman's cigar was his most impressive and recognizable feature.)

Miss Marshall Greathead won the prize for the top score at bridge.

At the close of the social meeting, officers for the coming year were elected. They are:

President—Miss Roberta Hodgkin.
Vice-Pres.—Miss Catherine Kemp.
Secretary—Miss Helen Looney.
Cor. Sec.—Miss Marshall Greathead.
Treasurer—Mrs. W. E. Cassidy.
Reporter—Miss Emily Calcott.
On January 7, the Richmond chapter of the Farmville Alumnae Association met with Mrs. R. B. Tuggle. Mrs. A. P. Forbes called the meeting to order at 4 o'clock. The work of the afternoon consisted of revising the list of resident graduates which is compiled for use in the alumnae bulletin. Plans were discussed for keeping in touch with members, representatives being appointed in the various schools of the city.

Business disposed of, a pleasant social hour followed, enlivened by reminiscences grave and gay. The chapter will meet February 14, with Miss Bessie Marshall.

WORTH-WHILE THOUGHT

One Day at a Time

Tomorrow's fate, though thou be wise,
Thou canst not tell nor yet surmise;
Pass, therefore, not today in vain,
For it will never come again.

— Omar Khayyam.

"What did you think of my last jokes?"
Editor—"Glad to know they're your last."

Boy—Look Ma! The circus has come to town. There's one of the clowns.
Ma—Hush darling! That's not a clown, that's a college boy.

In Seriousness

"We shall be glad," says the editor,
"to hear of the sickness of any of the faculty."

He said him didn't love we.
He even made we cry.
And so us threw he over
When him deserted I.

"Of all sad words for girls or men,
The saddest are these—
It's a quarter to ten."
And then she said:—
"Of all sweet words for girls or men,
The sweetest are these—Kiss me again."
And then both said:—
"Aw, you can't say anything at a Time like that."

—Gargle.

She—"They say I have a pagan body
but a puritan mind."
He—"Are you ever absent-minded?"

They sat together,
Worked together,
All semester long.
Played together,
Strolled together,
Happy as a song.

Then—
Crammed together,
Flunked together,
Wondered what was wrong.

Dr. Vincent—"What did your wife

Dr. Angina—"Didn't have a word to say."

Dr. Vincent — "Smatter, tongue-

Dr. A—"No; I put cement in her

The Shiekess—Aye, Rodolph, sure thou must be a man of grit.

THE LITTLE RED SCHOOL HOUSE

What is it that just seems to naturally attract us and lead us back to those days of yore, when we were "tiny tots," and went to school in the little old school house, with the "old maid school teacher" standing threateningly over us? It is because we like to live over our childish school days and because they have seemed to slip unwillingly through our fingers in the passing years, as the sand sifts through a sieve, and the only way we have to recall them is living over our own, in fancy, the school days of others. So we see ourselves as the dunce, the tattler, the very bright boy or girl or teacher's pet.

You will truly enjoy all of this if you will come to see "The Little Red School House," given by the First Year girls in Course II, for the benefit of the Student Building in S. T. C. Auditorium, February 9th, at 8 p. m.—Admission: $1.00.

JOIN A DISCUSSION GROUP

What do we mean by honor? Should there be pledges where honor is involved? Can the honor system in our school be improved upon? Can you remain ignorant and indifferent when you are asked to take your stand on these questions? These questions and many others relating to honor were discussed last Saturday night at the discussion group.

Those present were: Frances, the Vice-President, presiding in the absence of the President who was unable to attend; the members of the Student Building Fund, the members of the Student Building Fund, the members of the Student Building Fund, the members of the Student Building Fund.

A Chinese Drama, "The Yellow Jacket," was presented by the members of the Student Building Fund.

Last Saturday night, the discussion group was held at the Student Building. The girls were very much interested and each of them left with the determination to do their best to raise the standards of honor of the girls at S. T. C. It is hoped that before many weeks the majority of the girls in school will learn how interesting these groups are, and will sign up as a member of one of them.

The Freshman Class is doing its part in fostering this movement. Four of the group leaders claim the "Rats" of M-25 as their class. The Freshman Commission got out a questionnaire of seventeen questions. If the girls are interested these questions will act as a guide for the discussion groups.

CHINESE LOVE BOAT

Did you ever see a Chinese Love Boat floating along on a sea of fancy? Did you ever hear soft-toned music wafted to you on the magic wings of a moonlit night? Did you ever see Chinese girls dancing in an oriental marketplace? Did you ever see mystery, intrigue, treachery, love?

This is Chinese Drama, abounding in subtlety and mystery. An old us civilization itself, yet always fascinatingly new. Its picturesqueness holds the eye of the artist. Its beauty grips the heart of the poet. Its music and rhythm charms the musician. Its plot fascinates and holds the interest and attention of all.

You will see, feel, and live all of this in "The Yellow Jacket," a Chinese play in the Chinese way. Saturday, January 24, at 8 p. m. in the S. T. C. Auditorium. Reserve your seats at White Drug Co. Price 50c and $1.

"VICTORIOUS VARSITY."

The Two Big V's

Haven't you heard what it's all about? Well, in case you don't know, just take a trip 'down to the Armory' almost any night after Prayers and here you'll see for yourself. We've just made up our minds that ple' S. T. C. can't have a Varsity unless it is a victorious one. The girls have been getting right down to work and every night a squad of about twenty-five, report for practice. Signals? Well, "I hope to tell the emperor of China!" They tell me that the ball whizzes by so fast that the girls on the side-lines can hardly detect its course! We're all "set" for that game with Harrisonburg on January 30th, and what's more we're "out" to win! If you don't know anything about basketball and would like to learn how to play, just come on down to the Armory and "get into the game" and we'll guarantee that you'll make a success of it.

Among those "out" for Varsity, are the following:

Forwards:—Helen Hall, Frances Jones, Elsie Gibson, Virginia Lewis, Madeline Barnes and Doris Fowlkes.

Guards:—Katherine Crowder, Gladys Poe, Elizabeth Crute, Madeline Gary, Eleanor Zacharias, Frances Volk, and Lucille Wright.

Jumping:—Centers:—Jean Mitchell, Virginia Perkins, Alice Bolesman, and Ethel Covington.

"STORY WITHOUT NAME"

"The Story Without a Name" a Paramount picture with Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno, feature in the principal roles, will be shown at the Eaco Theatre February 9th, by the Freshman Class for the benefit of the Student Building Fund.

It tells of a young inventor working for the U. S. government, who has just perfected a "deathray" machine, an invention destined to revolutionize modern warfare. The instrument has been successfully tested and the scientist is making preparation for a departure to Washington to turn over the machine to the proper officials, when something absolutely unlooked-for happens.

What? That's the question. The picture itself will have to answer for the fans. And it is said to provide as pleasant an evening's entertainment. If you are looking for something in the line of gripping adventure-romances that really entertain, by all means, see "The Story Without a Name."

RATS

Class Spirit

What is Class Spirit? We all talk about it, but do we realize what it is? The class depends on our spirit, and our spirit is what we make it.

You ask what you can do? Remember the words of Shakespeare, "I hold the world, but as the world, a stage, where every man must play a part." This holds true for us. It is you that the class is depending on; not any certain one, but every one.

Class Spirit first of all, means supporting our class. We can do this by paying our class dues, co-operating with our officers, and doing the things we are asked to do. Another way of showing class spirit, is by backing the faculty. They are here to help us, but without our help, they can do nothing.

It goes without saying, that we must work for our teams in all forms of athletics. A team that knows it is backed by the class, can do twice as much as it could otherwise.

One thing which we sometimes forget when speaking of class spirit, is studying, and after all that is the main thing in our college life. We are here chiefly for educational purposes. By raising the standard along this life, we are in truth, showing our spirit.

Come on, Freshmen, let's show them what we can do. We can make our class "The Class." Why not do it? We've got the members, we've got the talent, we've got the pep. Why not show it?

RATS

The "Friend"

The word "friend," is easy to spell and easy to say, but in my estimation, the word itself stands for more in life to each individual than any other six-lettered word in the English language. And yet, the word itself in its real definition, means to you just exactly what you make it—nothing more and nothing less. If you don't value its meaning it is because you, yourself, have not experienced the wholesome thrill of being a true, everyday friend.

In my estimation, there could probably be about three types of friends—the "sunny day friend," the "occasional friend," and the "friend." The "sunny day friend" will "stick to you" as long as things run smoothly and you seem successful in your attempts of various kinds. The "occasional friend" is one who claims to be your friend at times, but then, at other times, she hardly seems to know you. She is the kind that is always "having a crush on someone." Her friendliness comes in leaps and bounds.

The third type of friends mentioned is the one friend that "sticks by you" when the "sunny day friend" vanishes as the shadows fall and the "occasional friend" disappears as the occasions go. The friend that is a friend, is one who meets all your varying moods with understanding, and values you for exactly what you're worth.

It is nice and easy to speak of "the other fellow" as being a good friend, but have you ever tested your own worth as a friend to others? That means an "understanding of misunderstandings" and willingness to neglect your own pleasures for the benefit of others. To have many friends, we must be thoughtful and friendly to all. Be worthy of the friends you claim.

The following stanzas, entitled: "A Prayer," by Frank Dempster Sherman, furnish a good thought in connection with friends:

"It is my joy in life to find
 At every turning of the road
 The strong arm of a comrade kind
 To help me onward with my load.

And since I have no gold to give,
 And love alone must make amends,
 My only prayer is—while I live,
 God make me worthy of my friends."

Weekly Program

AT THE EACO THEATRE—WEEK JAN. 26th-31st, 1925

MON.—"BRAWN OF THE NORTH." A special production with Strongheart, the wonder dog of the world. Wolves—a famine mad pack circling in the snow. Facing them, guarding a lost baby, a great dog who had to make good for the sake of a demented woman. This is the classic of snowland. Do not miss it.—Also PATHE NEWS.

TUE.—TOM MIX and TONY the wonder horse in Zane Grey's "THE LAST OF THE DUANES." A tale of Texas rangers in the flaming West when life hung on a hair-trigger. One of the BEST Mix pictures ever made. On this night, we will start: "WOLVES OF THE NORTH," a wonderful new serial, that was made in the frozen North, featuring William Duncan.

WED.—COLLEEN MOORE and a big cast in "THE HUNTRESS." The refreshingly original story of an Indian-bred white girl who, yearning for a husband kidnapped the first youth to cross her path. The rollicking tale of a feminine go-getter and her relentless man-hunt.—Also AESOP FABLE.

THUR. & FRI.—"DANTE'S INFERNO."—One of the year's Big Productions. A spectacle of drama and beauty based on the classic of literature. Fantastic and dramatic beyond anything ever before attempted. A revelation of the possibilities of motion picture photography. There is a modern story combined with the classic story. "If there is a Hell, this, my Curse, will take you there," wrote the victim. See what happened. Read the poem, see the picture.—Also Comedy and orchestra music each night.

SAT.—VIOLETA DANA in "THE SOCIAL CODE" from the story "To Whom it May Concern," by Rita Weiman. A photoplay of Fashion, Folly and Passion. The story of a society butterfly's soul. A drama of love and lies and frenzied pleasure. Babs wouldn't miss a new dance step or a new frock or a new kiss for the world. And you will miss a good picture if you miss this one.—Also episode of "The Iron Man."—Matinee at 3:30.

ADMISSION—S. T. C. Girls: Thur. and Fri. 35 cents, other days 20 cents.

A TRIBUTE TO THE FRESHMAN TEAM

Come hither, and help me, O Muses!
A poem I wish to write!
But I cannot think of a subject,
Though I sat up half the night!

No sooner have I spoken
When a voice bids in my ear
"Write of the Freshman Team
And the work it's done this year."

"Why, of course, what could be better?"

I ask as I begin,
You a liknow, no doubt, of the two games it's won,
And the others it's going to win?

At the first game, on Thanksgiving,
The Suphs put up a brave fight;
But when the laurels were handed out
They went to the "Red and White."

In the next game of the season,
Just as the one before Though the Sophomores played their very best,
The Freshman topped the score!

Then here's to Miss Graham, our re-eree,
And to "Zac" and the rest of her crew, Keep it up Freshmen!—The Red and the White!"

Has infinite faith in you!

Dr. Dulittle—Office Hours:
7:30 A. M. - 9:00 P. M.

Of course one of us always are, perhaps a few of us really can be, to some of us it is an impossibility, but if you happened to peep behind the scenes into the office of Dr. Dulittle, Friday night, you at least left the auditorium a little better satisfied. Dr. Dulittle had just perfected his "get fat" or "thin" medicine and it was being administered by Nurse Updike with complete success upon his dissatisfied fat and thin patients, Miss Elizabeth Jarman and Eleanor Zacharias. But the novelty of their new dimensions soon wore off and back they came to the famous doctor to be re-changed.—And then the tragedy,—for instant death was the result of the second administration of the patent medicine by Nurse Updike.

MORAL: Be Satisfied.

RATS NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS

We have all made resolutions,
Some of them were kept, I'll say,
But the most of them were broken,
For 'tis much the easier way.
Now the New Year is before us,
And it's up to us to make
Resolutions—good and strong ones,
That we simply will not break.
Maybe you have been a loafer,
And have never really known
Just exactly how it felt
To get a lesson all your own;
Maybe you have been a girl
Who thought it mattered not a jot,
Whether you should help support
Your own dear Class or not.
There are some—yes, quite a lot
Who never go to Prayers,
But think it so much better
To make a fuss upstairs.
Some just seem to never care,
They simply drag along,
And seem to say in every step
That all the world is wrong,
So let's begin the New Year,
Let each one of us say:
She'll strive to do her very best
In all that comes her way.

ALUMNAE NEWS FOR 1935

Kitty Morgan, a degree girl of S. T. C. some ten years ago, will assume the "old" position as singing teacher. She has Mary Alice Blanton as her assistant. Well, this isn't a fairy tale, but for all that.

S. T. C. is glad to announce that Miss Louise McCormick, who starred in "The Yellow Jacket," will appear as a leading character in the Lyceum number. We all had our dreams of a wonderful gym,
And we're going to have it for sure,
Such a gym as our most optimistic of
dreams

Miss Eula Harris has been given a "combination job" of dressmaker and basketball coach of the newly erected "Prospect Seminary." A place where our basketball games can be played,
And who knows what victories there'll be?
For a better gymnasium for athletic games,

The following girls have contributed one dollar each to pay for a few of the remaining "unpaid for" bricks of the Student Building: Virginia Perkins, Elizabeth Arnold, Elsie Gibson, Brook Hugh, Alice Wiley, Marion Chewing and Jean Musser.

The Sophomore Class of ten years ago has lost the championship for having the most old maids within its number. Virginia Vincent has recently taken the "fatal step."

Six dollars has been received from Eleanor Zacharias for her unpaid Freshman Class dues. A note attached explained that the extra four dollars was for interest.

THE NEW GYM

Well, this isn't a fairy tale, but for all that.

ful gym,
And we're going to have it for sure,
Such a gym as our most optimistic of

Had never even pictured before! A place where our basketball games can be played,
And who knows what victories there'll be?
For a better gymnasium for athletic
games,

'Twould be quite a hard thing to see

SOPHOMORES OBSERVE CLASS DAY

GREEN AND WHITE WAVE ON HIGH

Are the Sophomores awake? I'll say they are! There never was a class day at S. T. C. such as they celebrated. Freshman, Juniors, Seniors and the Faculty, all opened their eyes, ears, and mouths in surprise and amazement that for a whole day so much pep could be shown.

From the time the Sophomores came into breakfast with their green and white, until the last strains of the orchestra died away at eleven o'clock, the green and white waved on high.

Chapel was far brighter than usual with the green and white filling the front rows. Things did not lag for one minute. Everyone was glad they had gone to dinner for an addition to the usual Tuesday desert, green and white mints graced the occasion. They made the tables look mighty pretty but that wasn't all, the taste sort'a left you wishing everyday was Sophomore Class Day.

The Yellow Jacket.

Makes Big Hit

The Yellow Jacket was presented by the Dramatic Club, January 24th, in the S. T. C. auditorium under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler. It was in every detail, "a Chinese Play, in a Chinese Way." The audience sat spell-bound for three hours in an incense-laden atmosphere, easily won to the moods of perfect actors. Chinese costumes of being very concrete and prosaic in their acting lent an exotic charm to every scene. The costumes and draperies were rich with dashing brilliance of oriental splendor. Every character was also so vivid and real that it is agreed that each actor was a star.

The tremendous success of The Yellow Jacket is largely due to the direction of Miss Wheeler. Miss Wheeler not only has native ability for direction, but also has an extensive knowledge of Chinese characters and costumes. None other than this aptitude on the part of the actors would have produced such characters as the dexterous, indifferent property man, and the smooth-tongued considerate chorus. Others of the cast were equally realistic. The arrogant, ingenious conspirators were horrible. The maidens bewitched all, some with their fickle playfulness, others with their goodness and purity. The hero and heroine were the hero and heroine of the ages, preserving faithful and at last, united. In this cast they were worthy of the symbolic The Yellow Jacket. In all, the play was the epitome of Chinese drama.

MISS GRAHAM ENTERTAINS THE ATHLETIC COUNCIL

Monday nights come and Monday nights go but the Athletic Council wishes that Monday night, January 26 could have gone on forever. This most "August" body, which controls our Athletic affairs, was entertained by Miss Blanche Graham at supper in the Tea Room on the above mentioned date. It was what one calls a scrumptious banquet.

The Sophomores thought the Student Government girls needed a rest from ushering and went to their aid. Again the auditorium was brightened for in order to get the most possible enjoyment out of the concert, the entire class sat together.

The climax, however, was the best of all. Never has there been a peppy—peppy party at S. T. C. The orchestra was beyond compare, the stunts were most original; when before has there been a dancing contest at S. T. S.? After a great deal of hard thought the prize was awarded to Misses Katharine Montague and Rebecca Burgess, as the best couple on the floor. Miss Bessie Meade Riddle charmed her audience with an Egyptian dance given in true Egyptian style. The refreshments—well—we had rather not make you hungry. Never did eleven o'clock come so soon. It was pretty good.

Come on Sophs, let's do it again.

THE PLAY

The Talk of the Day

Sh! Hush.—Don't tell anybody—but there is going to be another play! You gap in amazement and wonder how such an unusual thing can be accomplished. Never mind how! just wait and see what professionals the Sophomores turn out.

If you have any doubts they will vanish when you see with what ease each member of the cast assumes her role, and for the time being actually live her part.

There is a character that will interest everybody. The Faculty will see themselves reproduced in a practical and efficient college professor. Those whose idols are foot ball heroes will have a chance to see one who will delight their eyes. There is everything from broncho-busting on the plains of Texas to society life in the city, conducted on a multi-million scale.

Come and see yourself or your favorite character in the most thrilling of dramas portrayed by an unusual cast from your own four walls. So buy your ticket before they are all sold.

Hurry! Hurry!! Hurry!!!

Wait, I almost forgot the most momentous factor (at least to the eyes of some) that of love; there will be plenty. I couldn't leave you in the dark on such imperious subject—and I'll tell you this much, that it ends: "And they all lived happy ever after."

What more can be desired?

The play will be presented in the S. T. C. auditorium on Saturday night, February 14th. Admission will be 20 cents and of course the proceeds are for the Student Building Fund.

THE DANCE

The inevitable has happened. Boys at a S. T. C. dance!

When one good thing comes—many seem to come in a rush. A new dining room—a new gymnasium—and a big ball to celebrate it on Friday night, February the sixth.

The Farmville Alumnae have planned great things for that night. An out-of-town orchestra will furnish the music. Punch will be served during the intermission in the Student Building reception hall.

Members of the Home Department and friends of the school will chaperon. It is hoped that many out-of-town guests will come to enjoy S. T. C.'s first big dance.

This dance is for our enjoyment. Every effort is being made to make it a success. Should we not show our appreciation to the town people and the Home Department by co-operating in every way? It's up to us, girls, to set the example, so that each year the school will be allowed the same privilege.

RAT CAPS IN FASHION

AT S. T. C.

The second, third and fourth professional classes voted unanimously, (at their last meetings,) to install in our college a rule requiring rats to wear rat-caps. The Freshman President was notified of the fact and caps have already been ordered for the Freshmen.

The following is important: 1—Every rat must wear her cap every school day from 4:15 to 7:30, and all day Saturday. 2—Rat caps must be worn in the proper spirit. 3—Rats should consider this a privilege rather than a penalty.

All right, Freshmen! Come on and be good sports and show the upper-classmen that you've caught the spirit of S. T. C.

EDITORIAL

Has knocking become a fad or a habit in this school? From the prevalence of it, one would think it the latest fad. Let us hope that this is true, for fads soon fade away and that's what we want knocking to do! If it's a habit, it is certainly the worst kind of a one. How can we expect to accomplish the things for which S. T. C. stands, if some people are perpetually talking about and against every movement that is put forward in school and every girl who has any office or who is trying to do her part? The slackers are usually the knockers. If this holds true, then the majority of us are being slackers for the halls at school have become veritable gossip stands. Going from one group to another you will most naturally find them discussing everything of current interest, but it is very seldom you find them picking out the good points or boosting a thing. Always the same fault-finding attitude, that picking-to-pieces of everything and everybody. Girls, it isn't getting us anywhere. Why not change our attitude and be boosters instead of knockers? Back things up! Help make S. T. C. the place it should be and leave our gossiping out of the school life, we'll find it more wholesome.

Sportsmanship has become our by-word this year. Have we truly learned its meaning? If we have, the time to show it is now. The basketball season opens Saturday night. Are we who are not on the team, going to let them be the only good sports? The time for us to do, is to show, by our actions, all the way through, that we are an indispensable part of the team. Don't let them leave to play a game without yells ringing in their ears and the good wishes of every single student behind them. When they return, whether victorious or otherwise, show them you have thought about them, backed them up, though not on the spot, and are now thrilled to death over the good game they played, and happy to have them back. Let's make our part a real part, and remember:

"It ain't the runs nor goals from field, nor the tricks that they can play,

But the close co-operation that makes them win the day.

It ain't the individual, nor the six as a whole,

But the everlasting team-work of every blooming soul.

(Apologies to Kipling.)

ABSENT

The days to me are ever divine
Save when you are gone away.
Then the world seems to linger and dally along
As though it had lost its taste for a song,
And the days seem dull and gray

The evenings—ah, they are beyond
My power of speech and all—
When the sun has fled to the heart of the West.
And all of earth seeks some heart for its nest,
And I listen in vain for your call.

COTILLION CLUB

Cotillion Club issued bids to the following girls:

HAVE YOU TAKEN INVENTORY?

Look over your Sophomore "book of personal efforts" and check up the following questions:

1—Have I gone to every class meeting when it was possible for me to go?

2—When I go, do I make it a point to be cheerful?

3—Have I offered my services to any officer of any committee?

4—Do I keep on friendly terms with my class-mates?

Question No. 1—40 per cent; No. 2—20 per cent; No. 3—20 per cent; No. 4—20 per cent. Your dividends depend on you!

DEBATE

The Freshman-Sophomore Debate will be held Monday at 6:45 in the auditorium. Admission ten cents. Benevolent Student Building.

The "Light" reports that some warnings may be sent in the near future, unless you mend your ways.

THE ROTUNDA

1975—IT'S EFFECT ON S. T. C.

"For I dipped into the future just as far as eye could see."

It was a warm lazy day just the kind to take you soaring in the misty blue skies. Things around me became hazy. I was in a different land—at least I thought so, until I inquired and found it was Farmville, the year 1975. Was this flourishing city Farmville? As I stood there I noticed that while traffic was heavy, it was not in the least congested. Looking more closely, I found that revolving streets were one of the reasons for this. Walking on, I saw an airplane station. The airplanes were not the kind I had seen before, these being larger with mechanism that enabled the plane to make what seemed to me uncanny time. I looked at a time card and found that for the trifling sum of $1.13 excursions to California, via the Snappy Service Airplane Co., were run every Sunday.

Just then, I saw something that nearly took my breath away. It was a snake dance composed of Sophomores of the year 1925. But it couldn't be—this was 1975—fifty years had elapsed since the last time I saw the members of our class, and all these girls were young and active. I hailed Virginia Vincent, our class president and asked her the meaning of all this. Imagine my surprise when she calmly replied: "Oh yes, this is a reunion of our class. How is it we're so young? Why you are an old timer! It is merely a matter of monkey glands. Run over to the Infirmary and get Dr. Fields to fit you out with some." A little bewildered, I obeyed orders and came forth a half hour later as young and spry as when I first came to S. T. C.

Since I was class reporter, I began to wonder if a little publicity wouldn't be a good thing for this puppy class of ours. Accordingly, I went to The Rotunda office to see what could be done. The Editor-in-Chief informed me that she would see that the notice was what I desired. Later, assembled in the auditorium, this notice was broadcast by Radio.

"Sophomores of 1925, take the first airplane to S. T. C. Great time in store at class reunion."

While waiting for the rest of the class to come, we went sight-seeing. You might ask why—but it was a new place to us. A few of us wandered past the massive stone building occupied by the Chamber of Commerce. Here in bright lights was the sign: "Walk slow and see our City. Run and see our jail."

Why I thought this sign applied to automobiles! I soon found that L. B. Cornwell and Mary Lion Perry had invented shoes that would take you without the slightest exertion on your part, wherever you willed. You had only to press a button on the slipper and you would think you were speed-lightning. Having purchased a pair, on we rambled.

Presently, we came upon Miss Stubbs who was boarding an airplane for Mars. She told us it was only a matter of fifteen minutes to get there and invited us all to go. So in we jumped. The airplane landed with a thud. Let me say here, that Mars is an up-to-date place. We spent a pleasant half-hour in the home of the president. I was quite startled to find that the mansion was heated by means of bottled sunshine, but then I remembered it was in the laboratory stage when I was a Soph. at S. T. C.

When we reached school we were greeted by the news that all the members of the Sophomore Class 1925, had arrived. It was a strange banquet that was served that night. All of us filed out on the Campus. The maids served little rubber tubes which we stuck in the air and drew in our food.

When did I ever taste such turkey, cranked potatoes or olives! But I must stop recalling these memories for even now it makes me nervous.

After dinner we assembled in the auditorium. Here an electric piano lent into the most magic of music—"What's the matter with J. man?" cries of "Speech, Speech!" rent the air and Dr. Jarman arose and addressed his girls. Never did he seem more lovable. It was marvel of an oration and is now published by McMillin & Co. The class then appropriated money for the erection of a Statue of Dr. Jarman. It also appropriated money for a new dormitory which was to be the exact size of the Woodworth Building. Miss Burchard, our class man, was greeted by a storm of applause. After her speech, in which he told us of her work as a Physical Education supervisor in the United States and Europe, assisted by Eva McKinney. We found her the same sympathetic class man we had always known her to be. We had Kitty Montague paint her portrait which we then presented to the school. Kitty was the sensation of the present world, being able to paint a likeness of anyone by merely hearing the person's name. It was rumored that she had found the foot of the rainbow and used its colors instead of oil paints.

The class was then ready to hear the news of its members.

Virginia Vincent was making quite a hit in Hades, the capital of Mars, with her music. Virginia had become famous by playing with her toes rather than her hands.

Madeline McMurdo and Elizabeth Westbrook, were Editors of The Jazzbox Hourly, while Cornelia Dickenson had completely revolutionized the commercial world with her new model typewriter. It required no dictation—merely press a button labeled commercial or social and a perfectly worded business or social letter would come forth.

Emily Lawrence was the owner of the fashionable dress-maker's establishment with a sign on the front that read—"Come Here For Fits—Epileptic or Otherwise."

Sue Roper had invented a device by means of which you could not oversleep. You had only to set something that resembled a watch and presto—at the desired hour you were up automatically dressed.

Louise Deans was Warden at Sing Sing. Her experience on the Student Government was of great aid.

Bessie Meade Riddle was a criminal lawyer of inter-planetsimal fame.

Larry Hale Deesby had become famous as the owner of Spare Ribs—the channels—as you have done—then you thought you had a winner at the Kentucky Derby.

Helen Crisman was the patron of class, the class of '26, a famous one.

the home of cheerleaders and morose. Liz Mosely had been acting on crushes, their cause and prevention. She was missionary in the field and doing great good. Margaret Turpin accompanied her and took up collection.

Pat Cowherd has become famous as a beauty specialist. It is said she has invented an instrument by which the homeliest were made beautiful in the twinkling of an eye.

In the midst of excitement I awoke with a start. What was that I heard? "Miss Maynard, kindly sit up and pay attention to the class. If you need sleep, you may retire."

So it had been a dream after all! If the walls it happens in the best regulated classes.

SCHOOLETTES

Misses Elizabeth Gabbill, Marian Burchard and Julia Alexander, visited the school last week.

The discussion groups meet tonight 7:30-8:30. Join a group if you have not done so. It is never too late, as a different subject is discussed each time.

The fourth year high school class in music appreciation, is making a study of noted composers. From time to time an account of some of these composers will appear in The Rotunda.

Patronize the Sophomore Beauty Shoppe. Open every Saturday morning from 9:30 to 12:30. Be made beautiful. See the Bulletin Board for prices.

CONGRATULATIONS, FRESHM'N Freshmen, we're proud of you. We have been suspecting for several months, that you could do just about everything and now our suspicions are quite confirmed. Your issue of THE ROTUNDA conclusively proves that you have originality, initiative, and executive ability in abundance.

If you continue to direct these admirable characteristics in the proper manner—as you have done—then you will do a lot to help make S. T. C. the place we all want it to be, and your place.

LYCEUM NUMBER

The Russian Balalaika Orchestra, with Della Baker, the noted lyric coloratura soprano, entertained a large audience Tuesday night with what is considered by many, the best concert of the season.

Miss Baker obtained her vocal training in our own country and has appeared with many of our leading orchestras, among them: New York Symphony Orchestra, and Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. At present, Miss Baker is making records exclusively for the Victor Phonograph Co.

Miss Baker completely captivated her audience with her beautiful voice and charming personality. Encore after encore, called her back and each time she was more delightfully pleasing than before.

The program of the Balalaika Orchestra was so arranged as to please even the most fastidious audience. Each number of the orchestra was complete master of his instrument and played with the ease and skill that one finds only in artists of superior training and ability. We are exceedingly fortunate in securing such a well-known company.

Forwards, Jones, Capt.; Hall, Jumping Center—Perkins.
Side Center—Reid
Guard, Poe, Gary.

The substitutes will be Zacharias, Centre, Boisson and Tolson.

Frances Jones was elected Captain of the team. The team will be accompanied by Manager, Enla Harris and Coach Graham Miss Inez I. Walls, of Petersburg will referee and Mr. Wright, of Harrisonburg, will umpire.

At the last meeting of the Athletic Council the Monogram designed by Julia A. Alexander, B. S., S. T. C., 1924, was accepted as the official emblem to be awarded by the association.

The second series of inter-class basketball games will be played the first part of February.

LOST OPPORTUNITIES

Self-spoilers, listen! I am the spirit of your Lost Opportunities. I knocked but each of you was too busy gossiping to hear me. I came to you in a story—I tried to show you that Cleopatra—the first flapper—did not enjoy her conquest. I tried to make you see that Natchie was not the ideal woman either although she got a very wise husband.

Next, I came to you in your English classes. I tried to give you beautiful phrases to resuscitate your starved language. But your "one" chased my "perfectly enchanting" away. You heard me not.

Sadly I watched over you in Rural sociology. There I placed a well-built road to a happy life as a farmer's help-mate. You packed and got ready but I turned off at the first cross-road to the lights of the city.

In Reading, I gave you a chance to learn how to flash a scornful eye at mere man and make him cringe—how to robe your words with sweetness and steelness so that he dare not listen to the siren's call.

In Gym, I gave you a Fountain of Youth. Here you could build your body into just the type desired. Here you could gain that knowledge that keeps one ever beautiful and young—Venus' secrets were revealed to you.

All these and much more, I offered you, but you were deaf and blind. Your Sophomore year is rapidly going. I clothe myself in sack-cloth and ashes, and weep over you, my Children—for you see no cause to weep. No, not now!

Just a box of candy,
Just an ice-cream cone,
Make our bill, at Gilliam's,
Bring us to a loan.

EDITORIAL

DO you do your own thinking? Have you an answer ready to meet that constant query: "What is your opinion?" Every day, we are called upon to show by word or action, how we stand on certain questions. It may be a matter involving our Campus, or a world-wide issue, but, are you ready to meet it? Too often, the tendency is to accept the consensus of opinion, and give our own lazy reasoning powers a still longer slumber period. Still, some day will come "the moment to decide." How will it be met? By the flip of a coin? By blind trial and error? By depending upon someone else's more nimble wit? By following where many have already trod? Such methods make one shudder—yet, how often are they, and others still worse, employed? Wake Up! Every day brings brain-training problems, in solving which the mind is strengthened and prepared for further work. Of late, S. T. C. students have been given the opportunity to attend discussion groups where questions of moment were treated. How many of us have seized and made the best of this chance? Nothing is better than to thrash a thing out, singly or in groups. These meetings should be a challenge and an inspiration to all. Come on. Let us become acquainted with ourselves, and put our brains, too long resting in sluggish acquiescence, thru some lively mental gymnastics.

THERE is a house which each of us is called upon to build. Each builds in his own way, and by his own plan, thruout a life-time. How will you build your character-house? Will it be on wide, spacious, beautiful lines? Will its foundation be firm? Will its walls be tall and strong? Will its vistas be straight and broad? Each day sees some new bit completed. It is easy to add to, but hard to alter. It is impossible to tear down and rebuild when once it has taken on concrete form. Whether it will be a palace or a hovel, depends upon the attributes of its builder, not upon his purse. Two thousand years ago, a Man of Sorrows, who had no place to lay His head, built up a mighty temple, beautiful beyond compare. In the fifteenth century a Genoan, constructed a light-house which drew others to and opened up the new world of America. In our own generation, a Virginian, with a will to "make the world safe for Democracy," nearly completed a hall, immense enough to hold the Nations of the Earth. Such builders have left models for us. Thus inspired, every day should see all our powers bent upon the construction of our character-houses. And they will be noble structures if, with a wealth of faith and ideals, a ba king of perseverance, and the tools of intelligence and education, we earnestly set to work.

PERSONALS

Miss Ann Smith spent last week end with her parents at Roxbury.

Misses Kate Trent and Eleonore Pierce visited in Richmond last week-end.

Week-end guests at S. T. C. from Randolph-Macon Woman's College, were Misses Alma Arps, Mildred Hudgins, Dora Lee Gray, Dorothy Richardson, and Louise Anderson.

Miss Helen Miller, who has been in the infirmary, is again able to be out and attend classes.

Miss A. C. Bledsoe was the guest of her niece, Miss Ruth Clement, the week-end of January 30th.

Miss Dorothy Wetzel had as her guest last week-end, Miss Charlotte Bates.

The girls from S. T. C. who attended Mid-Winter at V. M. I. were Misses Gertrude Quinn, Mary Tyler and Claudia Anderson.

NEVER SAY "DIE"

The school spirit here is much better than it has been, and its going to keep on getting better; but are we progressing much when we are asked who won the game Friday, and say with a sigh and groan, "Harrisonburg, 20 something to 30 something!" Is that good school spirit? Of course you wouldn't use that tone if Harrisonburg had come here, and we had won. Why can't we show the same spirit among ourselves, as we would with company? And we certainly are not helping our team by grumbling because Harrisonburg beat them. No, we aren't and neither are we putting ourselves in a good humor to receive Harrisonburg when she comes here. Aren't we proud enough of S. T. C. to set the sky as the limit and never stop reaching?

Teacher—Now Elmer, how many poles are there?

Weekly Program

AT THE EACO THEATRE—WEEK FEB. 9th-14th.

MONDAY—Antonio Moreno and Agnes Ayres in "THE STORY WITHOUT A NAME." A Paramount Picture. This story was a $5,000,000 in a story contest. Here is the first great radio romance. A super-thriller by the author of "Manhandled" and "Empty Hands." Also Pathe News.—Proceeds from this picture are for the Freshman Class of the S. T. C.—Matinee at 4 o'clock.

TUESDAY—Alice Lake and a most excellent cast in "RED LIGHTS." Here is a mysterious, gripping, absolutely enjoyable picture that you will place among the films that have thrilled you most. It is the tensest, most satisfying mystery thriller you ever saw. Also 3rd episode of "Wolves of the North."

WEDNESDAY—"IT IS THE LAW." A mighty mystery melo-drama, enacted by a sensational cast. From the stage play of Oliver Reed, when a man collect another man's life as his debt? The law says he can. If you doubt that this can be done, see "It is the Law," a special production.—Also Aesop Fable.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY—Gloria Swanson in her latest Paramount picture: "WOLVES OF THE NORTH." Here we have gorgeous Gloria in another great surprise role.—A flaming rose of Italy, pet of the French Foreign Legion.—More Comedy than "Manhandled."—More heart appeal than "Her Love Story." Leave it to Gloria to pick surprise roles. And what a sweet surprise this role is! Excuse us for not telling. Come and see and be conquered. This is a special production.—Also good Comedy and orchestra music.

SATURDAY—Jack Holt in "EMPTY HANDS," a Paramount picture. A drama of man and woman, the man a product of out-door-life, the woman bred in luxuries of city life, who find themselves lost in the Northern wilderness,—empty-handed.—From the popular novel by Arthur Stringer.—Also episode 13 of the "Iron Man." Matinee at 3:30.

ADMISSION—to S. T. C. girls: 20 cents to each show except Thur. & Fri.—Thur. & Fri. 25 cents.

ALUMNAE NEWS

The Farmville Chapter of the Association of Alumnae has had several committees busy with plans for increasing the funds for the Student Building. A benefit card party will be given on the evening of February 10, at the home of Miss Mary Jackson, and Mrs. Barrye Wall. Hand-made handkerchiefs are being prepared for a sale in the spring. The "Old Family Album" add the dance in the new gymnasium, have proved very effective and enjoyable money-makers in the past week.

Richard Eggleston Cunningham, son of the late Dr. John Cunningham, second president of Farmville State Normal School, was married on January 17, to Miss Imogen Gordon, of Richmond, Va.

Mrs. George Maupin Wonycott, of Portsmouth, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Margaret Macon, to James Holt Newsome, formerly of Emporia, and now of Portsmouth. The marriage will take place in February.

Miss Margaret Parker Lassiter, of Class 1919, died January 25th, at Johns-Hopkins Hospital.

The Literary Digest of January 17, copies from the Norfolk Lyric this poem by Miss Josephine Johnson:

Playthings

I played with edged tools
And they cut my fingers,
But I can never endure dull safety again
After their keenness.

I played with fire
And it burnt me and seared me,
But after its flashing beauty—
Rapture
That recompensed pain—
Everything else is dead.

I played with you
And you took my heart in your hands and broke it to pieces, Laughing.
But oh . . . !
How stupid and clumsy the fingers that gather the fragments.
Striving to piece them together!
They mend what you broke?
The fools!

FACULTY NEWS

Dr. Jarman Attends Mission Conference.

Dr. Jarman attended the Foreign Mission Conference which met in Washington, from January 28 to February 2. That great body of 5000 was made-up of representatives of most of the North American Protestant Denominations and also many foreign representatives, especially missionaries from the foreign fields. President Coolidge in his address to this great body, said that it was the most important gathering of mission workers since 1888.

Mr. T. A. McCorkle spent the week-end at Lexington with his mother, who has been ill.

Mr. J. P. Wynne, was in Richmond last week-end.

Miss Wheeler entertained the Dramatic Club at tea Saturday afternoon from 4:30 to 6.

Freshie No. 1—Go get the listerine, quick.

Freshie No. 2—Why?

Freshie No. 1—I've just caught a little black and white animal for biology and he's got halitosis.

HAIL THE FARMVILLE TEAM

Hail the team, the Farmville Team!
The pride of S. T. C.,
Full of vim and pep that leads to victory.

We will stand behind you
While you make a walk-away.
Up and at 'em, Farmville Team.
And claim the Victory!

Chorus:—
Hip! Hoo-ray! for Farmville Team!
It's the best that we have seen!
Up Farmville, on Farmville, on to Victory!

And no matter what the test,
We all know that you're the best!
Our Defender now, you bring a Victory.

(Music and words composed by—Mary Booker.)

JOKES

Mary Rives—Anne since we have to change the subject of our paper, what are you going to write on?
Anne C.—On paper.

"Next time swallow'em, 'n don't be holdin' the game u."

Raging Owner—I'll have you arrested for trespassing when you quit swimming in my pool.

MY ALMA MATER

A sheet alone, how like an eye,
Leading here and there to find
The highest flowers and drop them all
Into the Heart's waiting it will.

Many souls, re-membered there,
Which day by day are taught the Truth
And day by day grow in the Love,
That is the Spirit of the Home.

The Open Door leads every daughter
Of the rushing world to come Into its Strength-imparting arms
And thus to seek and thus to share
Strength of Body, Soul and Mind.

Many windows bid the Light
That comes from books to enter in
And touch the depths of every Soul.

Oh! would that I could make a wish
And it came true, I'd wish to be Just like my Alma Mater.

BRAIN-DROPS

Editor's note: Realizing the tremendous power of their minds, the writers of this column have finally been induced to share the fruits of their genius with our readers. We have been recently advised that these accomplished authorities are at present working frantically to complete their new book "The Way Out," which is a guide book to aid S. T. C.-ites to find their way out of their clothes when disrobing after high ball.

Helpful Hints for Everybody

It would be most advantageous to have a sending station at the home table and receiving sets at each hostess' plate so that Miss Shelton might broadcast the many notices thru-out the vastness of the dining room after each meal.

How to get COLD in hot weather.—
(1) Sit in a draught and catch it. (2) Try to imagine what you made on your last test.

How to get HOT in cold weather.—
Wait until someone has borrowed your one and only dress without YOUR permission and you have a date.

Poetic Particles

An innumerable thing is the gosh.
Worn often to keep out the snow slush.
It flaps at the top
With a merry "flip-flop"
And trips up its fair owner, by gosh.

By Way of Suggestion

We heard that an orange Duster was presented recently to a prominent member of the Senior Class. All she needs now is the automobile.

Do you wonder that some one has not introduced a dictaphone into our midst? We cannot help but feel that it would be convenient to carry to classes so that it might imbibe the lecture verbatim. Then, it would be a matter of utter simplicity to let it pour forth its store of knowledge before a test.

Has it ever occurred to you that the human organism may finally consist wholly and solely of brain? Twentieth century minds are astounding the world. If you don't believe it, look around at S. T. C. Such development is increasing their profound avoirdupois. The market is flooded with labor-saving devices. Then, how soon will the human race lose possession of its hands and feet? Did we hear some one sigh? Well, stop over-exercising your mind studying for the Faculty and don't ride in the family Ford over much and maybe your pedal extremities will be saved.

ALONE

Alone!
"Alone" is that Lonely-solitary-solo and all these words in tandem saying, "Don't forget to play pleasantly upon my chair;
I've placed upon the table
my share upon the table."

Oh! how the pages of my books
And rest upon the margin
I draw the better story and more
The sheets of paper
I scatter about upon the book and away upon the curtains they fall upon the empire and sing about the past.

I gather them together to send them into the world
And, smiling, know that one will touch a saddened heart and make it glad.

One will dry a tear, one will leave a hope
Deep in the depths of a care-worn soul;
Mortals will wonder at the work but never know they are my thoughts.
No one is happier than I, and Truly, when I close my thoughts,
I cannot be ALONE.

BLUE RIDGE

PROPAGANDA

A PARTY IN TEA ROOM TO AROUSE INTEREST

Under the auspices of the Blue Ridge Club, a most attractive party was given, in the tea room, Saturday, February 7, to the presidents of the organizations of the college. The purpose of this gathering was to arouse interest in the Blue Ridge Conference, and if the Student Body could have witnessed the occasion, our cottage at Blue Ridge would surely have to be enlarged before June. Everyone, after hearing the talks made by Misses Howard and Crisman, wanted to go to Blue Ridge at once.

If there is any girl who wants to know more of the conference, anyone who has ever attended Blue Ridge, will be delighted to tell you of it because it is a subject about which one loves to talk. Let's find out about it and have the Farmville cottage filled.

CROSS WORD PUZZLES

If there's one single thing in this wide world,
That can set your thoughts in a mad, mad, whirl,
It's the cross-word puzzle, for before you are thru
The solving, I'll guarantee each one of you
Will wish you had never tackled the job,
That causes your brain and your senses to throb.
At first glance it looks quite simple enough,
For surely this puzzle is only a bluff;
But you can't find a word that begins with a "C."
Means something to eat, and ends in a "D,"
And you're racking your brain,
For a word that means "sigh,"
Takes only four spaces and ends in an "I."
So you think and you think,
On through to the end,
Then you see a mistake and you rub out again,
You rub and you rub 'till you say with your sighing,
That there's one thing you're learning by this puzzle trying,
It's this—that optimists are those kind of men
Who can work cross-word puzzles with a fountain pen.

To Freshmen, Sophs, and Juniors, our fellow-students dear,
Congratulations we should wish to be extended here.
Your issues of ROTUNDA have each been very fine,
To find words to describe them should show us all a time;
But let us say, in what you do, through all the years to come,
We wish you just as great success as in this thing you've done.

MR. T. A. MCCORKLE

We'd like to send pink paper hearts
And tissue roses too,
And cunning little colored cards
With verses on—to you.

But we must keep our dignity
And hand a proper line—
So won't you take this magazine
To be your Valentine?

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The Senior Class acknowledges, with appreciation, the dedication of the Sophomore issue of the ROTUNDA. To our sister class, we pledge our loyalty and service.

JEFFERSON LITERARY SOCIETY

A regular meeting of the Jefferson Literary Society was held Wednesday night, February 4, the retiring president, Dorothy Askew, presiding. The following new officers were elected:

VALENTINE GREETINGS

Hearts are for love and on Valentine day
They bring greetings of friendship so true.

So the hearts of the girls in this Senior Class

Bring their message to each of you;
A message of kindness, of love and good cheer.

To the friends in this school whom we all hold so dear,

Dr. Jarman, who's been to us all thru our stay

As a bright gleam when darkness would shadow our way,

The Faculty—helpers when things have gone wrong,

And the world was not always a lovely glad song.

To comrades and pals in every class, too,

We wish for you skies that will always be blue,

And so we send greetings on Valentine Day.

That you'll find only gladness as you travel Life's way.

THOMAS MEIGHAN IN THE "ALASKAN" AT THE EACO

The Farmville Alumnae Association, is sponsoring the great picture "The Alaskan," featuring America's greatest film star, Thomas Meighan, on Monday, February 16, 1925. There will be a matinee and an evening performance so that no girl will miss this greatest Thomas Meighan picture ever filmed. The price for the College girls is twenty-five cents.

The story is written by James Oliver Curwood. The scene is laid in Alaska, land of ice-clad mountains and towering glaciers—Alaska, the mysterious, strange, colorful! World of the Midnight Sun! It reproduces the historic gold rush of '98. The picture opens with scenes of the stampedede that followed the discovery of gold in Alaska in the late nineties.

The Department of English of the State Teachers College Faculty think so highly of this picture, that some credit in English will be given for attendance by the students.

Come girls! You can't afford to miss it!!

ALUMNAE NEWS

The Richmond Alumnae Chapter met Wednesday, February 4, with Misses Mary and Bessie Marshall. A social hour followed the business meeting, during which, plans were discussed for a card party at the Jefferson Hotel. Delegates were appointed to go to Farmville for the exercises on Founder's Day, March 6.

An Alumnae Bulletin, the second to be issued, has been mailed this week to each alumnae whose address is known. It contains memorial tributes to Mr. B. M. Cox, articles telling of the growth of the school, the address delivered before the Association of Alumnae by Miss Carrie Sutherland, June 9, 1924, and other articles and poems.

Senior Stunts—February 24th.

It has certainly been a great pleasure to have the University of South Carolina team with us for a short time, this week. Although they arrived Friday and left Saturday, we feel in closer touch with our Southern sisters.

The Sophomores and Seniors had the honor of entertaining the team. A luncheon was given them in the tea room before the game and light refreshments were served afterwards. Then the whole school turned out to the first student dance in the new gym, and tried to make the visitors have a good time, which was accomplished by having one ourselves.

There wasn't a person there who wasn't proud of our new gym, and who "couldn't wait" to see the ball go up in center.

South Carolina, come back again! As is the Arab custom we speed the parting guest, with the hope of a quick return.

DR. GOOCH GIVES TALK

Not often has one the opportunity of hearing such an universal talk as was given before the Woman's Club on Wednesday afternoon, February 11th, by Dr. Robert Kent Gooch, associate professor of Political Science at the University of Virginia. He received the Rhodes scholarship from the University some years ago and last June, Oxford bestowed on him the Ph. D. degree, being among the first ever presented to an American.

The instant Dr. Gooch began to talk one was struck by his unique personality. The words of Mr. Mercker about Ma Pultizer, "There was a brain in his head that differed greatly from the common brains of humankind," seemed especially applicable to him. His talk was not forceful, but informal, original and clever. He developed his subject which was "Student Life at Oxford University," by describing a typical day of an Oxford undergraduate. He also explained something of the educational system of Oxford.

There is broad specialization, by which means, one chooses his subject, such as English, Philosophy, or Chemistry, and covers everything in that field from beginning to end. The tutor, whom he sees once a week, directs the student in his study, sometimes suggesting a lecture course. If the student goes once or twice and stops, deciding it is doing him no good, the tutor considers he is thinking for himself. At the end of three years, he takes examinations, the examining forces being entirely separate from the instructing forces.

Dr. Gooch closed with some illuminating generalizations about what Oxford does for a person. First, it inspires wonder—the aim of all education according to Plato; second, it evolves an understanding heart; third, it develops in one a desire to seek knowledge; fourth, it helps one to think straight; fifth, it enables one to know a good man when he sees one, and sixth, it awakes in one the love of truth. Does not this set one to thinking about the American system of education?

EDITORIAL

You Have Been Selected.—Did you ever receive an advertisement that read: "You have been selected?" Those words seemed a challenge to you to read on and find out what great privilege was exclusively yours. Most of us have long ago learned to beware of such deceptive personal flattery in advertising, but truly, in a very real sense, we at S. T. C. have been selected.

Statistics for 1911 show that in the United States, only three per cent. of our population goes to college, while the Virginia statistics for 1917, prove that in our own State, only one per cent. of the population attends college. When any privilege or honor, in college or out, is bestowed upon us, we naturally wish to live up to the obligations that such a selection imposes. Now what are we, the Senior Class at S. T. C., going to do about our great privilege of being selected, by force of fortune circumstances, as college graduates?

We know that we shall be looked-up to as leaders when we go out from this college, and that more will be expected of us, in larger and more efficient service both in our State and beyond its confines, but do we realize that this ultimate goal can be achieved only through the right attitude of the college woman toward her citizenship—her new citizenship—with all the privileges that it now brings?

The proper relation of the modern college woman toward her new civic opportunities, does not imply that she must necessarily take a leading part in politics, but it does mean that she should take the time and trouble to inform herself on the problems of the day, and do her best to contribute, directly or indirectly, as she is best fitted individually, to the science of good government.

We are not following the ideals of our Alma Mater if our interests now extend no further than S. T. C., or if in the future they become limited to the four walls of the classroom. We need to become practical citizens who are not swayed by weak sentimentality, but who have the courage of convictions based on a real knowledge of present-day social problems. As a writer in a current periodical has suggested, we need to pray:

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet lest we forget—

our privileges of citizenship," before we cry with regret, "Forgive us, Lord, our unused gifts."

Let us accept the challenge that comes to us as college women—"You have been selected."

MISS MARY ENTERTAINS

What a thrill of delight we experienced when Miss Mary invited us to supper the other night.

It was a rare opportunity, and one which we would not have missed, to be Miss Mary's guests, for supper.

Gaily and happily, we dolled up and went to the Senior parlor. Soon Miss Mary, in her charming way, led us into the dining room, where we turned our thoughts from everyday conversation, to the partaking of the delicious food served us. Girls, did anything mother ever made, taste so good? I am sure that it could not be. We can truthfully say, that we enjoyed every single moment.

Every Tuesday, Miss Mary is taking a few of the tables to supper, and I know that when you go, you will enjoy it as much as we did.

I love you on the hilltop,
I love you on the level;
But if my dad knew I loved you,
He'd sure give me the devil!

JUNIORS TO GIVE

MINSTREL SHOW

Prepare to have a good time. The Juniors are planning to present a minstrel show on Friday, February 20th. The entire class will participate. The latest song-hits and spiciest of acts will be presented. Come and see what good black-face comedians we have at S. T. C.

EXTRACTS

A very bright Senior tried to find information about Phoenixis in a History of the World War.

One female member of the Faculty—"Oh! wouldn't it be divine to be married to such a man as Mr. McCormick?"

Lucile Walton has discovered a new way of cooking beans—namely: by hanging them over the fire on a stick.

(In Philosophy class)—Mr. Bell:—Has the sun ever stood still? What would happen if it did?

Kate T.—It never has and never will. In answer to question asked Mr. Mc-

Corbett about the properties of sulphur soap. Ask Miss Walton, she sat on some yesterday.

One member of the Faculty:—"It took me years to see the man and was once kissing in the moon."

Another:—"Well! I never could, unless a man showed them to me."

Miss Taliaferro:—"People should not write business letters on Sunday."

Helen Miller:—"In the act of mailing a sack of them on Monday morning."

"Gracious, Miss Taliaferro, we don't have time to write letters during the week."

Miss Taliaferro in an insinuating tone:—"I wonder what the people do who write daily ones?"

Nannie Crowder gave us a demonstration last Friday of a new style of wearing Senior Caps.

One of our Seniors who has been in the process of being educated for almost four years, (chemistry being her major), remarked quite emphatically, the other day, "why I thought all sweet-skinned milk was sour!"

It's getting so much warmer it will soon be time for the dear things to be looking for winter hats.

Roses are red
Violets are blue
In my heart
There's room for two
My cigarettes and you.

As sure as the vine
Grows 'round the tree,
You'll find a good
Old sport in me.

YE OLD TYME LUVE STORY

AS IT WAS NOT TOLD

Long, long ago in the good old days when King Arthur reigned and killed everyone whose religious beliefs did not agree with his, there lived in the wide forests of scrub oak and field-pines which covered the broad and as yet untitled areas of Merry England, a very beautiful maiden.

This maiden fair, Ethelryn, by name lived in a large stone castle, large enough to satisfy the demands of the most luxurious, but she was not satisfied. She had heard many tales of King Arthur and his round-table; and, having always eaten from a table of rectangular shape, she wished to view this unusual piece of furniture and become better acquainted with the wonders of the world.

Then, there was another thing to investigate. Even tho the posts were slow in that time, gossip would travel. Ethelryn had heard of the great beauty of Queen Guinevere and of a little scandal at court between her and Lancelot, the handsomest of Arthur's knights. When Ethelryn looked in her father's burnished shield, she decided that she was as beautiful as any woman; and that if she only had half a chance, she could win Lancelot and put Guinevere in her proper place, which was, of course, on the throne beside her spouse or pouring tea from the head of the round table.

But Ethelryn could not go. There were two reasons; a fire-breathing dragon guarded the castle, and there was no one to take her. She had no brothers, and her father, who heartily disapproved of court life, did not want his daughter's head filled with new-fangled notions.

Now Ethelryn had heard of Gareth and Lynette, and she decided to watch for some likely young knight. Every day she leaned over the stone balustrade of her balcony looking for a man, nor did she look in vain. One day, there rode up a most gallant young knight with plumes waving in the air and polished armor reflecting the rays of the sun. She dropped a note that she had ready, but it fell into the moat unnoticed. "Ooh, ooh," she called. The knight looked up. "Oh, Sir Lancelot," she cried. "I am a lonely maiden kept here by the dragon. Will you not woo me and take me to court?"

"I probably do look like Lancelot," he said to himself, expanding his chest an inch or two, and then out loud to Ethelryn. "Fair maiden, I am not Lancelot, but I am as strong as he, and I will kill the dragon and win your heart and hand."

He set to work to kill the dragon, and accomplished it in a short time, for the dragon was really only a bag of wind. He then bade Ethelryn come out before her father's return and go with him to Camelot. She wished to carry two chests of dresses which she had packed; but he protested saying that as she had to ride behind him on the horse, there was no place to put the chests. She finally consented and carried only her rose silk with a green bodice, tied up in her father's largest, handkerchief.

They rode merrily to Camelot, and when they stood outside the castle gates, the knight said: "Now I shall present you to the king and ask that we be married tomorrow."

"Not on your life," replied Ethelryn. "do you think I want to settle down and cook for you and your vassals? Please introduce me to Lancelot."

"This world and another," said the knight, turning away. "I suppose I might just as well go and stop the divorce proceedings against my wife."

JUST A VALENTINE

Only a Valentine? Yes, just a wee Valentine such as a child might like, just a big red heart, some little hearts—and a blue bird bearing a message to a cunning little lady with short frilled skirts and a blue ribbon in her hair. Just a Valentine—yes—but more.

"Nothing that lightens the burden of life for anyone else" is little or useless, or foolish and who is not delighted to receive a Valentine? It matters little whether it is a feature one that makes you laugh with its go-go eyes, or whether it is a heart and flower one that sends a tender feeling to the depths of your own heart. Back of both is the thought that comes from the thought of you. So the Valentine comes out from every desk and every pen and sent YOU this Valentine. Somehow it makes the heart feel different, more, more, more, more. Why? Because—

Every Valentine has its own little message or less.

Although it is not a guess at all about the future.

What has made you so happy today, yesterday and the day before?

Was it a Valentine? LITTLE pleasures, some little unexpected thoughtfulness of a friend, some little bit of congenial companionship that drew you closer to the one than you had ever been before? And if you will notice, for you will find that tomorrow's greatest happiness will be of the same kind. It may come by means of very different messengers; but, anyway, it's source will be something LITTLE,—something not a bit more pretentious, perhaps, than a Valentine.

Jane Steger, in a current magazine article, says that EVERY day certainly brings some real joy, some little bit of unexpected happiness and that you will be sure to find it if you will only look. She goes further, saying that God comes to us in these little happinesses and that she feels as if He "Might wistful say with waiting smile

Folk always give me tears,
Will you not laugh with me awhile
In these your mirthful years?"

Everything in this great wide universe has its own particular place, its own glad mission to fulfil. You and I, our smiles, our tears, our Valentines are all a part of the great whole in which God lives and moves and works.

It was only a Valentine greeting.
A card in an envelope white,
But heart with heart was meeting,
And love whispered 'The World's all right.'

ATHLETIC EXHIBITION TO-NIGHT.

The first Athletic exhibition in the new gymnasium, will be held tonight at 7 o'clock.

Altho the first exhibition held in the new gymnasium, it is not the first one held in the college. One of the best exhibitions ever given here, was one held in 1909 in coming days of the old gym. This exhibition was under the direction of Miss Lydia L. Overall now Mrs. Herbert Stokes, of Farmville, Va. The program consisted of the regular gymnastics and apparatus work given in the classes of those days. At that time, much stress was placed on apparatus work. If the girls here now could see the apparatus work of that time, undoubtedly, they would think themselves at some ten o'clock.

The gym suits of that time, consisted of a navy blue blouse, to which were fastened bloomers of the same color. The exhibition began with single free stand movements, followed by the more difficult exercises. After these, came the apparatus work. The ninety girls of that exhibition, were divided into groups, who performed on different things. One group was sent to the still bars, another to the horizontal bars, others to the ropes. The girls of 1909 did all manner of things that would make us gasp. Nimbly they would climb up the ropes to the ceiling, give a little twist and come down head first. Those working on the ladders went through like lightning. The horizontal bar actors astounded the spectators. Vaulting, and free stand pumping, were next exhibited.

After this, the spectators were in for a perfect treat—aesthetic dancing. Now dancing of this kind was quite new, as no such lady-like performances had been given in the Farmville gym up to this time. The young ladies of fifteen years of age, wore paper dresses and gave several varieties of dances.

Let us see how the pendulum of gymnastics has swung from apparatus work to that of the present-day.

The 1925 Athletic Exhibition program is as follows:

- 1—Formal Gymnastics and Relay, Freshmen.
- 2—Natural Gymnastics and Practice Teaching, Sophomores.
- 3—Natural Dancing, Dancing Class.
- 4—Calisthenics and Dodgeball, High School.
- 5—Folk Dances.
(a)—"Ace of Diamonds."
(b)—June Dance.
(c)—Shoemaker Dance.
- 6—March Tactics, Juniors and Seniors.
- 7—Natural Rhymes or Child Rhythms, Games Class.
- 8—Tag Games, Game Class.
- 9—Singing Games, Games Class.
- 10—Shuttle Relay, Professional Classes.

Hampden-Sidney Dances

The Hampden-Sidney German Club held their annual mid-winter dances, February 13 and 14. The Comity Club room was tastefully decorated in small red and white hearts which were scattered upon the wall and festooned from the ceiling, the dance cards, of grey and maroon, were also in heart-shape carrying out most attractively, the Valentine idea. Whether or not all the hearts are still at Hampden-Sidney is a question, but with such music as was rendered by the Old Dominion Orchestra, one is tempted to wonder.

Saturday night owing to the circumstances, the dance was held in the Farmville Armory.

S. T. C., as usual, was well represented. The girls who went from school with their escorts, are as follows:

Mrs. James Laing, chaperone.

TIGERS LOSE TO SPIDERS—40-17

Monday night, February 16, the Hampden-Sidney Tigers were defeated by the Spiders from Richmond College by the score of 40 to 17 in the gymnasium of S. T. C.

During the first half, the Tigers were almost unable to find their goal, scoring mostly on fouls—but in the second half, they "fought 'em" and succeeded in bringing up the score to the final sum of 17. At the same time, the Spiders did not for one instant slack up, but rolled the score up to 40.

Patterson and Spose, of Richmond, were the outstanding players of the game.

PI KAPPA OMEGA

The Pi Kappa Omega Society has elected to its number Dana Hill and Madelene McMurdo.

Following the plan adopted by the staff of The Rotunda, of the State Teachers College, The Tiger plans to have the four classes of the college edit The Tiger for four successive weeks, beginning with the senior class, which will edit the edition of February 20; the other classes will follow in order.

The Varsity is getting ready for another basketball game. Manager Harris has just about finished the preparations necessary for a game between Richmond City Normal and S. T. C., on our floor. The date will be announced later.

In the last three weeks, $507.64 has been contributed to the Student Building, making a total of $3896.78.

IN MEMORIAM

Miss Edna Norton Spear, who was for several years a beloved member of our Faculty, passed away on Wednesday, February eighteenth, in the Scotland White Hospital at Temple, Texas.

NOW AND THEN

If you were stricken with admiration and envy at the sight of the comfortable costumes of the basketball team from the University of South Carolina, hearken to this tale: Until nineteen-seven, S. T. C. had no basketball except perhaps, an inter-class struggling now and then. But in that year, a new physical education instructor, Miss Overall, arrived. Under her direction, our athletic machinery began to hum. Basketball practice was held in an outdoor court on the site where at present, stands the infirmary. The objection to this was that an interested portion of the male element watched proceedings from the opposite side of High street. This occasioned much dismay, and was the cause of a high picket fence being built around the court. This barrier, the young ladies of the institution, dubbed the "peek-a-boo" fence.

In spite of such difficulties, the practice continued, and at last the Varsity was scheduled to play against the "College Widows" of Randolph-Macon College, at Lexington. Here a struggle, prior to the one scheduled, ensued. The team could not go to play unless they promised to wear, with utmost decorum, acordion plaited skirts over their bloomers. At length, this was conceded and the match was played. The outcome was a victory for Farmville, and the exultant telegram sent to Dr. Jarman, read: "Skirts won, 14 to 7."

To one of the class games several venerable old gentlemen with long white beards, and a fatherly air, gained admission. Were they allowed to watch the sport of the innocent youngsters? They were immediately and forth-with banished from the scene of combat by an irate, but still courteous member of the administrative department.

Aesthetic dancing also was an innovation at this time. The instructor wished to deck her promising material in comfortable knee-length skirts. However, it was not to be. The idea was spurned, rejected, tabooed, squelched. The devotees of Terschore had to appear in skirts six inches below the knee. Such was the condition of the compromise, —and listen, you be-capped and gown-ed degree students, it was considered beneath Senior Dignity, to appear in anything as indecorous as a knee-length dancing costume.

This was the beginning of S. T. C.'s, active athletic career. You, who rail at our restrictions, consider the liberties of them, and be satisfied with these of now. Visualize, as our girls, trim and agile, come on the floor in comfortable bloomers and jerseys, allowing freedom of movement, the basketball player of sixteen years ago, arrayed in her sober middie and cumbersome plaited skirt covering the obnoxious bloomers. Consider, and remember that Farmville won, even in such a costume.

I. K. U. MEETS

One of the most interesting and enjoyable meetings of the I. K. U., was held Thursday, February 12, in the Student Building Auditorium.

The program was made-up of individual discussions of the Union, the International, and the Kindergarten phases of this organization. Polly Riddle spoke on the Union phase, taking the I. K. U. in the United States. She showed how the local I. K. U. is a part of the national I. K. U. Mary Douglas Walker spoke on the I. K. U. in Hawaii, thus proving that this organization is international.

The Kindergarten phase was beautifully brought out by Miss Mix, teacher of Child Literature, in her story of the Selfish Giant. Briefly, this is the story of a giant who had a beautiful garden which he kept entirely for his own pleasure. While he was on a visit, some children managed to get into the garden to play. When the giant returned, he was very provoked and immediately drove the children out. Soon a change came over the garden, the trees shed their leaves and the flowers died. Spring had given way to fall. One day, however, a few children managed to get into the garden. As if by magic, the trees again became green and the flowers again bloomed. The giant was very pleased and allowed the children to remain in the garden. He picked up a child and the child kissed him. The giant looked for the child again, but he could not find him. Then one day, he saw the child who was none other than Christ. Thereafter, the giant always allowed the children to play in the garden and they lived happily ever after.

If we only had more campus! That plaintive phrase is one often heard here, and, of course, everyone would love to have broad acres of verdant lawn, interspersed with groves of trees, stretching away on all sides of our college. Here is a thought, however: Are we making the best of what campus we have? Though small, it could be beautiful. There are no lovelier trees anywhere. The grass is fresh and luxuriant. The shrubs are shapely and well-placed. All these things make for beauty. Every effort possible has been made to beautify our grounds. —by the administration. Have we done our part? No. It is up to each student to show her appreciation of the efforts made and her co-operation in making the campus a place of beauty. When walking before the college, notice the grass, strewn with chewing gum wrappers, tin-foil, apple cores, paper bags, and, in short, every bit of trash that goes to ruin its appearance. Notice the paths crisscross the campus by lazy souls, who evidently do not know the purpose of a gemstone walk. Then, resolve to lend your aid to, and to bend every effort toward making our campus beautiful.

Do you ever stop to think as the light fades away and the darkness settles fastly upon the earth, "Another Day is Gone, what have I done with it?" The tendency in college is to put off real living until after graduation. Oh, yes, in college we prepare for life. Everyone admits it, but we commence to begin to get ready to start, and so we delay ourselves hopelessly. Every day is an episode in life, whether one is earning a living or preparing to meet life at some future date. The four years spent in college, are four of the best in life. It is during them that one is imbued with fresh blood and youthful mind." Then, to employ an old, but splendid axiom, why not "strike while the iron is hot?" Every day lived in the very best way is a perfect unit that will make the next day easier and better. Every day lived at one's best, helps, not only the individual, but his environment. When we live right in college, we are bettering our Alma Mater, and our fellow-students, as well as ourselves. Besides, each day will be fatter to a day better than itself. Life has often been compared to a Mosaic, where each tiny particle counts. Each day is a bit that goes to make up the Mosaic. Someday each of us will be able to look back at the picture which our lives have made. Will each particle be bright, clear-cut, and appropriate? And when we look back over that portion of the Mosaic, worked out at S. T. C., we shall see approximately one hundred and thirty-five tiny divisions representing our days spent at our Alma Mater. Will that section of our life-picture be the part to which we shall point with pride?

THE ROTUNDA staff extends to stupid, in fact we criticize and criticize the most classes the very heartiest congratulations on their splendid issues of our school paper. Each issue from the freshmen's flaming red, to the senior's simple black and white, was characterized by originality, cleverness, wit, and real literary and poetic achievements.

Each paper was an indication of the ability in the several classes, and the co-operation that exists among the members of the classes. From such a combination, there can but emerge a paper of interest, a distinctive paper, which is typical of the class behind it. There is no reason why our weekly edition of The Rotunda should not be typical of the SCHOOL behind it.

We all complain about The Rotunda —none of us are satisfied with it; few of us are really justly proud of it; and we say the writers are commonplace and uninteresting. There is not enough variety of style, the jokes are old, the sayings trite, the poems

POPLARS

My poplar trees tall, in a row,
Are rhythms with the winds that blow;

They softly sing in summer breeze,
My slender, graceful poplar trees,
My stately, queenly poplar trees.

In winter when the wild winds blow
And frolic with the flakes of snow,
My poplar trees their branches bare,
Describe a symphony in the air,
A joyous symphony in the air.

JOAN SPEAKS

The P. K. O. bids are out, but where is Squigzel? Is Squigzel dead or sleeping?

Where are the girls whom Squigzel recognizes? Squigzel has been merely waiting for the spirits of Agnes Baptiste, Jamie Moore, Pauline Timberlake, Roberta Hodekin, Katherine Kemp, and Louise Parsons, are still here.

Squigzel has been dead this year, but I hope before long, you New Girls, will realize the real worth of Squigzel to our school. Its members have always been worthy of the spirit of Squigzel.

I overheard the other day, that Squigzel was awakening. Girls, if this be so, take the advice of Joan and if the eyes of Squigzel are upon you, feel honored, and strive to be worthy of the spirit of Squigzel.

ALUMNAE NOTES

The Richmond papers of last week, announced that there would be a subscription card party in the tea room at the Jefferson Hotel on February 21, given by the Richmond Chapter of the Farmville Association of Alumnae for the benefit of the Student Building. On Tuesday, February 10, the parlors of Miss Mary Jackson and Mrs. Barrye Wall, were filled with Farmville alumnae and their friends who had met for a game of bridge for their own pleasure and the benefit of the Student Building Fund. Delicious home made candies were served on the sixteen tables. A delightful evening was spent by all, and $32 added to the fund.

TRI-SIGMA

The Alpha Chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma, was hostess at a delightful tea given in the Tea Room Saturday, February 14, from five to six o'clock, in honor of the other two sororities on the campus—Delta Sigma Chi, and Gamma Theta and their respective faculty advisors, Miss Pauline Camper, the faculty advisor of Tri-Sigma, poured tea.

The idea of St. Valentine's Day was carried out in every detail, from the lovely decorations, to the refreshments. Two members of the entertaining sorority, who were dressed as charming valentines, added much pleasure to the occasion by numerous musical selections.

According to Dr. T. P. Harrison, of N. C. State College, the five main reasons why students do not make their classes are: (1) financial straits; (2) other family troubles; (3) ill health of the student; (4) mistake in selecting course; (5) failure to work. Of these the last named is responsible for ninety-five per cent of the failing students.

Decisive steps are being taken at the University of Kentucky to abolish cheating. If a student is found guilty of cheating he is required to drop the course with a grade of five. In case of a second offense, he is suspended from school for the year.

It is the general opinion that the students at a State university do not stress the spiritual side of their college life. Recent statistics from Clemson, the State college in South Carolina, prove the instability of this statement. Over ninety per cent of Clemson men are affiliated with some church.

A forward step is being made in the structure of educational institutions in the 32-story building which is to be constructed for the University of Pittsburgh. The building will be designed to accommodate 12,000 students and to cost ten million dollars.

In the person of a ten-year old student, Oglethorpe University in Georgia has perhaps the youngest university student in the country.

According to Dr. C. E. Brown, of Duke University, palm reading is just another kind of superstition and is all a farce.

Snowfight at Yale Is Classified as Vandalism.

Some Yale freshmen started a snowball fight to divert their minds from the mid-year examinations. It started on the evening of January 26. The next morning it broke out again and the snowball barrage was not lifted until all windows in all the freshmen dormitories were broken.

University authorities could not view the incident in any other light than as "the most unwarranted bit of vandalism that has ever been effected by members of the student body."—New Student.

WHAT IS LIFE TO YOU?

To the joker it's a jest;
To the preacher, life's a sermon.
To the miser life is money.
To the loafer life is rest.

To the lawyer life's a trial.
To the poet life's a song.
To the doctor life's a patient.
That needs treatment right along.

To the soldier life is a battle.
To the teacher life's a school.
Life's a good thing to the grafter.
It's a failure to the fool.

Life is lovely to the lover,
To the player life's a play;
Life may be a load of trouble
To the man upon the dray.

Life is but a long vacation
To the man who loves his work;
Life's an everlasting effort
To shun duty to the shirk.

To the heaven's best romancer
Life's a story ever new;
Life is what we try to make it—
Brother, what is life to you?

ELIMINATING COMPETITION

The elimination of all studies and the one most essential to business success is the study of the human race. And no job is beneath the dignity of the student. If I were a youth with two strange initials behind my name and a diploma in my hand, and I wanted to get ahead financially, I should obtain a job where there are no college men. That would eliminate the element of competition. — Dean Ayer, University of Akron.

Forty-one years ago, was started the institution of which each of us is a part. The State of Virginia decided that its women deserved a fine and beautiful establishment where they might come to prepare themselves for service in the capacity of teaching the youth of our Old Dominion. Are we proving ourselves worthy of this college? Its architecture is beautiful. Its fixtures are up-to-date and costly. Do we properly appreciate them? In caring for the building and rightly using its facilities, we prove ourselves worthy to be a part of the State Teachers College at Farmville. Abusing school property and cluttering up our college with unsightly rubbish, strewn carelessly about, are acts of barbarism. They make the on-looker think the inhabitants entirely unused to, and incapable of appreciating the better things of life. Every measure is being taken to make our college up-to-date, home-like and beautiful. Our new dining-room has no peer for loveliness. Our kitchen, with its $10,000 equipment, is the last word in modernity. Our Student Building, with its great gymnasium, is up to the minute. Our Dormitories are comfortable and well cared-for. Then, let us lend our aid and energy individually, to those who are so earnest in their attempt to make our Alma Mater a splendid institution, and show ourselves diligent in making their efforts successful.

LEARNING IS A JEALOUS GODDESS

Learning does not come in a hurry. She cannot be won by force. She is a jealous goddess and does not bestow her blessings upon those who worship false gods. She does not sit all day in the market place or worry. Learning has a quiet and simple beauty all her own, which deepens with the passing years. And this is the habitation of learning.

Our jazz bands, our saxophone orchestras, our whirling, giddy parties, our "busts," our proms, our hops, our moving pictures, our joy rides, all these and many other things gather into a noisy, rushing babble and banish learning. They may have, they do have, their proper place but just now they occupy an unduly large place in student interest. The emphasis is false. No student, at least few students, find it possible to persistently put things in their proper places and to find themselves dwelling contentedly with the best and rarest things of life.

President Burton, The University of Michigan.

GOOD ENGLISH AS AN ASSET

When Thackeray visited America he found that the purest English he heard on this continent was spoken by the women of Virginia. Are we at S. T. C. embodying those standards of good English that are our precious heritage?

Everyone realizes that a mastery of at least the correct forms of English is essential for all prospective teachers, but aside from this, the ability to speak correct and forceful English is a great social asset. When we come to college or when we are placed in any other new environment, we are going to be judged first of all by the kind of English we speak. If we persist in the use of the double negative, in the incorrect use of the preposition "at," and in other similar expressions which stamp one as a careless speaker, we need not be surprised to find that the most desirable among our new acquaintances are likely to cultivate a more intimate relationship with us, but we then remember that our careless language is our correct usage will rather be contempt upon us and mean our eternal shame.

Another thing that makes our daily conversation the frequent use of slang. This is due to mental laziness. We are too lazy to think of an accepted word that conveys a definite meaning. Slang is a kind of mental laziness that comes to mind when we are in a hurry, which may mean just as much as it does when we are not in a hurry.

Each of us can secure a definite service for our Alma Mater by encouraging through our personal example, the use of correct, effective English on this campus.

The first ingredient in conversation is the truth, the next good sense, the third good humor, and the fourth wit.—Sir W. Temple.

AN EXPLANATION

Since the article published in the last issue of THE ROTUNDA entitled: "Joan Speaks" has met with some misunderstanding, the society of Squigel wishes to offer an explanation. The misconception of this article seems to lay chiefly in its appearance to belittle or ridicule the Pi Kappa Omega Society. We feel that some enlightenment concerning this "Silent Order" of Squigel would be beneficial.

There is some connection between the two societies, mainly in that as the members of the Pi Kappa Omega possess desirable and commendable qualities, so the members of Squigel must also come up to certain standards. We feel that we have explained sufficiently on saying that the society of Squigel has the highest esteem and regard for Pi Kappa Omega, and that it does all in its power to promote its membership.

Squigel wishes to announce the following pledges:
Lucile Walton, Erna Shotwell, Eula Harris, Margaret Robinson, Margaret Portlock, Margaret Lewis Stearns.

Our companions please us less, from the charms we find in their conversation than from those they find in ours.—Lord Greville.

Conversation is the image of the man, so is his speech.

Four Letter Word Meaning "Cute"

Every woman has the privilege of being dumb, but some women abuse the privilege. Take Arabella. (Please take her; I don't want her.) Arabella has a vocabulary almost as limited as that of a United States Senator. Her vocabulary, in fact, consists of just one word. That word is "cute."

Arabella manages to get a good deal of mileage from her one-cylinder vocabulary. Everything, to Arabella, is "cute,"—from French pastry to Calvin Coolidge.

Now, personally, I have no objection to the word "cute," it's all right in its place. In fact, I know some very cute girls who use the word. But Arabella overdoes it. When she says that Jackie Coogan is cute, I agree with her, but when she goes on to say that Rudolph Valentino, Maj Jongg, banana fritters, The Atlantic Monthly, the mad scene from "Lucia," Spumoni, John Rouch Straton, "Yes, We Have No Bananas," "Messiah," shrimp salad, "Barney Google," and the Yellowstone National Park, are all cute, I register a protest.

The other day Arabella and I drove out in the country. When we got to a nice quiet spot we parked the car and started walking. It was a glorious day. All nature seemed to be bubbling over. So was Arabella.

"Oh, isn't this just too cute for anything!" she giggled ecstatically.
We paused on the brink of a narrow gorge. Far down below we could see a tiny brook winding its capricious way between the high rocky walls. It was a thrilling sight. Even Arabella kept silent for a moment.

But only for a moment.
"Don't you think this gorge is perfectly gorgeous?" she asked.

It was too much. I advanced forward with murder in my heart. But first I gave her one last glance.

"Is that the only word that describes it?" I inquired, pleasantly.

"Oh, no! It's cute, too," she murmured.

I thrust out my arm and pushed her gently, but firmly, off the brink of the chasm!

—Judge.

Oh, but the heavenly grammar did I hold

Of that high speech which angels' tongues turn to gold!

Or is that language yet with us abode Which Adam in the garden talked with God!—Francis Thompson.

Little words of dumbness

—Yellow Jacket.

He: "I never saw such dreamy eyes."

She: "You never stayed so late before."

Editors use "we" instead of "I" because maybe the readers will think there are too many men for them to lick.—Tech.

FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1925.

NUMBER 22.

MARCH 7TH, CELEBRATED AS FOUNDERS' DAY.

41ST ANNIVERSARY OF SCHOOL

HON. DON. P. HALSEY SPEAKER

It is customary every year, for the classes and other organizations connected with the College, to present on Founders' Day, gifts to Doctor Jarman, for the Student Building Fund. These gifts are presented in various ways, such as reports and stunts. The stunts on this Founders' Day, were unusually clever and original.

The morning program began with a processional singing the Alma Mater song. This was followed by the singing of several college songs. After the singing, there was a roll-call of the Alumnae Chapters. The Richmond, Petersburg, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Lynchburg, Winston-Salem, Roanoke, Salem, Tazewell and Farmville Chapters were represented. Each representative answered with a gift for the Student Building.

The first stunt was presented by the Freshman Class. They had a garden, and in that garden, under the care of Mistress Mary grew money for the Student Building. This money was given to Doctor Jarman by the Class President in a poppy, the symbol of the Freshman Class.

To raise money for the Student Building, the First Grade of the Training School gave a puppet show. The proceeds of the show were given to Doctor Jarman. Then the First Grade Orchestra, assisted by the audience, sang: "What's the Matter With Jarman." The Second Grade was represented by one of its members who gave a little dance and then presented their gift in a flower. The Kindergarten also raised money by giving a circus. This money was given to Doctor Jarman by one of the clowns.

The class in aesthetic dancing, gave a beautiful dance and presented their contribution in a basket of flowers. Knowing that Brunswick stew is a favorite dish with everyone, the Brunswick Club gave Doctor Jarman a bowl of real Brunswick stew, with only one difference, the ingredients were dollar bills.

The S. S. S. Club gave three crooked S's made of dollar bills. Having heard that Doctor Jarman was good at cross word puzzles, and finding that they could not solve the one which they had, the De-Ho-Fe Club turned their cross word puzzle with its dollar bills over to Dr. Jarman.

Many responses came in answer to a call for other reports. The three sororities on campus, made large contributions. Among the other contributors, were the Portsmouth Club, Ruffner Literary Society, High School of the Training School, Farmville Clubs, five former students now at Roanoke Rapids, Annie Miller Almond, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hubbard.

The Dramatic Club gave their money for the new curtains in the Student Building auditorium. O Hanu San, the heroine of the Glee Club Operetta, presented a Japanese umbrella trimmed with money in behalf of the Glee Club.

The Fifth Professionals breaking as usual all precedents, presented Doctor Jarman with a gift from their class, Daddy's girl, the mascot of the Senior Class, gave the contribution of that class. This amount was enlarged by a ship sent by the members of the class of 1923, who did not come back for degrees.

The most unique stunt was that of

Glee Club Presents Japanese Operetta

The College Glee Club presented an operetta, "The Japanese Girl," on February 27, and 28, in the college auditorium. The operetta was under the direction of Mrs. Katherine King, instructor of music in the college.

The stage was artistically decorated in true Japanese style and made an attractive back-ground for the many-colored costumes. Noma Fuqua as O Hanu San proved to be a charming Japanese girl and an equally charming prima donna. She was well supported by the other members of the cast. The cast was ably assisted by the College Orchestra. The entire operetta was an unqualified success, and we wish to congratulate every participant.

The operetta is based upon a quaint custom prevalent in some parts of Japan, that when a near relative has to be absent from home for a considerable period he often leaves behind him a growing plant, young tree, or singing bird, which is called by his name and regarded as his substitute, receiving the greatest care and most faithful attention.

In the first act a group of girls come to visit O Hanu San, a young Japanese beauty who is about to celebrate her coming of age, and wedding ceremony. After the girls leave, O Hanu San receives a message that her father is to be absent for an indefinite period of time. In accordance with the custom he sends her a bird which she names after him.

The marriage ceremonials take place in the second act. They are witnessed by twin American girls, who are traveling abroad for their pleasure. With Miss Knowall, their governess, they find their way into the Japanese garden. They are cordially invited to stay by O Hanu San herself.

In the final act, O Hanu San goes with her friends in a long procession to meet her husband.

SOCIAL EVENTS OF FOUNDERS' DAY

The Farmville Alumnae entertained the faculty and visiting alumnae in the Student Building reception room, Saturday afternoon, March 7, at five o'clock.

The first big dinner held in the new dining room, was given Saturday evening, March 7. The light colored afternoon and evening dresses of the girls, the beautiful flowers on the tables, made the scene one long to be remembered. Orchestral music was furnished during dinner.

The Senior Class gave a dance in the gym after dinner, Saturday, from 7 to 8 p. m.

The Student Committee gave a dance to the student body after the address in the auditorium.

Will the person who dropped the poem "Pathos" in the Rotunda box, please give her name to the editor?

LETTERS FROM FORMER FACULTY MEMBERS

FRESNO, CAL., Feb. 25, 1925.
Dear Editor:

I am glad to join the friends of S. T. C. in extending congratulations and best wishes on Founders' Day. I find that absence increases my affection for Farmville, and that I appreciate more and more the splendid spirit, and fine work that is being done there. Students and faculty should consider themselves rarely fortunate in being able to work in such an institution.

Cordially yours,
W. E. TIDYMAN.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Mar. 5, 1925.
My dear Miss Walton:

The twelve years I spent as a member of the faculty of the Farmville State Normal School, were among the most worth-while of my life. Often, since then, when I have heard teachers speak disparagingly of Normal Schools as narrow, deadening institutions in which to work, I have realized, even more than I did when I was in Farmville, the good fortune which was mine to work under an administrator with the vision, the democratic spirit, and the inspirational power of Dr. Jarman.

For Farmville was never a place in which to wither and to warp. Its spirit has always been a spirit of growth, and there is no question in my mind, that that spirit was due to three elements in its president's policy: He conceived a vision of a thing that ought to be for the good of his State and its children; he gathered about him people selected for their ability to achieve his vision; and then he gave them free rein and hearty support in their efforts to realize that vision with and for him.

I thank Farmville, therefore, for es-

"Internal Workings."

As you sit waiting for desert, do you often wonder just how things are run behind those mysterious doors at the rear of the dining room? As you eat your rolls, do you hazard a guess as to how many rolls were prepared for the meal of which you are partaking? Are you interested in knowing how food is stored and prepared for the 640 girls who daily eat three meals in the dining hall of S. T. C.? The cub reporter, being a young person as full of curiosity as the "satiable elephant's child," wanted to investigate all these matters and so she took a long breath out on her most polite air and walked into the abode of the ruling spirit of our college's culinary domain. Mrs. Jamison graciously agreed to show the cub reporter "what made the wheels go 'round."

A visit to the maids' pantry was first accomplished. The walls of this room are lined with lockers which contain the dishes for the tables of each maid. A large china closet at the center holds the extra china.

Behind this pantry is the servants' dining hall, an airy attractive room, with long tables and stools of cream enamel. It made the heart of the cub reporter glad to know that those, who serve so efficiently, unobtrusively and well, have a pleasant room in which to eat their meals. Next door to the servants' room, is the linen closet, of which, Mrs. Perry is chateleine.

ROCKFORD, ILL., Feb. 26, 1925.

My dear Miss Walton:

I began my apprenticeship as a teacher of Education at Farmville fifteen years ago when the only Teachers College we knew was the one in New York to which Dr. Jarman repaired whenever an important vacancy occurred on his staff. Now you have become a Teachers College and need never explain the initials—S. F. N. S. that appeared everywhere in my day at the old school.

It is easy to tell you what I think of the school before 1911 and as far back as 1900. I have a great respect and admiration for it and, if permitted, might add I shall always have for it a real affection. Certainly, I owe it much. For not only does my life hail it as Alma Mater, but it contributed tremendously and directly to my own education in those first years of my teaching. You may be sure that I think it is a great institution.

I shall make no attempt at comparisons, but I think it only fair to say that in the many normal schools and teachers' institutes I have known, I have been always conscious of the very superior class upon which Farmville drew when I knew it best. This is something more than the inevitable conceit of a Virginian abroad. I recognized a very simple fact that in other States, outside the South, many, too many for the future of teaching, of the

MAKE NEXT YEAR'S CONTRIBUTIONS $6,000.00

For the last few years, the Founders' Day contributions to the Student Building have increased more than $1,000 over the preceding year. In 1923, $2,857.44; 1924, $3,661.00; 1925, $4,844.00.

Let's make it $6,000.00 in 1926!

THE HISTORY OF OUR SCHOOL

Our school was the first Normal School established in Virginia. It was established in 1884 and called the State Female School. The beginning was small, but the growth has been steady from the first: with an enrollment of three professional students in 1884, a total of eight hundred and twelve has been reached for the present session.

The first president of the school was Dr. William Henry Ruffner. For three years, he guided the young institution, and his name is indissolubly linked with its history.

Dr. Ruffner was succeeded, in 1887, by Dr. John Ambler Cunningham, a man generally honored and beloved by all with whom he came in contact. During the ten years of his administration, the school grew steadily; the first year there were twenty-three students in the professional courses; the last year, there were double that number.

In February, 1898, Dr. Robert Frazer was elected president. His four years of work were characterized by the same earnestness and zeal, the same conscientious devotion to his convictions of duity, that he had displayed elsewhere. The fourth president of the institution has guided her for nearly twenty-three years, and under his wise and kindly leadership, a great work has been accomplished. Dr. Joseph Leonard Jarman took charge of the State Female Normal School in January, 1902, and since that time, wonderful strides have been made in all directions.

In 1916, our school was granted the privilege of offering four years of college work, and conferring the Degree of Bachelor of Science in Education, and the name was changed to State Normal School for Women at Farmville. In 1924, the name was again changed to State Teachers College, at Farmville.

The growth of the content of the course of study has been no more marked than the growth in the student body. As previously stated, in 1884, there were three professional students; today, over eight hundred. More than eight thousand students have been enrolled, exclusive of nearly four thousand summer students.

FOUNDERS' DAY

In the fullness of time, man came into his own. The early stages of man's advancement, were marked by distinct stages wrought out by laborious effort. In this evolutionary process, man once left to those who came after him, moral records of his achievements. These were soon changed from actual truths to myth and fiction. Yet, man was ever-seeking for the truth. Later, man learned to write upon the sands of his desert land, but this too, was soon changed, and the place lost. Carvings on stone were made but stone is but a cold senseless substance eventually worn away. Then man in seeking the truth, found the rightful heir for all past,—man thinking became man teaching. It was then that he builded better than he knew.

Today, we stop for a while the whirl of routine affairs to celebrate the laying of a great corner-stone; not a corner-stone of cement or brick, but the corner-stone of an ideal, the ideal for education of women of Virginia, that they might as women thinking become women teaching. That ideal has grown until now alumnae members have been increasing in numbers since 1884, to such a degree, that S. T. C. today is mother of many daughters whose influence is felt even unto the uttermost parts of the world. Truly did they who founded a Training College for women hold a vision for service.

We of the present as we celebrate, are but a link in this plan of the great ideal. Those who came before us gave much. We, with their foundation can do more. Generations now growing and generations yet unborn, can do even greater things. There must be a greater, richer heritage.

While we celebrate, let us not lose sight of the bigger purpose which inspired the founders of the earlier day, they who labored that we might enter into their labor. They have made us torch-bearers Daughters; and may

Ours be the charge to Keep:
The torch to hold on high
For the treasure of our land
The open-minded child.

ARE you one of those who continually sit down? Do you rest calmly, while others are active all around you? There are those who are chronic sitters, all their lives and in every phase of life. All they ask is a nice well-worn, often repeated, inherited, hackneyed opinion on which to rest while others think, talk, act and live all around them. There are many of us here at S. T. C. who have this restful attitude. Are you one? If in doubt, these questions might be able to tell you whether or not you are addicted to entire recumbency. Ask yourself several of these questions:—What part do I take in electing the officers of our organizations? What part do I take in the religious life in our college? Am I trying to better myself? Am I trying to better my college? Am I trying to keep up-to-date in everything? Am I co-operating with others in their work for improvement and progress? Am I making the most of my academic work? Am I making the most of the position I hold? Am I doing my part of every task? Am I trying to embody the best that my college can produce?—Or, am I merely "Sitting Down?"

Next the sacred precincts of the main kitchen were invaded and explored. It contains four refrigerators, one for the storage of ice, one for salads, a small one for general use and a large one, connected with the cold storage plant. These refrigerators are of the newest type, fitted with calcium tanks, and inner coils. While we are on the chilly subject, let us mention a most interesting and intricate electric ice cream freezer and an ice cuber which promises the comfort of iced tea as warm weather draws nigh.

All the machinery of the kitchen is worked by steam or electricity, except the steamers, used for general cooking and four huge copper kettles. Two are of 100-gallon capacity each, while the others hold only about forty gallons apiece. How would you like the job of, of course, the huge coal range. This is as large as six big ranges and boasts a huge hood for carrying off odors. By the side of this stove, are cooking two hundred and eighty gallons of hash or soup? These caldrons look quite used to it.

The dish-washer is a marvel of modern science. It is slightly reminiscent of the "caterpillar" we have seen at fairs and summer resorts. The dishes are placed in crates and run under the

Their stant was different because every member of the class took part. The Juniors have a vision of a Student Building Junior. The class was divided into different groups each contributing for something special in the Student Building.

The program closed with the singing of other college songs.

Evening Program

Before Mr. Halsey's address, and Dr. Jarman's talk, Dr. C. E. Rankin prayed and the Glee Club rendered two selections.

Hon. Don P. Halsey spoke of Virginia's Progress in Education at the Founders' Day Celebration in the auditorium, March 7.

Mr. Halsey is the son of the first head of the home at S. T. C., and the nephew of the late Senator John W. Daniel. Mr. Halsey was at one time a member of the State Senate. He is at present practicing law in Lynchburg.

Mr. Halsey, in his introduction, spoke of his mother's connection with the school and gave a brief account of the school's history.

Jefferson and Madison saw and exemplified the advantages of education not only in its relation to the everyday affairs of life, but especially in its importance to citizenship.

As far back as 1619, an institution of learning had been planned at Jamestown, and in 1634, a public school was founded where the city of Hampton now stands. The College of William and Mary, founded in 1693, is the second oldest college in the United States, and within our own county of Prince Edward, we have Hampden-Sidney, also dating back to Colonial times.

The tyrannical governor of Virginia, Sir William Berkeley said: "But I think God there are no fine schools nor printing; and I hope we shall not have them in a hundred years; for learning has brought disobedience and heresy and libels against the best government. God keep us from both!"

The wishes of Governor Berkeley are very far from being carried out in this day and generation. In recent years, Virginia has made wonderful strides in education, as well as all else that goes to make up and promote the moral and material welfare of her people. Jefferson once said: "People generally have more feeling for canals and roads than education. However, I hope we can advance them with equal pace." Mr. Halsey said that he was glad that the people were taking an active interest in the movement for good roads, and that he hoped that the present agitation would bear fruit, but with Jefferson, he hoped, too, that the development of roads and education would take place with equal pace. Mr. Halsey also, wishes to see an early development of Hampton Roads. Virginia up to this time has not been backward in progress, or lacking in the spirit of progressiveness. In the years since the Civil War, her progress, considering her disadvantages and disabilities, has been equal to that of any State North or South. Here Mr. Halsey drew a vivid picture of the state of affairs in Virginia after the war, as compared with the North. Virginia, in the end not only helped to pay Northern pensions and erect Northern monuments, and soldiers' homes, but without help from the North, has managed to pay for her own monuments and homes and provide small pensions. While Mr. Halsey was a member of our State Senate, he introduced and advocated measures which resulted in the increase of these pensions.

When this school was founded in 1884, the total revenue of the State amounted to only two and three quarter millions of dollars a year, of which only one million went for public education. Of this million, the sum of $15,000 was appropriated to the Farmville Normal School. The last (1924) legislature, appropriated seven million dollars. When we add to it the amounts furnished by County, City, District, and other local funds, we find that Virginia is now paying for public education something like twenty-two million, six hundred thousand dollars. To this institution, alone, comes a State appropriation of over $900,000. This year, the school population will be nearly 700,000 pupils. In the last ten years, the expenditure per capita has increased from about $14.00 per pupil in 1915, to over $40.00 per pupil in 1924, and Virginia's rating, compared with other States, has steadily advanced.

This is why Virginia has been able to accomplish these things.

It is because Virginia has clung devotedly to her high ideals and noble history, and refusing to bow down to the Baal of corruption, or follow after false gods of visionary and impracticable theories, to forsake principle for expediency or conservatism for fanaticism, has remained true and faithful to her own exalted conceptions and traditions of patriotism and enlightenment, that she has successfully endured the night of tears and suffering and now stands with her face towards the morning of a better and brighter day; that she has risen from the dust and ashes of wreck and defeat and is now going forward to resume her old place as leader in our re-united nation's glory; that through unnumbered woes and unexampled poverty, through the dark and gloomy days of reconstruction, and in spite of envious scorn and derision, she has gone forward, and like that Roman slain by Cinna on the cross, has kept her face steadily upon the glories of the eternal city, and with unbroken courage and undaunted soul has exclaimed through the agonies of her crucifixion, "I, too, am a Roman citizen!"

He concluded with this statement: "So long as such a people, enlightened by the schoolhouse and inspired by the flag, control the destinies of our State and Nation, the safety, welfare and happiness of Virginia and America are assured, 'Esto Perpetua!' So mote it be."

After Mr. Halsey's speech, Dr. Jarman gave the history of the Student Building movement, and read the amounts contributed from the various organizations and Chapters. He announced that next year the first floor of the Student Building would be used for student activities, and not as a dormitory.

Faculty Letters

"best minds" went to the liberal arts colleges, but in Virginia the best girls went as a matter of course to the Normal School—to Farmville. This is a fundamental point of comparison.

But it takes more than students to make a school. It takes a devoted, zealous, efficient, human faculty, and the Farmville faculty of fifteen years ago challenges my admiration now on all these points. And it takes more than students, graduates and faculty to make a great college. A college must have a real president, and as I look back upon the twenty-five years of President Jarman's leadership, I know what it is to say that the new Teachers College is but the lengthened shadow of a good man.

With best wishes, I am

Cordially yours,

WM. A. MADDUX,

President of Rockford College, Sometime Principal of Training School, Professor of Education and Psychology, Farmville, Va.

EVANSTON, ILL., Feb. 16, 1925.

Dear Miss Walton:

It gives me a feeling of pride to know that although I have been away from the Farmville State Teachers College for sixteen years, there are those who still remember me. Of course the editor of The Rotunda does not; she was then a little lassie, probably, four years of age, toddling about in some beautiful Virginia home. But others have told her that I was once connected with the institution and I am very grateful for such remembrances.

I speak truthfully when I tell you, dear Editor, that the very happiest academic experiences of my whole life were those connected with your institution. There was such a loyalty of spirit, such a unity of purpose, such devotion to the profession of teaching, so much interest in the real problems of the State of Virginia, that our work was a constant joy. We were all filled with the spirit of educational advancement, for in those days, we were working with the bare beginnings of public education in your State.

I shall never forget my first interview with President Jarman. I walked into his office early one morning, and found him sitting with one foot up on the table, a cigar in his mouth, and a smile on his face. When he found out who I was, and that I had come to occupy the position of Professor of Education and Director of the Training School, he seemed pleased, and immediately made a confession. He said "I don't know one thing about a normal school; never saw one; was never in one in my life." I replied, "Neither do I, but you are a scientist and so am I, and if we go at it and work hard, we can find out what one ought to be and let's go to it" Which we did. We worked day and night—long conferences with all of our feet on the tables, he smoking and I breathing his smoke. We felt our way along this educational path as carefully as an explorer over the glacial Alps. We watched for fissures and avalanches and especially dreaded faculty meetings. At this time it seemed to us that there was a faculty meeting every twenty-four hours, which in the main served the function of taking our valuable time to discuss nonsensical questions. In a short time the number of faculty meetings were diminished 100 per cent. and faculty members were given distinct problems to work on in connection with their own subjects and their own problems (Continued on page four) of teacher training. It proved very beneficial and also lessened the amount of wasted energy on the part of the President and his faculty.

We worked on the curriculum, we worked on methods of teaching, we worked on the problems of State education and State support, we worked on the problems of the improving of teaching conditions in the rural communities where our girls had to teach. In fact, we worked during our entire waking moments upon all of these difficult problems and then we dreamed about them during our sleep. But it was great fun! President Jarman is a good scout. He is an educational adventurer, and he was ready to try anything once, and sometimes twice. And so we worked and worked, and gradually we received the co-operation of the members of the faculty; and when after two or three years, we felt that we were making some headway, and were enjoying the co-operation from the whole institution, it was a joy indeed.

I can never forget my associations in that institution. The student body—such a wonderful group of girls; so beautiful in their spirit and attitude toward the teaching profession. They stand out in marked contrast to the flapper variety with whom I have to deal at times in Northwestern University.

I have never forgotten the fine associations which I had with the Y. M. C. A., and the Athletic Association of Farmville. Many of the public men there were my staunch friends and were a great stimulus to me in those days for larger and better educational advantages for men as well as women. The annual athletic event which we pulled off every year in the Armory—a real social event for the city—can never be forgotten, and indeed, some of the achievements of those athletes would compare very favorably with the best that we have in our well-coached athletic teams in the universities.

In writing this letter I trust that you will remember me to all the friends in the faculty who were colleagues of mine in those years, and to my numerous students scattered over the State of Virginia and doubtless in many other States throughout the country. I can never forget them. It was a great joy to have lived and taught in your institution.

ELMER E. JONES.

Miss Lucile Walton,

BALTIMORE, MD., Feb. 16, 1925.
Dear Miss Walton:

I want to thank you for your letter of February 9, and to express to you my appreciation for an opportunity to write a letter for The Rotunda.

I look back on my teaching experience at Farmville with sincere pleasure. Virginia is rightly proud of her splendid Normal Colleges and Farmville unquestionably stands out as an unique institution among them. One of the finest things about it is the loyalty of its student body and the members of its teaching staff. This loyalty, to my mind, is due to a large measure, to the fine qualities of leadership of your President, Dr. Jarman. Rarely does one find in one man the happy combination of a sympathetic understanding of people, a keen, clear insight into situations, and the force to carry his judgments over into action.

Farmville shall always have my blessings, and I would count it a privilege to come back at some time and renew my happy acquaintances with those who were there when I was a member of the faculty.

Very sincerely yours,
CHUSULA McLESTER.

Instructor in the Department of Education, Goucher College.

JANUARY, S. C., Feb. 26, 1925.

Dear Miss Walton:

It gives us great pleasure to say a word in behalf of the State Teachers College at Farmville, Virginia, where we spent six very pleasant years.

We consider it one of the strongest colleges for women, in the South. Its academic work is very thorough, and its education and teacher-training department above the average institution of its kind. One strong feature in the Education Department is its progressiveness. New problems are continually being worked out and the work of the college followed up by the publication of excellent bulletins which are invaluable to the teachers of the State.

The moral and religious training is reflected in the ideals and character of the student body, who, though largely self-governing, can be depended upon to do the right thing in almost every instance.

This is largely due to the influence of the love and confidence of the students and faculty. His great heart and ready sympathy render him a capable and unsurpassed leader. His broad-mindedness, his vision, his readiness to see all sides of a question, enable him to keep his faculty and student body working in harmony for the advancement of education in our country.

JUNIOR MINSTREL

A SUCCESS

Everybody Had A Good Time.

The dignified green curtains of the S. T. C. stage were drawn on Wednesday evening, March 11, to reveal an unbroken circle of black-faces. The bodies belonging to these faces were attired in trim white trousers and dark coats, except for several of the end-men, who wore informal overalls. Accepting the invitation of the Jolly Juniors, the audience was spirited off to Darktown where gaiety ruled supreme. Shining among these dusky stars, was Brother Bennett, whose plaintive, husky voice related the charms of "Hard-Hearted Hannah," and declared "It's 'til the Same to Me." Other solos were: "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," rendered by "Mister Crenshaw," and "I Wonder What's Become of Sally," sung by "Mister" Robertson. The trio, "I'm Gwine Back to Dixie," sung and played by three of the end-men, Thompson, Booker, and "Bust-a-bing" Smith, made a hit, as did the musical dialogue, "Siamese Shore," by Smith and Booker. The audience is greatly indebted to Messrs. Bugg and A. Smith, for their enlightening chat on Hampden-Sidney. A most instructive lecture, "Mother Hubbard," was delivered by end-man "Bones" Motley. Thompson and Kent jiggled most rhythmically. Outstanding among the successes of the evening, was the eccentric dancing of "Mister" Quinn. Evidently this young person is chiefly composed of India rubber, springs and dynamite—otherwise, such contortions and spasmodic movements would be impossible.

"Mister" McArdle made a most dignified and learned Interlocutor. The evening ended with interpretations of ancient Biblical stories by some of the gentlemen of the circle. We must admit that these Bible tales "we never heard before." As a good-night play, the circle sang "Get Yourself a Broom and Sweep Your Troubles Away."

COMPLETED

S. T. C. has received two wonderful gifts since Christmas, the new dining room and the splendid new gym, but there is another one in store, and that's the new Recreation Hall. Probably, only a very few have seen it, but those who haven't been down to take a peep at it, have surely missed something.

It is a long hall, situated under the dining room. It may be used for dancing or other entertainment. A Recreation Hall is something that S. T. C. has needed for a long time, and it will afford the girls a great deal of pleasure and enjoyment.

The Y. M. C. A. Committeemen entertained in honor of Miss Ruth Alde, Thursday, March 12.

Dr. Jarman has been made first resident of the American Association of Teachers Colleges.

Biggest Hit of the Season.

Follies Beauties! Comedians! Prima Donnas Galore!

The "biggest hit of the season," a vaudeville, was given Tuesday night, March 3, 1925, at State Teachers College, by the Sophomore Class for the benefit of the Student Building. Never since the earliest history of S. T. C., has anything met with a greater success.

The curtain drew back amidst whistles and sighs of delight from the audience.

The first act was a selection of songs and dances by the charming Follies Beauties. Their acting and singing was the last word in jazz and pep.

Virginia Vincent, well-known Prima Donna, of international fame, rendered a beautiful solo, but she refused to respond to the encore of the audience.

A fascinating oriental dance by Bessie Meade Riddle, captivated the sheik. The backward gymnasium class was a little comedy rail of pep and originality. (Secret! The pupils were two-faced!)

The famous Egyptian Ventriloquist deserves much praise, for he threw his voice all over the College and would even have made it come from Heaven itself, but—(Where was the ladder?)

Pierrettes, clowns, and acrobats, were also present in abundance. As the acts continued the audience became more and more enthusiastic and appreciative. Mobley Brown and Elizabeth Westbrook gave an excellent song and dance in duet. Their costumes and acting were unusually clever and charming.

Madeline McMurdo, one of the most versatile members of the show, gave a monologue, "A College Girl at a Dance." It was very humorous and realistic.

The vaudeville closed with an Apache Dance by Madeline McMurdo and Adelaide Emory. This dance is said to have surpassed Gloria Swanson in "The Humming Bird," and Pola Negri in "Shadows of Paris."

Indeed this show was a screaming success, and it is the hope of all that S. T. C. will engage it again next season.

ATHENIAN LITERARY SOCIETY

The Athenian Literary Society held its regular meeting in the Association room February 28.

Miss Bierhower, who is an alumnus and an honorary member, made a very interesting and beneficial talk on the history of the Athenians, giving us several good ideas which we hope to carry out for the good of the Society.

There was no program, as the time was taken up with the discussion of business matters.

It was decided at this time to have a critic. Miss Daisy Allen Mitchell was unanimously elected for that place.

Miss Rice was invited to become an honorary member and we are very glad indeed that she has accepted, and we will look forward to having her with us at the next meeting.

The reporter gazed with great admiration at the various automatic slicers, grinders, etc. Mrs. Jamison displayed with pride a potato peeler, a potato slicer, a sausage machine, a saw-cutter, a bread sheer, an electric toaster and a meat slicer. From experience previously gained, the awed visitor thought that only in minstrel shows, and slap-stick comedies, did one find machines capable of doing anything from boiling eggs to shining shoes, but there was one mysterious contrivance for mixing batter, cutting law and mashing potatoes. Steam traps for warming plates and food are another device of our kitchen.

At one time, our reporter gazed at a huge concern which she thought must be a reservoir or a contraption to catch rain water—it was so large. "What's that?" she inquired innocently. "Our coffee pot," said her guide modestly. "It holds fifty gallons. We make drip coffee, you know." Our investigator didn't know and gasped with awe, having never before seen a coffee urn larger than a ten-cup percolator.

Next in the tour of inspection, came the Dutch oven. The old oven, contained enough brick to build an eight-room house. The new one is larger. Its great interior is lighted by electricity. Philip displayed it proudly. This man, whose life has been a series of rolls, pies and cakes, with gallons of soup, etc., as diversions, modestly confessed that he daily participates in making between 3000 and 3600 rolls. Isn't that a tremendous thought? Let us dwell upon it! Our oven requires three weeks to heat. It is never allowed to get cold except in summer when it is cool only long enough to be cleaned. The fire to bake the bread on our return, was started before we went home for Christmas holiday. The oven room also contains the bread mixer, which can accommodate, not cups, but barrels of flour.

Mrs. Martin, who assists Mrs. Jamison, kindly consented to show the cub reporter the cold storage plant, and store room. A descent was made on the electric elevator and the imaginative visitor fancied herself in Dante's ice inferno. The main plant contains a compartment for fresh meats, one for cured meats, and two for general use. On the same floor, are rooms for storing canned goods and a whole closet for pickles.

Harking back to the Dante, the kitchen might be termed ether, since it supplies a large part of our earthly needs. The cold storage section has already been likened to the nether regions and so the journey would be incomplete unless an ascent were made. Therefore, the next place to be visited was the balcony. This can rightly be termed heaven, because of the celestial supplies Miss Mary has given us there. Service on the balcony is accomplished by means of an electric elevator, and a dumb-waiter. There are

A READER OF PLAYS HERE

Miss Huntington-Benjamin, will read a play in the auditorium Monday evening, March 16. This is one of the members of the Evening Course.

Miss Huntington-Benjamin is undoubtedly the most successful woman reader of plays before the public. The most competent of critics throughout the country attest to her superiority in this respect. A resume of her interesting career and methods discloses the solid foundation of merit which has raised her to the pinnacle of success.

Miss Huntington-Benjamin first appeared on the stage under Kate Reigart. Mrs. Irving Winslow of the Boston Museum Stock Company. Owing to parental objection she was not permitted to follow her own choice of career, so she formed her own concert company and toured the entire United States and Canada, reading miscellaneous numbers as her part of the program. This tour met with such unusual success that it was continued several years and established her reputation as a reader of exceptional ability. She then retired and did no active public work for some time.

Four years ago Mrs. Huntington-Benjamin returned to the platform as a reader of plays. Her reception was enthusiastic, her success immediate. The demand for her services grew and grew until today she is the most popular woman reader. She has had repeatedly most attractive offers from stage managers to transfer to the legitimate, but she has steadfastly refused them.

Moreover, she loves her work and feels a responsibility to give each audience her best in gratitude for their coming to hear her.

When Miss Huntington-Benjamin is preparing a play she adopts original methods. She endeavors to produce it as the author intended it. She coaches with the producer, if possible, or under the best actors. She feels it a privilege to interpret the message which the play-wright intends the production to convey, and never attempts a piece which does not have a constructive, cheering message.

Maude Huntington-Benjamin has that personality which sets her apart; an indelible charm of manner, and a force of peculiar power carrying so flexible that it permits her extraordinary possibilities in the proper presentation of the characters of the play. Indeed she excels in characterization and in the portrayal of emotions.

AT the beginning of each new term, the question arises as to what subjects we are going to elect. Much can be said for all subjects offered as electives, but let us consider music. Why should we study music? What are the benefits derived from this study? The most important benefit derived from the study of music, is personal aid. There frequently comes a time when one feels that she would give anything to hear some music and if she can play, she then realizes how much this means to her. Music fills one with a feeling of renewed strength and power. Music is the best agent for expressing joy or grief, happiness or sorrow. When we hear the most usual thing which we do, is to sing or whistle. We sing at our work, and at our play. In times of grief and sorrow, nothing can help more than music. The study of music enables one not only to play or sing, but also enables one to understand and appreciate the famous music of the world. When one goes to a concert or to a musical number of the lyceum course, the renditions are enjoyed more by those who have studied music and have probably heard or studied many of the selections played. Those who have studied music appreciate the great worth of this study in their personal and social life. Even though this is a college where a degree is given in Education, let us consider not only the theoretical and practical side of life, but also the cultured side. In choosing our electives, let us weigh the values of each subject offered and then take the subjects which will be of greatest value to us theoretically, practically and socially.

CRITICISM

It's easy enough to pick out flaws
 In the work that others have done,
 To point out errors that others have made,
 When your task you haven't begun;
 It's easy enough to fuss and find fault
 When others are doing their best,
 To sneer at the little they have achieved,
 When you have done nothing but rest.

It's easy enough to cavil and carp,
 To criticise, scoff and deride
 For few of us ever have done perfect work
 No matter how hard we have tried;
 It is easy enough not to speak of the best,
 And to dwell all the time on the worst,
 And perhaps it is proper, sometimes, to find fault,
 But be sure that you've done something first.

—Green and White.

PATHS

Life offers us many a path
 Some over rough and stormy ways,
 Some where coolness and shade last
 From dawn until close of day.

Wandering here and there I go
 Just what path of life to take
 I cannot tell, I must choose though
 For each moment my honor is at stake.

Some friends bid me bide in peace,
 Others bid me up and fight;
 Some offer me luxuries and ease,
 Others, naught but simplicity of life.

Fast the storm-clouds move
 Within my soul today,
 As each moment I brood
 Over which voice I shall obey.
 —Pauline Deaver.

SEEN THROUGH THE WINDOW OF A COLLEGE "DORM"

Night after night, directly facing my room, there would flash across the long tan window-shade of the "dorm" across the way the queerest silhouette imaginable. It was the form of a woman, buxom and full-blown, and wrapped in a loose, flowing garment whose exact nature I could not determine. One moment she would stand perfectly still, and then suddenly would throw up her hands and vanish, only to reappear in a moment and repeat the same unusual behavior. She would shake her head up and down a number of times, and every now and then it would fall backward loosely, until she resembled, in outline at least, Ichabod Crane's "Headless Horseman." She swayed rhythmically from side to side, like a well-devised pendulum; her legs would fly out at right angles with her body, and as though she were afraid of losing them, she would make a desperate dive after each one, just missing them everytime she bent over.

I began to think the poor creature had periodic or night spasms. Her outline grew thinner and thinner week by week, and one night—she wasn't there at all! Horrified and prepared to hear the worst, I hastened to the next building and inquired in a weak, quivering and apologetic voice whether the lady who lived there was "not well." I reported the results of my nocturnal vigils and my anxiety over the sufferer's non-appearance. Imagine my astonishment and chagrin when the slim creature at the door politely and coldly announced that she was the lady, and that "it was nobody's business but her own if she had chosen to take reducing exercises in her own private room at night!" I simply and unostentatiously collapsed.

The tour of inspection was now complete and the cub reporter was too awed for words. Heretofore, she had always been worried trying to decide who had the more complicated job, a railroad engineer or the man who played the drum and its various appendances in an orchestra. Her mind is at rest. Such petty tasks sink into insignificance before the intricacies of managing the S. T. C. kitchen.

WHERE ROSES BLOOM

And so we play the game of life,
And struggle on and on
To find ye've lost just when we thought
The very goal was won.
Where roses bloom the way is sweet,
But where the hand of fate
Has reared the thistle—we must learn
And so I play my game of life,
And wearily plod the trail,
And worry on from day to day—
What matter if I fail?
To labor and to wait.
Who cares how rough the trail may be
What lies beneath my feet,
A bed of roses or of thorns?—
There is no judgment seat!
There is no life of happiness,
And love is but a name;
So why this life of daily toil,
Why strive and strive for fame?
No one knows and no one cares
How torturous the way—
But yet, perhaps, the day will come
When there'll be one to say,
"I love you not for what you were
But what you tried to be;
So take my love and both of us
Will sail life's stormy sea."

ESSAY ON LOVE

Love is a karius thing. It makes sum folks happy and sum roiks sad. It is a thing that you shoold not trifle with. There are three kinds of love thay are "puppy" love, pretended love and reel love. A man shure had ought to have reel love fur a womun befour he marries hur. Sum min and wimen git married thinking shure thay love one another, but after thay git married thay relise thay dont.

"Love is lige a unyun,
We taste it with delite,
But when it's gone we wondor,
What made us bite."

Te Bible says we shoold love one another. Animules love one another, so why shooodnt people? All children shoold love thare teecher and if thay do love thare teecher will sure love them. It is heep better for sumbody to love you than to hate you. If sumbody loves you thay will do eny guide than can. But if thay hate you thay will do eny horm thay can. You shoold bee taut bye yore ma and yore pa and yore teecher to love evribody and if you haint been taut it just like I have ben taut grammer you shoold do it eny how.—The Peanut.

The Seniors again showed their ability to play basketball Tuesday night, when they played the Juniors and defeated them 21 to 19, this making two successive victories for the Seniors over the Juniors.

The game was one of the closest witnessed in the new gym—as the score indicates. Both teams put up a strong fight, but the Seniors managed to out-play the Juniors, the Seniors never allowing the Juniors to get ahead.

The line-up was as follows:

Shotwell	F
Francis	F
Harris	C
Morgan	S. C.
Hunt	G
West	G
Substitutes: Bugg for Hill.

THE BOBBED BRIGADE

Bobbed hair to the right of us,
Bobbed hair to the left of us,
Bobbed hair behind us,
Tresses asundered.

Some with a heavy crop,
Some with a lighter mop,
Into the barber shop
Walked the bobbed hundred.

Women of high degree,
Women just fifty-three,
Determined that they shall be
One of the numbered.

Women of every class,
Mother and little lass,
Flappers all join the mass
Of the bobbed hundred.

Some with bangs, some without
Some shingled roundabout,
Some in curls, some in doubt,
Fear they have blundered.

Some of them look real swell,
Some of them look like—well,
Just as well not to tell
On the bobbed hundred!

"THE MAKER OF DREAMS" PRESENTED BY DRAMATIC CLUB

All-Star Cast

The Dramatic Club presented on Wednesday night in the College Auditorium a fantasy, "The Maker of Dreams." The sketch was delightfully and charmingly presented.

The story centers around Pierrot, (Lyla Colonna,) and Pierrette, (Peggy Moore,) two strolling players. Pierrette is in love with Pierrot, but he, ever busy looking for a woman who has both soul and form, does not return her love. Pierrette is a very practical young person who shows her love by making Pierrot comfortable at home. Pierrot does not appreciate this; he thinks Pierrette has the form but lacks a soul. On this particular occasion, he abruptly leaves Pierrette and goes to find a lady who had been in the day's audience and with whom he was favorably impressed. Pierrette feels very slighted and hurt. Soon there comes a knock on the door and in response to Pierrette's call a stranger walks in. After a few inadequate explanations, the stranger, (Lucy Haile Overly,) seats himself comfortably and makes himself at home. Finally he begins to talk about the affair between Pierrot and Pierrette. He finds as he had suspected, that Pierrette is madly in love with Pierrot and that he does not return her love. Soon Pierrot comes in from his fruitless search for the woman with both a soul and a form. Pierrette leaves and the two are left alone. The stranger introduces himself as the Maker of Dreams. Pierrot at first, hardly credits the statement that he is a Maker of Dreams. Finally, however, he is convinced and when the Maker of Dreams says that he has just the woman for him, Pierrot becomes very interested. The Maker of Dreams gives Pierrot the bill of lading containing a description of the woman and also giving him a claim to her on demand. The stranger leaves and when Pierrette comes in Pierrot tells her about the wonderful girl. Pierrette suggests that perhaps they should work to get nice things for the wonderful woman.

She even offers to help by dancing. Pierrot becomes very enthusiastic, and immediately starts to write an advertisement for the paper. Pierrot describes himself in flattering words but he teases Pierrette asking her the color of her hair and eyes. It is then that it comes to him that Pierrette answers the description in the bill of lading. He claims her and they live happily ever after.

WOODROW WILSON COLLEGE

Last year the Chamber of Commerce of Milledgeville, Ga., instituted a drive for funds for the establishment of a Woodrow Wilson Memorial College. Pledges amounting to $500,000 were raised. A tract of 100 acres was purchased and the drive for funds was made country-wide through the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor.

Dr. Jones, of Yale University, claims that by the use of radio it will soon be possible to have motion pictures in the home.

"THE FOOL."

FAMOUS READER GIVES A PRESENTATION OF THE FOOL.

Artist Met With Unqualified Success.

On Monday night, March 16, Maude Huntington-Benjamin, the most successful woman reader of plays before the public, came to State Teachers College.

Miss Benjamin chose for her selection "The Fool," a four-act play by Channing Pollack. She interpreted the characters with extraordinary expression and ability, portraying each character so well that though invisible, they seemed to move about the stage. The author of the play says that of all the readers who have read "The Fool," he thinks Miss Huntington-Benjamin the best and most excellent portrayal of his play, judging from the applause, the audience was of the same opinion as Mr. Pollack in regard to her ability and remarkable talent.

"The Fool" is a play which teaches the great lesson that happiness lies in helping others. Mr. Gilchrist, "the fool," is driven from his church and forsaken by his sweetheart because he persists in spending his allowance in feeding and clothing the poor. He becomes a worker in the mines. As a miner, he does his best to quiet a strike, which has arisen among the laborers because they are ill-paid.

In the meantime his former sweetheart, Claire Jewett, has married Jerry the son of Mr. Gilchrist's employer. She is rich and has every luxury lavished upon her, but she lacks her husband's love. He seeks pleasure with other women, drinks and often remains away from home for months at a time.

Claire seeks refuge in the advice of her friend, Mr. Gilchrist, and is accused by her jealous husband of being false to him.

Claire, driven by the brutality of her husband goes to Mr. Gilchrist again. She offers him her love but he shows her that her duty lies in helping her husband. She consents to go home. Not long after she leaves a mob comes to kill Mr. Gilchrist because they claim that he has been on intimate terms with the wife of the foreman of the mines.

The mob asks Mr. Gilchrist to perform a miracle if he wishes to save his life. They fall upon him, laying him unconscious.

Little Mary Margaret, the lame ward of "the fool," seeing her guardian and hero lying unconscious upon the floor, drops her crutches and walks over to his side. The mob astonished by what they believe to be a miracle performed by Mr. Gilchrist, fall on their knees in prayer begging forgiveness.

The last scene takes place two years later with Mr. Gilchrist and Mary Margaret laying presents around the Christmas tree.

Mr. Gilchrist's employer and Jerry, now a doomed wretch, come in and shake hands with Mr. Gilchrist, congratulating him on his good work. His employer states that he is doubtful who "the fool" is after all for he

HARRISONBURG DEFEATS FARMVILLE, 24 TO 17

The Harrisonburg team met with another victory Saturday night, March 14th, when they defeated our team by the score of 24 to 17 in the gym.

The game was clean and fast from beginning to end. At the end of the first quarter the score stood 4-2 in favor of Harrisonburg, while at the end of the first half, both teams added several more points to the score, being 12-10, still in Harrisonburg's favor.

The second half Farmville pepped up and when eight minutes of fast playing was up, Farmville was ahead by one point—16-17, being the score.

Farmville continued to hold them at this point until the last two minutes of the game, when they added nine points, the final whistle blowing on a score being 12-10, still in Harrisonburg's favor.

The line-up was as follows:

Farmville	Harrisonburg
Hall	F
Jones	F
Mitchell	C
Reid	S. C.
Gary	G
White	G
Substitutes: Morgan for Reid, Perkins for Hall.

RUFFNER LITERARY SOCIETY

The Ruffner Literary Society held its regular meeting Wednesday night, February 25th. The program was a continuation of the study of Drama. The phase of it, presented this time, was Modern Drama. Miss Jen Wade gave a very amusing talk on the indispensable part the property man has in a successful play.

Miss Alma Maynard and Miss Nell Ferrell then told about a new movement in the theatrical world. The Little Theatre, is to give new actors and playwrights an opportunity to display their ability. Like all novelties, this movement is carried to extremes in some places; yet, some of its qualities are quite commendable.

GAMMA THETA

BANQUET

The Gamma Theta Sorority entertained at their annual Founders' Day banquet, on Saturday night, March 14, in the Tea Room. The table was very artistically decorated in light blue and white. This same color scheme was carried out in the favors.

Alumnae returning for the banquet, were: Nancy Lyne and Kathryn Thompson, of Covington; Mrs. C. A. Greene, Charlottesville; and Mrs. John P. Hughes, of Lynchburg.

ALUMNAE NEWS

On March 3, the Winston-Salem, N. C., Chapter of the Farmville Association of Alumnae was organized. The charter members are Misses Eleanor Forman, Virginia Wall, Dorothy Diehl, Frances Fordan, Mary Eggleston, Katherine Cralle, Carrie Duncan, Sadie Upson, Annie Via, Frances Beadles, Martha Christian, Mrs. W. E. Clark, (Helen Hay,) and Mrs. Thomas Huskins, (Bevery Andrews.) The officers are Miss Virginia Wall, president, and Miss Martha Christian, secretary-treasurer. The Chapter immediately became active and sent a check to Dr. Jarman for the Student Building, with an invitation to visit them as soon as possible. This is the first Chapter organized outside of the State.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Nancy Katherine Crisman, of Winchester, Va., to Mr. Garland Reed Quarles, of Ruther Glen, Va. Both are members of the Handley High School faculty in Winchester. The wedding is to take place about the middle of June.

Another engagement of interest to students as well as alumnae is that of Miss Frances Warren, of Orange, Va., to Lt. Philip Thwme, of the United States Marines, stationed at Cuba, the wedding to take place in the early fall.

AMERICAN DRAMA DECLARED FAILURE; BLAMES AUDIENCES

Berlin American drama, dramatic circles and intellectuals are indicted in an article by Gustaf Kauder, in the Vossische Zeitung, Kauder, writing from New York, set out to review the dramatic season of 1924, but he found little with which to be pleased.

"American drama as a failure," he declared. "Only foreign authors are popular in the American theatres. American drama of today is still mysterious, unbalanced and intricate. It has failed to master the subject which it endeavors to treat."

Kauder is inclined to lay some of the blame at the door of audiences, for he says, the average American audience will not patronize the theatre unless comedy is to be found in it.

He gave as one reason for drama "being played so badly" the fear of managers to risk much money on it.

"Come put up little resistance to the decay of the drama," Kauder said. "Their main desire is to write witty lines."

The "round-table" for critics and intellectuals at the Algonquin Hotel was occupied, Kauder said, by critics and literary doing cross word puzzles.

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsigned correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of printing and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

All right now, girls, let's get together on this thing and think. What thing? Oh, this matter of Spring Elections. Spring always calls for deep thought—thoughts about our school hats, our other spring clothes, our social classes and Spring Elections. We all know that there are our big Student Organizations, The Student Government Association, the Y. W. C. A., the Athletic Association, and the Rotunda. All of these organizations must have officers and it's up to us to choose the very best girls for the places. Nominating boxes will soon be placed around in various places. Don't allow these boxes to remain empty. We know that there is at least one girl for every position, then let each one of us think of that girl and forthwith nominate her. And another thing, when we put on our "thinking caps" for the Student Government election, don't let's take them off until after the Rotunda Staff election. Don't nominate the greatest journalist in school for president of Y. W. C. A. Save her for the Rotunda Staff. In like manner, don't vote for an athlete for Student Government,—remember the Athletic Association.

Above all, let us be independent thinkers, and in this, as in all else, "Insist on yourself; never imitate."

So we will have "D" for the lowest average grade that our athletics are allowed to make. And why not? "D" though not as great a symbol of excellent work as "A," yet does the work, it is passing and though merely to pass, is not our aim, yet it must be satisfactory, or would our conscientious faculty allow us credit on "D's"?

Some will doubtless say that we, a respectable, educational institution, should not feel proud to be represented in athletics by people of only "D" averages. But wait; they are not to represent us scholastically, but athletically, which is entirely another matter. If we were selecting cultural representatives, we would doubtless choose the girls who are most scholastically inclined.

Then, there is this argument: Some say it is not best for the athletes, to allow them to play on our team with so low an average, that if we do, we will be allowing them to sacrifice themselves for the school, and that our studies are most important, after all. We can't deny that this is rather true. Yet, isn't every girl the best judge of what means most to her individually? And is it such an ignoble thing to sacrifice self to Alma Mater? And aren't there other things in the world besides studies? No, of course we would not say let lessons go entirely, but as we have said before, "D" is passing grade.

If we investigate we find that great majority of high-standing colleges have "D" for the lowest possible average for their Varsity players.

Originality is all right in its place, but why be absurdly odd?

DON'T QUIT!

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're treading seems all up hill,
When the funds are low, and the debts are high
And you want to smile, but have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest, if you must, but don't you quit.

Life is queer with its twists and turns,
As every one of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about,
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up, though the pace seems slow—
You may succeed with another blow.

Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man;
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup,
And he leaned too late when the night slipped down,
How close he was to the golden crown.
Success is failure turned inside out—
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt,
And you may never tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worse that you mustn't quit.—Exchange.

"THE FOOL"

seems to have discovered "the fool" to be a very great man.

The play ends with Mary Margaret and Mr. Gilchrist, gazing up into the star-illuminated sky, while voices outside sing, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing."

The play was perfect and the audience didn't seem to notice the absence of the characters, so realistically did Miss Huntington-Benjamin present them. Her charm of manner also made her one of the most delightful entertainers ever at State Teachers College.

$80,000 IN FURS AND GOWNS REVEALED IN "BLACK OXEN"

Scenes Laid in Beautiful Homes of New York's Exclusive Society Set.

A majority of the scenes from the Lloyd production are laid in and near New York and the interior settings used in filming of the drama are said to be some of the most artistic yet seen on the screen. In addition to the artistic backgrounds, "Black Oxen" is further enhanced pictorially by the elaborate wardrobe worn by Miss Griffith and other members of the cast the costumes and furs representing a cost of nearly $80,000.

The principal theme of the story develops when Marame Zatianny, rejuvenated by a marvelous glandular treatment, returns to New York after an absence of 34 years, to quietly attend the sale of her American business interests and return to Austria to assist in relief work. A visit to a first night theatrical performance, however, attracts the interest of Clavering, a newspaper man, and Dinwiddie, an old friend, and both men start immediately to ascertain who the charming visitor might be. Clavering is first to meet Zatianny and within a short time their acquaintanceship develops into a romance.

Zatianny, however, refuses to give her answer to Clavering's proposal of marriage until she has acquainted their friends with her true identity. When she reveals the fact that she is really old enough to be Clavering's mother, the newspaperman assures her that the great difference in their ages means naught to him. Zatianny puts his love to the test in many ways and finds his devotion is sincere.

Debating in her mind whether or not she is entitled to the love of a much younger man, Zatianny learns that Prince Hohenhauser of Austria has arrived in America to see her. The Prince scoffs at the idea of such a marriage as Clavering has proposed and with the entrance of a flapper, deeply in love with Clavering, into the story, the romance takes several sudden changes of course which are said to be filled with rich drama and considerable amusement.

Those who have seen "Black Oxen" declare that it contains all of the spice and entertainment of the Atherton novel and that with the advantage of the camera, Mr. Lloyd has given his subject a spirited picturization.

"Black Oxen" is to be presented at the Eaco Theatre, Monday, March 23, with appropriate musical settings and short reel subjects.

"I say, Pa, didn't you tell me the other day that it was wrong to strike anyone smaller than yourself?"

"Yes, Willie, that's what I said."

"Well, I wish you'd write my teacher a note and tell her, I don't think she knows."

When statistics are all in the Munsing Company is planning to design their products according to the composite results from the schools.—Kansas City Collegian.

A WILD GOOSE CHASE

Sometime ago, I happened to be walking up Buffalo street, when an unusual scene met my eye. No less than thirty Seniors were laboriously climbing that dreadfully steep HILL—that one that is so good for coasting, you know! Of course, my naturally curious disposition led me to seek the cause of such unseemly conduct. In answer to my inquiry, someone piped up, "We wouldn't Askew that!" Needless to say, that was Anna Branch. Finally, I found out that they were going on a Hunt and had chosen the road leading West. But certainly they didn't know what their destination was to be; yet when I told them so, Ruth shrieked out, "we are going down to the Appomattox Shore if we are Abel, but how in the world are we ever going to get there is the problem. Annie Miller thinks she sees Almonds on the trees, but we keep telling her we are not hunting almonds. I can't understand what's the matter with her, Ann, she doesn't either. Then our Kitty keeps running away and besides with Bertha continually counting that candy money and Susie talking like a magpie—well my only hope is that she will give out before we get there."

Suddenly, somebody shouted out:—"Oh, today is Valentine Day! As sure as we go hunting today, Flementine's heart will be Pierce(d) by Dan Cupid's arrow and that would never do!"

"No, indeed!" cried little Annie Lisle. "We can't afford to lose Flementine. Let's go back. We are all tired and Tucker(ed) out anyway."

With that, they all agreed to turn back toward S. T. C. and pursue their wild goose chase another day when circumstances seemed more favorable and when there was less danger from Cupid's darts.

ROLLING STATISTICS

Some call it a fad—just done by a few—but statistics, and figures don't lie and then show that the majority of the girls really roll them—their own.

The Munsing Underwear Company has sent out questionnaires to colleges all over the United States to find what percentage of the girls roll their hose in summer and what percentage in the winter. The gathering of statistics here has been done by the clothing hygiene classes.

One hundred and ten girls between the ages sixteen and twenty-three, were asked to fill out blanks. Of these eighty-one rolled their hose in the summer. But in the winter forty-four of them get cold feet, in common parlance and nearly scientific exactness, and only thirty-seven wear them rolled.

CUCKOO'S CACKLES

I. B. Cuckoo received from a friend some excellent advice on Dining Room Eddy Cattle:

Don't use up all your strength lifting the feather-weight water pitcher. You might need some of it to cut your meat or to lift the dishes to pass them to the one next to you.

Remember you're not at home. Never ask the maid for a second glass of milk. Save it so there will be more for next time.

Be sure to take up your peas on a fork, instead of a knife so they will not spill down the collar of the person at your left.

By all means, eat everything on the table so you will not have hash for the next meal.

I hear one of the classes is planning for a Circus. Judging from the compliments some of the girls received while at home we'll have more than enough who feel like applying for the position of leading elephant.

From what crossed my eyes on that sleety morning in January, they'll have plenty of acrobats, too.

Never mind, girls, if you want to regain your Forms Divine just visit Madame Max Inc. in her exclusive parlor at Billys 6. Methinks some one told me that that girl was an ardent follower of all these Get Skinny Quick Methods.

Well, folks, it'll be a wintry day in summer when you see me again.

If, I. B. Cuckoo U. R. Z.

According to the New York Evening Post, the women students at Cambridge and Oxford lead a somewhat unpleasant life. At Cambridge, the men break down the gates of women's colleges, and stamp and groan when a woman enters a lecture room. At Oxford, any don or professor may exclude women from his lectures. Those who are not excluded attend with such zeal that the men students complain bitterly that they choose the best seats. American girls, however, are more popular than the English, partly because they dress more stylishly, and partly because the men students at both Oxford and Cambridge share, to some extent, the same pleasing notion that exists throughout Europe, that all Americans are millionaires.

Brown Students Vote on Compulsory Chapel.

Brown University students voted 460 to 290 against compulsory chapel which has been in force there since 1754. A vote was also taken concerning the inauguration of afternoon classes on the schedule this present semester. By a vote of 600 to 154 they indicated their desire to return to the old schedule. Their objection was that men working their way through college have found late classes a hardship and that the football coaches last year complained that Brown would soon be without an adequately trained team unless the members of the squad found it possible to report before 5 o'clock.

A stream of oil has been discovered beneath the campus of the University of Texas. The money derived from this source will form a permanent endowment fund for the institution.

Woodrow Wilson College

Last year the Chamber of Commerce of Milledgeville, Ga., instituted a drive for funds for the establishment of a Woodrow Wilson Memorial College. Pledges amounting to $500,000 were raised. A tract of ten acres was purchased and the drive for funds was made country-wide through the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor.

A committee of educational experts headed by President Sidney Mezes of the College of the City of New York, and David F. Houston, a member of the Wilson Cabinet, were requested to advise as to the type of college to be created. Limitation of the student body to not more than 400 or 500, enrollment of only those students who show unmistakable signs of becoming leaders; limitation of number of subjects taught to those conducive to intellectual leadership; good salaries offered to men of high ability, were the recommendations made by the committee.

This advice will in the main be followed. Quality, not quantity, say the proponents of the cause, will be the keynote of the college — the type of instruction that Woodrow Wilson himself would have most heartily approved. — New Student.

RECREATION HALL OPENED WITH DANCE

Bad Language.—It's a wonder money doesn't bluish when made to talk the way it does by some people. — Des

State Student Volunteer Convention Met at Lexington

The Student Volunteer Board of Virginia, held its regular yearly convention from March 20, to March 23, at Lexington, under the auspices of the Student Volunteer Board of Washington and Lee University.

About two hundred students from the different colleges in the State, some Student Volunteers and some Y. W. C. A., and Y. M. C. A. representatives gathered there to learn of the Christian work at home and abroad and to try to discover more fully Jesus' way of life.

The convention stands out for the excellency of its speakers. There were several and not one but what held your interest during his entire talk. Mr. Gordon Moore, State Y. M. C. A. secretary, told of some of the world's Y. M. C. A. is doing in the foreign field. Mrs. Motte Martin, of Africa, and Miss Lavallette Dupuy, of Korea, told of the work in their respective fields, showing the great opportunities for educational, industrial, and medical work, and emphasizing the fact that tact, humility, and understanding, are necessary qualities in a foreign missionary. Mr. A. J. Ranson, of India, told the students not to think that the so-called heathen drank in what the missionaries said with open mouths; on the other hand, they question much that is said and refuse to believe some, giving very good reasons for doing so. Dr. Stauffien, head of the National Student Volunteer Organization, told the volunteers that they must strip foreign missionary work of all its glamour and consider it as a regular job to be done well. He also told them that the volunteer should not be considered any more worthy of honor and glory than the person who stays at home and does his job well in a Christian spirit.

Especially interesting were Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Williamson, young missionaries, returning on their first furlough from Mexico, where Mrs. Williamson is nurse and Mr. Williamson teaches in a school. They brought back many examples of the beautiful hand work of the Mexican Indians.

At the end of the convention, the officers for the coming year were announced. Among them, was Frank D. Costenbader, of Hampden - Sidney, president.

FORMER STUDENT ADVANCES

Miss Pauline Brooks Williamson, Class of 1906, Pi Kappa Omega, who has for several years been State Rural Supervisor in charge of Health work, has recently been appointed head of the School Health Bureau of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, of New York. Miss Williamson will enter upon her duties the first of May and her headquarters will be in New York City. Our best wishes follow her into her new field but we are sorry for Virginia to lose her.

The Farmville Band gave a concert in the auditorium Sunday afternoon, March 21. This band is improving rapidly, and we wish them success.

"SEVENTEEN" A SUCCESS

PRESENTED BY THE JONGLEURS

MISS BESSIE RANDOLPH

Recommended for Honor

The Jongleurs of Hampden Sidney presented "Seventeen," on March 20, in the S. T. C. auditorium.

The cast was well-chosen and each lady acted "his" part well. Lola Pratt, May Parcher, Jane Baxter, Mrs. Baxter and Ethel Boke were perhaps the most difficult characters to portray. Jane deserves special mention, for her "bread and butter, and apple sauce" was very good indeed. May Parcher did not freeze as the audience expected her to do, she just imagined it was July and went on with her acting regardless of her attire. "Sweet Lola Pratt" took her part well and had all her lovers under flapper control as well as "Flopie," who acted exceedingly well.

Porterfield portrayed the character of "Seventeen" with acting a little above that of the average college play. He left his audience guessing if he was really seventeen. Dechert assisted him in his song, "Oh, Lola Pratt sweet Lola Pratt, I wonder what you are gazing at?" The audience seemed to be more impressed with this act than any in the play, for days afterwards, its sweet refrain could be heard through the halls of S. T. C.

Willie's friends were very good and Joe Bullit was no coward when it came to giving up his dances with "Sweet Lola."

To come back to the beginning, Genesis, though dark was the beacon light of the play!

THE SCHOOL SEAL

Have you ever seen your school seal? You may think this an odd question and of course you will say "yes." The seal appearing on our rings, and school stationery, is not our seal, but Harrisonburg's, and Radford's.

The original school seal will appear on the cover of the Literary Magazine, which will make its appearance about the middle of next month.

NOTICE

The first edition of The Literary Magazine will go to press April 16. All contributions must be in the box in The Rotunda office door before April 1. If you have any essays, stories, or sketches, or poems you think worthy of publication, please submit them.

A Fashion Show will be held in the auditorium tonight.

Nomination Ballot

In previous elections, only a few nominations have been made for the officers. Every girl in school should nominate the girl she thinks best suited for each position. If you do not do this, you are not fulfilling your duties as a citizen of the school. Take part in elections, and nominations.

Fill in these blanks, cut out and drop it into the box in the reception hall:

Thursday night, the dignified Seniors, had to make their bow to the young Freshmen, when the Freshies simply walked-over them in the final Championship Basketball game of the season, by a score of 81-7.

The game was very amusing from beginning to end, altho both teams played a good game. The shooting of Perkins, as well as Hall and Jones for the Freshmen, was indeed outstanding.

Seniors, you might be the oldest, and most dignified and most intellectual, but — when it comes to basketball, — well, your green little Freshies can't be beat! Nevertheless, you did well, and the old school is proud of you.

This game ended the Basketball season, with the Freshmen as champions.

Three cheers for Freshmen!!!

The line-up was as follows:

Freshmen	Seniors
Jones F
Hall F
Mitchell S
Reid S
Zacharias G
Gilson G

Substitutes: Ward for Reid; Perkins for Jones; Hall for Jones; Jones for Hall.

VARSITY GOES TO WILLIS MOUNTAIN

Did you say Willis Mountain? Oh! Gee, don't make me laugh. Miss Graham took the Varsity up Willis Mountain last week-end, and to hear them tell about it, you would die laughing.

It was a grand time from nine in the morning, when the truck drove off, until they came laughing back at seven.

Food? Everything that you could wish on a picnic. Toasted weenies, marshmallows, sandwiches, drinks and everything.

If you want to hear more about the trip, just ask a member of the Varsity, and then stop her if she raves too much.

VOLLEY BALL

Volley Ball is progressing!

All the classes are practicing, and next week we are anticipating some lively games. Next week will end the Volley Ball season. Baseball will be the next sport to be engaged in. We are looking forward to some good games in Base Ball this spring. Work for Track and Field Day, will begin very soon.

A prehistoric city, believed to be the oldest site of civilization in the United States, has been partially dug out of the sand-hills of southern Nevada, reports M. R. Harrington, director of an expedition working under the joint auspices of the Museum of the American Indian of New York, and the State of Nevada.

The Y. W. C. A. Social Committee entertained the new girls Thursday afternoon, March 26.

SELF-EXAMINATION

Has it been your habit to resort occasionally to self-examination? It appears that we are all prone to look with more or less agreeable reflection upon our own accomplishments. We are all too often filled with a sort of pride in ourselves—thinking ourselves, as did the Pharisee, that we are not like other men. But it is well for us to sometimes stand aside and look at ourselves for the purpose of a critical analysis—not for the purpose of self derogation, but for self-discovery. "The calling of a man's self to a strict account is a medicine, sometimes too piercing and corrosive."—(Bacon.)

We may, however, safely take the chance on the medicine being too piercing and corrosive, for most of us will avoid a dose so large as to produce such a result. The truth is that mental and moral growth and work depend very largely on humility, although some persons may be so self-satisfied as not to understand or desire humility of any brand. We should not so far underestimate ourselves as to become timid, groveling, or gelatine-spined, but neither should we be puffed up and over-confident. "Pride goeth before a fall." An ancient writer said: "If a man thinketh himself to be something when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself." But the damage goes very frequently far beyond merely deceiving one's self. It may even go so far as to destroy the good esteem of one's associates. A man could not wish more harm upon himself than this. So, we all need to occasionally take an inventory of ourselves. Perhaps we shall, after all, discover imperfections, even though they be small ones.—Tech.

The time of election for officers for 1925-26 is at hand, and many serious questions confront all those who have a part in the electing of officers. The general attitude of the school is largely affected through the influence of those in important offices. It is therefore, very urgent that all officers be chosen with the greatest care and precision. This is one of the most delicate periods of the college year and careful thought is due all nominations.

Who knows what may happen in the next few weeks? This is the time of choosing. Talent cannot be hidden for long, so many may be unexpectedly chosen. Be ready!

Every one thinks—it is a natural function for some people, but do college girls think deeply or consistently or are they too prone to jump at hasty conclusions and declare unprincipled opinions which may be regretted later. The little slogan, "count ten before you speak" is still applicable and only needs to be used more freely. There would doubtless be less confusion about matters of interest to all if more careful and concentrated thought might be given to those things which really require thought, instead of such exuberant chatter-chop. Exchange.

AMERICAN SCHOLARSHIPS FOR BRITISH STUDENTS

A group of twenty scholarships for British graduate students patterned after the Rhodes plan, have been established by the Commonwealth Fund of New York.

The fellowship for British graduates will be available at any of the twenty-six universities which on January 1, 1925, were members of the Association of American Universities. A British committee of award, whose honorary chairman is the Prince of Wales, will examine each candidate as to character, ability, qualities of leadership, health and general fitness.

Each fellowship is for two years, with the possibility of a third year being granted to a limited number for satisfactory reasons. While each student may select his own university, in order to secure adequate distribution, not more than three fellowships will be awarded in one institution in any one year. The exact amount of the fellowship has not been announced but will be approximately $3000.

"The Rhodes scholarship," says a statement by the Commonwealth Fund, "have enabled American students not only to enrich their education from an academic point of view, but through study and travel in England and on the continent to gain a wider understanding and outlook upon world affairs. It seems fitting that by a reversal of the process similar opportunities should be offered to British students."

The Commonwealth director also believes "That International understanding can be forwarded in no more practicable way than through the provisions of such international educational opportunities." The New Student.

Weekly Program

AT THE EACO THEATRE—WEEK MARCH 30th-APRIL 4th.

MONDAY and TUESDAY—"AMERICA." "America" is the best picture Ever Made; the best play ever staged. It sets a new standard in the picture play as high and commanding as "The Birth of A Nation" set in its day, so said Martin Quinn, editor of the New York World. To the students of history, "America" will be an inspiration; to the schoolboy it will be an education, and to the man ignorant of the country's early struggles, it will be a revelation. Film fans, you who rave about Good Pictures you have seen, see "America" and you'll have something to brag about. No man, woman or child should miss seeing this great production.—Also Pathe News Monday, and last episode of "Wolves of the North Tuesday.—Matinee each day at 4.

WEDNESDAY—"THE LOVE BANDIT."—A thrilling drama of a society girl, forced to wed a man primitive in love and hate, who locks the door to her heart on her wedding night. It is a gripping drama of red blood and blue enacted by a special cast.—Also Aesop Fable.

THURSDAY and FRIDAY—"FEET OF CLAY." A Super-Special Paramount Production directed by Cecil DeMille, and enacted by a big special cast. This is a brilliant, spectacular production from the screen's master-director. Lavishly beautiful and loaded with thrills. It is the amazing story of a girl who goes from parties and petting at seventeen to marriage and responsibilities at twenty-one. In this picture, you will see hundreds of scenes more thrilling, realistic and more sumptuously staged than any you have ever seen before on the screen. YOU'LL NEVER FORGET "FEET OF CLAY." Also good comedy each night, and orchestra music Friday night.

SATURDAY—VIOLA DANA in the Special Paramount Picture "OPEN ALL NIGHT."—A fast-stepping story of the wide-open places of PARIS. Filmed on a big scale, with an unbeatable cast. The story of a bored wife in search of thrill—If you want to laugh and grow younger, see this picture.—Also fifth episode of "GHOST CITY."—Matinee at 3:30.

ADMISSION—to S. T. C. girls: Wednesday and Saturday, 20 cents; Monday and Tuesday, 50 cents; Thursday and Friday, 35 cents.

ADVICE TO GIRLS WHO WRITE US LETTERS

If you must save ink, at least don't use "c" for "see."

Don't tell us about your affairs with somebody else. We can't help it.

Don't underscore words. We are far enough advanced to know what you want stressed.

Don't give the excuse that you have some others to write. That doesn't compensate for only thirty-three words and doesn't make us feel any better.

We don't give a whoop about the weather so don't tell us about it. And if it makes you feel blue it's all the same to us.

Don't bother to ask us about why we don't write you. If we don't it means one of two things. Either we haven't got time or we don't want to.

Don't apologize for your letter being late. We're not as anxious to get it as you think.

Don't bother to mark little crosses for misses. We'll ask for them when the time comes.

Exclamation marks don't thrill us and neither do dashes. *@!?!() the dashes.

—And we ain't sorry for poor little you just because you have a test tomorrow. We have tests too.

Anonously yours,
A Gripped Cynic.
—Davidsonian.

"MEN"

Once upon a time I thought I understood men and could marry one of them with my eyes shut—but, alas!

I have discovered that if you flatter a man it frightens him to death. And if you don't flatter him, he is bored to death.

If you permit him to make love to you he gets tired in the end.

And if you don't he gets tired in the beginning.

If you believe all he tells you, he thinks you are a fool; and if you don't he thinks you are a cynic.

If you argue with him in everything, you soon cease to charm him.

If you wear gay colors, rouge and startling hats, he hesitates to take you out.

And if you wear a little brown toque and plain tailor-mades, he takes you out and gazes all the evening at some other woman in gay colors, rouge and startling hats.

If you are jealous of him, he cannot endure you, and if you are not, he cannot understand you.

If you join in his gaieties and approve of his smoking, he vows you are leading him to the devil; and if you disapprove and urge him to give them up, he vows you are driving him to the devil.

If you are affectionate, he soon wearies of your kisses; and if you are cold, he soon seeks consolation in some other woman's kisses.

If you are a sweet, old-fashioned clinging vine, he doubts that you have a brain.

If you are modern, advanced and independent, he doubts that you have a heart, or scruples.

If you are cute and babyish, he longs for a mental mate, and if you are brilliant and intelligent, he longs for a helpmate.

And all the time, though he is falling in love with you for just what you are, he is spending the days trying to remodel you, to make you over into what you are not, never were, and never can be, but "A man's a man for all that."

"Ain't it the truth?"
—Marjorie Ferren in Johnsonian.

"My rubbers leak."
"Oh, never mind that — you have pumps inside of them."—Tech.

SAY IT WITH MUSIC
By Elsie Simpson

Dear One:

I love you—let me call you sweetheart. Under the May moon and tropical palms, somebody loves me—it has to be you, sweet little you. Tessie, stop teasing me because they all love you. Nobody loves me—what'll I do? I wonder what's become of Sally, pretty, little blue-eyed Sally?

Please tell me you love me—you don't have to say it, just doodle do-do it. I'm bringing home the bacon to Paradise Alley and we'll have tea for two.

Red hot mama, ain't you ashamed because I'm all alone. I'm jealous of Charlie my boy 'cause last night on the back porch he took a kiss in the dark when your lips said no, no, but there was yes, yes in your eyes.

Well, some other day, some other girl, but good-bye, good luck, God bless you.

I love you truly,
Your buddy,
"Big Boy."

P. S.—Suppose I had never met you!

NUMBER 26.

TWO WEEKS HOLIDAY EASTER FACULTY MEMBER AND STUDENT ELOPE!

APRIL 8TH-22D

At a special call meeting of the Student Body, March 32, Dr. Jarman announced the Easter Holiday. Dr. Jarman, as is his custom, did not keep us guessing as to the length of the holiday, but announced it immediately upon his entrance into the room.

He said: "Easter Holiday will begin April 8th and end April 22nd." Much to his surprise the girls did not cheer, so he at once gave the reason for such a lengthy vacation. First, the faculty went to him and said if they didn't get some time off, they would go on a strike. Next, members of the Home Department came to him and said that all the girls were (Continued on page 3.)

NEWS IN BRIEF

Miss Jennie Tabb was elected president of the Farmville Woman's Club at its last meeting.

Mr. Grainger has been arrested for speeding. He is held in the Farmville jail for bail.

Mr. Bell renounces all belief in Evolution, says it's all Bologna.

Miss Davis will no longer require a note book of any kind.

Miss Graham now has the agency for all kinds of chewing gum and advocates it as the best exercise.

Miss Ruth Bartholomew has been dismissed from the library for allowing girls to get books out after 9:15.

The members of the faculty and the president of the Student Government have made many inquiries as to the health of Miss Ann Smith, because they have not received any calls from her.

Some members of the Home Department have been summoned before the court of Farmville for wearing their dresses over eighteen inches from the ground.

Students of Hampden-Sidney and S. T. C. have had a joint meeting and passed resolutions for the combination of these two colleges into a co-ed school.

A young lady took cyanide in the Farmville hotel today. She is still unconscious and her identity unknown. The only clues in the possession of the police are the initials V. L. on her handkerchief and she continually mutters "Mr. McCorkle." If any one of this name can give information concerning the young lady, the authorities will appreciate it.

DOUBLE WEDDING ANNOUNCED.

Invitations have been issued to the double wedding of a member of the Senior Class, and a member of the Junior Class. These two young ladies are very popular in school, both are officers of the Student Government Association. The wedding is to take place in the college auditorium with much pomp and ceremony, June 9, 1925. Dr. Joseph L. Jarman will give the brides away.

The two maids-of-honor will be Misses Maude Taliferro, and Elizabeth Morning, and the best men: Dr. Mal K. Turner, and Mr. Peter W. Fattig. The State Teachers College Seniors, and Hampden-Sidney Seniors, will serve as the other attendants, and Miss Carrie Sutherland and Miss Brownie Taliferro as ring-carriers. Baskets of snapdragons will be borne by the flower girls: Misses Florence Stubbs, Elizabeth Davis, Grace Russell and Grace Mix.

The bridal party will take an extended tour to Prospect, Virginia, and on their return, will reside at the Farmville jail.

SOCIAL EVENTS

The Student Committee gave a Bridge Party for the benefit of the Student Building, during meditation hour Sunday in the new gymnasium.

The season has opened with unusual dash and spirit. There are quite an extraordinary number of charming and beautiful debutantes. They will add a great deal to the society here in Farmville. The debut will be made early in the season, as quite a few of them are going abroad this summer. We welcome these charming and delightful ones to our fold.

The following are debutantes of the spring season:

Polly Taylor.
Ann Conway.
Dana Hill.
Grace Noel.
Sue Puckett.
Lucy Haile Overby.
Mary Vaughan.

Mr. Atkinson, (Cousin Tommy,) has been elected president of the Lion's Club. The Club takes great pleasure in announcing the following members:

Miss Ruth Bartholomew, Miss Virginia Vincent.

A dance will be held in the Recreation Hall Wednesday night, April 1st, to which the town and Hampden-Sidney boys are cordially invited.

The Junior and Senior Parlors are quite deserted since the fire escapes and roof garden have been given over to the dates.

SENSATIONAL ROBBERY

$10.00 In Jewelry Stolen

At the Casino last night, where a Ball Masque was given, in honor of Flora Bella, the rage of Paris Boulevards, a sensational robbery was enacted. Miss Grace Russell, New York society leader of note, in the midst of the gaiety, attired as a Gypsy Queen, and dancing with the distinguished Colonel Paul Jones as "Rudolph Vazclino," was the victim. What changes may take place in the twinkling of an eye! For a four rope strand of Venetian pearls, a diamond brooch and an amethyst tiara were slyly removed from Miss Russell without a moment of warning. A fleeting glimpse of the thief was obtained by Colonel Jones and through his perfected method of psycho-analysis, it is hoped that the scoundrel will soon be brought to bay.

PARTIES EVERY NITE

Our "puritanical college" has cast off all conventions and now can be called "The Mecca of the Modern Girl." The metamorphosis did not take place gradually, but was a very rapid advance into modernity. Our Alma Mater makes special note of this in the catalogue and offers to all classmates equality of privileges. Some of the numerous comforts which they administer to our life of leisure, range from the darning of hose by the Y. W. C. A. Service Committee, to making building extensions for our carousing.

Some of the students have been so absorbed in machine riding, nocturnal trips to town, having their dates appear religiously three times a day and every night of the week, that they have failed to notice such elaborate appendages to our dorms as the new fire escapes. Our school has displayed admirable taste in coloring them green, the latest spring shade. The State has proceeded so far as to furnish furniture for them. Each room will have access to one of these air porches with the moon always in attendance to keep the party from getting too sentimental. The hostess of the party will not be required to ask for any permissions as they are ancient history here. So invite all your gentlemen friends and let this be as much your Mecca on warm evenings as is the oasis to the Arabs.

NEW ELECTIONS

As a result of the election of officers for the five major organizations in school, we wish to announce the following:
Pres. Student Gov. Asso. Dot Meyers.
Pres. Y. W. C. A. Polly Taylor.
Editor of the Ptandua. Evelyn Peak.
Ed. Virginia. Lucille Geoghegan.
Pres. Ath. Asso. Maywood Map.

SOPHOMORES DEFEAT FRESHMEN

The Sophomore Volley Ball team defeated the Freshman team in the gymnasium last night. As the Freshmen did not make a single point in the entire game, only one game was played. The Freshmen showed good spirit, but physically, they were very weak, and not a single one of them were able to get a ball over the net. We wish to suggest that "Jack," "Zach" and Virginia develop the muscles of their arms.

SPLASH

Splash! Splash! Splash! This is what you'll hear when you go over to the swimming pool. My, but it's a sight to see some of those girls trying to swim and dive—but it won't be long before they'll all be experts with Mr. Coyner as instructor. All hours of the day and night the pool is practically filled with girls. Yes, sometimes it even overflows when Virginia Brockwell and May White jump in.

Crew No. 1 Victorious

Wednesday afternoon the Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors presented a most spectacular sight when they started off the boat race of the season on the beautiful Appomattox. The Freshmen coming in first.

The race was thrilling from beginning to end, first, the Freshmen Crew I, getting ahead, then Crew II, the Sophomores, then Crew IV, the Seniors, and Crew III, the Juniors, but Crew I seemed to get its second wind in the last few minutes of the race, and left the rest far behind.

The girls in their white Jerseys and blue trunks, swaying back and forth in perfect unison, as they rowed, were a sight worth seeing.

There will be another boat race very soon! Just wait for it!

COMING ATTRACTIONS

We wish to announce the remaining numbers of the Lyceum course:
April 2—Fred Stone in Stepping Stones.

April 8—Mrs. Fiske in The Rivals.

April 19—Joint Concert of Harry Lander, John McCormack, and Galli Curci.

April 20—Jack Dempsey in his latest victory.

April 30—Lecture by Pres. Coolidge.

May 7—Fritz Kriester.

A GREAT SECRET

There had been so much excitement during the week, that everyone thought surely nothing could cause them to wonder, but the most astounding thing during the whole of the S. T. C. year, made everyone open their eyes once more.

"Have you heard the latest?" wearily announced the questioned one.

"No, what's happened now?"

"Well, honey, you've got a choice piece of scandal before you. I never was so shocked in my life."

"Quit raving and tell me what you are talking about, I'm bursting with curiosity."

Having aroused her companion's curiosity almost to the breaking point, the gossip spreader was loath to part with her choice enlightenment in a hurry. She did love to keep 'em dangling.

"Really you know I can hardly believe it. I never even dreamed of a member of our faculty eloping with a student and him of all people. Funny things 'shore' do happen, don't they?"

"Eloped. Who are you talking about? Do you think I'm a mind-reader, kindly furnish the names, or I'll ask some one else, quick! Oh! Stop laughing and tell me! You make me perfectly furious!"

Ha! At last her victim was aroused to the proper degree and lest she lose the pleasure of seeing the shade upon her face when the suspicious news was disclosed, she must divulge her news.

"Now come closer so I can whisper. Can't you know it's a secret."

"What?!! Not Mr. Wynne? I just can't imagine him eloping with—"

GIANTS VS. MIDGETS

In the tennis tournament Saturday, on the new tennis courts, between the Midgets, Edna Hall and Ethel Covington, and the Giants, Evelyn Beckham and Virginia Brockwell, the Giants won two sets out of three, one of the sets being a love set. The Giants will play singles Monday for Championship.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Pi Kappa Omega Society takes pleasure in announcing the following initiates: Miss Elizabeth Crute, Polly Taylor, and Dorcas Cheney. It also intends to announce that on account of grades and general conduct the following girls have been asked to resign: Misses Cornelia Dickinson, Ann Conway, Evelyn Beckham and Dana Hill.

ADVICE TO THE LOVE LORN

Dear Fanny Sue—I am a young man twenty years of age and I go with a young girl of seventeen. She loves me and I love her. She wants to marry me. Do you think we're too young?

I had a date with her last Sunday, but she called me up and told me she could not fill the date as she was going away. I found out afterwards that she had a date with another young man.

Should I still continue going with her? BROWN EYES.

Brown Eyes:—Marry her by all means. try cave man stuff.

Dear Fanny Sue—I am in love with a girl two years younger than myself. We want to get married, but I have no money in the bank and my present position is only paying me twenty dollars a week. We would like to know whether it would be advisable to get married under these conditions.

C. R. S.:—By all means try it.

Dear Fanny Sue—I am a girl of 19 I have been going steadily with a man of 28 for the past seven months. He says he loves me dearly, and I love him, too.

However, he has often said that he never would marry. Now I would love to marry him. I have had chances to go out with men who are "serious," but as I love this man only I have refused to go out with them.

Kindly advise me as to what I should do. WORRIED.

Carried:—Propose to him.

STYLE HINTS

PARIS, April 1.—Modern Eve is still a bit of feminine loveliness here in spite of the masculine attire, she is adapting, in China and Africa, dresses and other wearing apparel are just as frivolously dainty and feminine as ever before, perhaps even more so; for extremes always touch, as the French very wisely put it.

The newest development is the bustle.

Molyneuf is showing his usual charming models this season, they are a review of the Victorian costumes.

A novel scarf, hoop-skirt, which comes from Lucile's hands, is worn over a slip of woven grass.

Stunning little divided skirts are shown in pink georgette. These are very effective against a white horse.

FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1925.

NUMBER 27

ELECTION OF FIVE MAJOR OFFICERS.

The election of five major officers in school took place Monday, April 6th. More votes were cast at this election, than at any previous election in the history of the school. Five hundred and eighty-seven votes were cast.

This shows that the present student body realize their duties of citizenship more fully than any one before. They are to be congratulated and it is hoped that even more will do their duty in the coming elections.

The result of the election was as follows:

Student Government Kate Trent
Y. W. C. A. Mary Lynn Petty
Rotunda Lucy Haile Overby
Virginian Cornelia Dickinson
Athletic Association, Eleanor Zacharias.

KATE TRENT

We are, indeed fortunate to have for our president of Student Government next year, Katherine Trent.

Kate received her diploma in 1922, and was a most successful teacher in the Richmond system for two years. But realizing the value of a degree, she came back to us in the fall, when she was immediately elected treasurer of the Student Committee. There is, however, no activity on Campus from Training School up, we do not find Kate connected with, in fact, she is what we all want to term an all-round girl.

Our president's views on the subject of Student Government are decided and broad. They are first, more Self than Committee Government; more honor than watch system; fewer rules, but honor bound obedience to those we have and every girl at S. T. C., an honorable person to be trusted.

We can clearly see that from these views, Kate understands us and is for us, and we are ALL for Kate, and will stand by her like a man.

MARY LYNN PETTY

Mary Lynn Petty came to Farmville in September, 1923, from Roanoke, highly recommended to the Y. W. C. A. She was president of the Girls' Reserve of Roanoke High School one year and was very successful in her work there. In 1923-24, her first year here, she served on the music committee, and did her work so well that she was appointed chairman of that committee for 1924-25. When Nancy Lynn did not return last fall, Frances Howard was elected to fill her place thus leaving the vice-presidency vacant. Mary Lynn was elected vice-president. Her work in that office this year recommended her to the student body and thus she was elected president for the coming year. Mary Lynn is thorough in everything she does and the student body feels sure that the work will be carried on well under her leadership.

OVERBY—ROTUNDA

As a result of the recent elections, Lucy Haile Overby, heads the Rotunda staff for the coming year. Lucy Haile entered school at Farmville S. T. C., in September, 1923. Since that time, she has held the following offices:

Secretary of Freshman Class, '23-24.

Secretary of Sophomore Class, '24-25, and Joke Editor of the Rotunda, '24-'25.

When interviewed, Lucy Haile said: "This honor came upon me most unexpectedly, like a thunder-storm in the winter. Of course, I never dreamed of being nominated, much less elected, nevertheless, I realize that I am the very person for the place, and I expect to do my very best to keep up the standards of the Rotunda. It is quite a jump to be promoted from Joke editor to Editor-in-Chief, and I hope I won't forget and write jokes instead of editorials."

She caught me smiling just at this point, so in all seriousness, kicked me out of the Rotunda office door. I landed in Mr. Grainger's office on his typewriter. Mr. Grainger, himself fortunately was not at school, so I forthwith, sat down and typed this article.

We are sure that Lucy Haile will make the best kind of editor since she has shown herself to be one who thinks clearly and independently, and since she has that always-enjoyable quality of originality.

DICKINSON-VIRGINIAN

Ability, originality, and dependability, are some of the qualities that go to make up a good leader. In electing Cornelia Dickinson editor-in-chief of the Virginian, we realize that we have chosen one who will fill this place efficiently.

Cornelia always fits in wherever she is placed, and we know that the Virginian next year, will be one of the best yet. Since Cornelia has been at Farmville, she has been business manager of the Virginian, and circulation manager and typist of the Rotunda.

ZACHARIAS—ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

"Zach!"—Athletic Association! President! Is it hard to put these three words together and to say that Eleanor Zacharias has been elected President of the Athletic Association?

"Zach" says it's rather hard for her to realize it, but we can put those words together very easily, and feel more than satisfied in doing so.

"Zach" is only a Freshman, but a Freshman that has made herself well-known throughout the school.

A basketball player? Well, she was captain of the Freshman Basketball Team for 1924-25 and on the Varsity 1924-25, and she played on the Freshman Volley Ball Team also '24-25. She is working on her monogram now. Do we doubt "Zach's" ability to work as President of the A. A.?—Well—if you do—I don't!

SOPHOMORES WIN FROM JUNIORS

Wednesday night the Sophomores won two straight volley ball games from the Juniors, the score of the first game being 15-4, and that of the second, 15-8.

The games were not very fast, as a whole, but there were times when the ball was kept in the air for several seconds. Ware scored the largest number of points for the Sophomores.

THE INTER-RACIAL MOVEMENT.

There is a movement on foot throughout the South, to better the relationship between the blacks and whites. The concert given here Saturday evening, April 4th, by the Petersburg Normal and Industrial School and the essay contest concerning the relationship of blacks and whites, are for this purpose. Speakers are addressing audiences throughout the South, on this subject and inter-racial student groups have met for the promotion of understanding.

Dr. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia, recently expressed his views upon the subject.

The article concerning his speech, was taken from one of the daily newspapers of the State.

"Ignorance is no remedy for anything," President Alderman, of the University of Virginia, told an audience in the home of John Hays Hammond in discussing the negro problem and urging support of the Hampton-Tuskegee endowment fund.

"It is my belief," continued Dr. Alderman, "that the steeled policy of the Southern States, where the masses of negroes live, toward this backward people should be, and is growing to be, more and more, a scientific habit of investigation as to the facts of his progress, coupled with an intelligent and sympathetic interest in his development."

Dr. Alderman quoted John Morley as having once said that the negro problem was practically unsolvable, but that sensible men must continue to face it resolutely, quietly and justly. The main point of the matter, he went on, was that ignorance is no remedy for anything, a quotation from the late J. L. M. Curry. He continued:

"The best Southern thought on this matter is neither optimistic nor pessimistic, but watchful and steady. The point of view likely to prevail finally is the point of view that given foremost place to the Negro as an industrial asset, and to the standards of American character as affected by his presence in the largest self-governing undertaking of the white race."

"The hardest experiences of the negroes are yet to be, for the world will demand of them that they develop not only manual and industrial power, but these moral qualities necessary to win freedom through competition and self-effort. In no other way can freedom be won by a man of a race."

In conclusion, Dr. Alderman said: "Speaking as the president of an ancient university which is seeking to train leaders of the white race in social sympathy for men of all classes and conditions, in economic understanding, in scientific methods and in philosophic thinking, I express the hope that this movement started by Hampton and Tuskegee will go forward to success, and that Hampton and Tuskegee as the main educational reliances of the colored race in this country will be placed on solid and enduring foundations."

The Press Service Commission of International Co-operation of Atlanta, Ga., recently sent out the following article:

Basketball throw for distance.
500-yard relay.

The meet will be conducted under the auspices of the Athletic Association. The officials will be members of this class in the class in the Theory of Athletics, under the direction of Miss Graham.

All girls who wish to compete will, please sign up on the charts posted for that purpose and report for practice at once.

This is our first opportunity to compete against the other colleges in a Telegraphic meet. Let's make a record of which we can be justly proud.

THE CLUB FROM PETERSBURG ENTERTAIN

"What a wonderful concert they gave us tonight, I wouldn't have missed it for the world. Didn't they have marvelous voices?" These and other exclamations of pleasure would have greeted you on last Saturday evening, had you chanced to be near the auditorium, as the girls came out from the concert given by the negro glee club of the Normal and Industrial School at Petersburg. We were highly and charmingly entertained by these young men and women, and the only fault we could find was that it didn't last half long enough. How the songs which they sang, such as, "It's Me," "Mighty Lak a Rose," and "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," thrilled us for who has ceased to love old familiar pieces? We only hope they will favor us again soon.

Honorable mention should be given President Gandy, and others in charge of the work being done at Petersburg for what they have accomplished. This glee club has entertained large audiences throughout the whole State with their complete repertoire.

The only real obstacle to everlasting peace is the fact that there are more dogs than homes.—Sherbrook Record.

THE END OF A PERFECT THRILL

"Two weeks Holiday for Easter." Thus read seven hundred girls as they picked up the recent Rotunda. This magic and boldly written headline brought a chorus of "Oh's" joyfully rendered between squeals of delight. Then shuffling of paper in perfect unison, for continuance to page two, but the turning point brought sorrow and a chorus of "Ah's," sadly and bitterly rendered, for there blazed forth two words which sounded a death knell to all hopes and prevented a mad rush for the thrill of trunk-packing. These two words so agonizingly staring readers cold-blooded in the face were APRIL FOOL. Silence—it was just too hard to bear—nothing could be more cruel than this slap in the face. But soon came the old, rattle of knives and forks, and passing of plates, for as yet, the girls at S. T. C. have not lost their sense of humor. They even began to smile and laughter was heard as they read and reread the foolishness brought in by April. Perhaps they even forgot the heart-aches. —They are good sports!

AMBITIONS

Ambitions—just that simple word, and yet what tales untold

It holds for each and every one who strives to reach his goal:

'Tis a word that says "Go onward," don't linger on the way,

But climb Life's ladder, rung by rung, reach upward, day by day.

Ambitions are the very highest fruits upon the tree.

They grow upon the topmost branch, almost too high to see,

And there they hang until the time when human hands will grasp

The treasures which have meant to them a hard-earned, life-long task;

We all have our Ambitions, and yet we set the pace

Too slow to gain our hearts' desire—if we would win the race;

We must not sit with idle hands or walk with footsteps slow

If we would reach the heights of Ambition's path would have us go;

We must be up and doing for if we do not try

To grasp the best things in the world, they'll each one pass us by.

So reach out for the big things, success will come our way,

If we have Ambition as our aim, and forge on day by day.

— F. R. B.

Charles Lamb said that there are two races of men:—the race that borrows and the race that does not. Which race do you belong to?

I am afraid that the majority of the students of S. T. C. belong to the race that borrows. How many of us, before leaving for a week-end, visit all of our friends and acquaintances and casually make a mental inventory of their wardrobes, with the purpose of coming back later and borrowing a dress or coat? Probably ninety per cent. of us do. The other ten per cent. is divided into two classes. One very small class that doesn't approve of it. The other class is composed of those, too stout, too thin, or too short to wear anything except those garments which were made for them.

Charles Lamb also said that it was a pleasure to lend his most choice possessions to some people; but when he saw other people coming, he would immediately hide the things he most valued. He hated to say no, but he also hated to see his beloved books and other personal articles go into hands that would not properly appreciate and care for them. Samuel T. Coolidge often borrowed Charles Lamb's books. When he returned them, they were so enriched by his marginal notes and personal opinions, that they were doubled in value.

It has been said that we should not lend or borrow anything. Is there any harm in lending books or even an article of clothing to a person who cannot afford to buy the required necessities for themselves and who would return them in perfect condition? None of us are S. T. Coolidge, and we are unable to make borrowed articles more valuable. Isn't it better not to borrow at all, than to borrow and run the risk of injuring other peoples' property?

I wonder if there are any girls in school, who, when they see a girl coming with that borrowing gleam in the eye, feel like locking their closets, because, probably, some girl had borrowed her evening dress and ruined it at a dance?

I think every student of S. T. C. should have made the New Years resolution, to cease all borrowing.

Speaking of epidemics, can you think of a disease more contagious than Spring Fever? How it's contracted no one knows, but the germ simply attacks you without warning and you become a Spring Fever victim. The effect is unanimously the same, and it is seriously effecting the students at S. T. C. The animosity the same, and it is seriously effecting the students at S. T. C. The most noticeable characteristics are yawning, dragging footsteps, listlessness, complaining remarks and laziness. Are you a victim of this disease? The Spring Fever now has us in its grip, so we are all on the lookout for a remedy. How about this?—

"Don't let the Spring Fever now coming along,

Knock you out as it's doing so many,

Just make up your mind that you'll get down to work,

For there's much to be done—yes, a plenty!

And if you will buckle right down to your job,

While others about you are blue,

You'll find that they too, will begin to succeed,

By the standard set for them by you."

The Freshmen wanted caps, they got them! Now that they have them, they don't want them. The upper-classes did their part and showed their loyalty to the Freshmen by suggesting the caps and asking them to wear them. We have watched how the Freshmen took the honor, what use they made the privilege, at first they were enthusiastic. Caps were worn with great gusto, but now—the novelty has worn off,—perhaps once in a while, you see one or two Freshmen with their caps on. We have waited vainly, hoping that they would realize for themselves, that the honor which they coveted, and good sportsmanship they are known to show, were not being played up to. Alas, alas none such is true. So we now feel that it is our duty as well as our privilege to remind them of the fact that the Freshmen are requested to wear their caps from 4:15 to 7:30 on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and from 9:30 to 8:00 on Saturday. We have great hopes that a word to the wise will be sufficient. From now on, we shall expect to see Freshmen with their caps on. If this is not true, we shall have to take rigid measures to enforce the rule. Come on, Freshmen!

Weekly Program

AT THE EACO THEATRE WEEK APRIL 13TH-18TH, 1925

MONDAY—The Super-Special Production "THE ETERNAL CITY," with Barbara Lamar, Lionel Barrymore, Bert Lytell and many others in the BIG cast in which there are 20,000 people. This picture was produced in Rome with Premier Mussolini, the King of Italy and many other notable people being shown. The story is adapted from the world famous novel by Sir Hal Caine. This is a wonderfully fine production.—Also Pathe News.—Matinee at 4 o'clock.

TUESDAY—Pat O'Malley and Mary Astor in "THE FIGHTING AMERICAN." Just think of a picture in which, for love of a girl, one lone young man gets away with the entire air fleet of a great country, steals the general of its army, quells a rebellion and in the last scene wins the girl of his heart! Talk about romance—thrills—adventure! This picture is just packed with all three! —Also 2nd episode of "RIDERS of the PLAINS."—Don't miss it.—There will be a band concert immediately after the picture.

WEDNESDAY—Patsy Ruth Miller and Dustin Farnum in "MY MAN." A story of love, politics, adventure, humor, and high-finance, with intense dramatic situations and plenty of pep.—A picture with gripping situations and delightful comedy.—Also Aesop Fable.—Matinee at 4 o'clock.—Benefit Progressive Educational Club of S. T. C.

THURSDAY and FRIDAY—"THE WARRENS of VIRGINIA," from David Belasco's great stage success. A great love story of the Civil War, Robert E. Lee and U. S. Grant as the central figures of a romantic drama. "The Warrens of Virginia" was an original novel by George Cary Eggleston, eminent historian, notable for his school text books as well as his fiction. It is enacted by a most excellent Special Cast. It is an all-American play for all-American people.—Also good comedy each night and Orchestra Music Friday night.

SATURDAY—Shirley Mason in "MY HUSBAND'S WIVES," from a story by Barbara La Mar. The comedy and the drama of the loves of two women for one man. One man, a divorce and a second wife—the thrilling results. A photoplay in which love plays strangely.—You will like it.—Also 7th episode of "GHOST CITY."—Matinee at 3:30.

ON EATING A CLUB SANDWICH

After all is said and done, we have each one of us lived through our own particular ordeal. What yours was, I cannot say, but I can say with perfect safety, that mine was the consummation of my first club sandwich, for when I tackled this feat, I knew without doubt, that I had met my Waterloo.

The sandwich under discussion, was placed before me and well do I remember. There it posed in its monstrous three-story glory, an almost complete covering for the neat, blue-bordered plate. A bed of crisp lettuce and golden mayonnaise helped to enhance its beauty and decoration; the roof of the top-story of this remarkable edifice, were courageously standing eight perfectly placed tooth-picks.

To say that it looked inviting, would be putting it rather mildly, but in just what way should I reply to the invitation? Ah! that was the question. I knew just what reply I would like to make, and it would be most informal. Simply to lift the sandwich bodily from its resting place and tackle it in my own way, but one more glance delayed this procedure. An article of such dimensions could hardly be manipulated by this method in a crowded hotel dining room, and so my answer must be formal.

Delicately availing myself of the necessary requirements, I diligently set to work with a smile on my face which faded all too soon. This was no laughing matter. The dull knife and the dry toast made a very poor combination, the lettuce positively refused to curl itself in a lady-like manner upon my fork, and when I saw that my hostess had graduated peacefully and with the highest honors from her dinner, I found myself still grappling with the crispy bacon from the first half of my sandwich and there upon the plate lay the other half yet to be accounted for.

Needless to say, I was embarrassed and the sarcastic smile bestowed upon me by my friend is with me yet, for upon leaving the dining room, I graciously exclaimed, "I surely did enjoy my lunch, and.....I.....just adore club sandwiches."

Sandwiches, when hungry, are very hard to beat. And I'll admit a well-made club, is surely quite a treat. It is my favorite of them all—and yet, I must bemoan That I can love them so much more when eating them at home.

GOOD NEWS

The robin is calling, "Cheer-e-ree!! cheer-e-ree!!"

In the apple tree down by the gate, While down in the stream the sunbeams gleam And the sleepy trout lazily wait.

The violets gleam through the carpet's green On the bank where the shade lies deep, While under the hill the daisies still Are listening my secrets to keep.

The wind blows gaily from out of the South With a mingling of rapture and glee, And brings the good news that I've waited to hear That Spring is coming to me!

9012 New Books Published During Last Year.

A total of 9,012 different books were published during 1924, according to statistics compiled for the April International Book Review by F. E. Woodward. For convenience these books are divided into twenty-three classes. Fiction, it is stated, leads in point of numbers, having a total of 1,226, representing 871 new books, 350 new editions, and five pamphlets, which is a gain of 146 over the output of 1923, and giving a proportion of 13.6 per cent. of fiction to the world. This per centage is the same as for 1920, and is larger than for any intervening year since 1908.

Of the total of 1,226, there were 846 American authors, 270 foreign authors, whose books were made in America, and 110 imported editions, according to a further capitulation.

Theology and religion the second largest class, closed the year with 809 titles, including 657 new books, 51 new editions, and 114 pamphlets—a gain of 89 over the figures of 1923. Three-fourths of these books were by American authors.

Next to theology, in point of numbers, according to the statistics, comes the department of poetry and drama, with 731 entries, divided into 505 new books, 72 new editions, and 154 pamphlets—a gain of 64 over the figures of 1923. The high water mark in this group, it is asserted, was reached in 1914, when 902 were recorded, and this was the culmination of a substantial development which began as long ago as 1898.

Science occupies the next place on the list with 645 entries which includes, however, only mathematical and physical science. The next class is juvenile, which has 538 books, registering a loss over the previous year. Sociology and economics has 531 books.

CHANGED HIS VIEWS

COMPLETELY

Student's Attitude Transformed by Inter-racial Conference Group.

By R. B. Eleazor

An interesting feature of the Inter-racial Movement in the south has been the setting up of inter-racial student groups in a number of college centers, by which white and colored students meet at intervals for the promotion of understanding. Interesting results are reported. Misapprehensions have been cleared up, knowledge has taken the place of rumor, and confidence has supplanted suspicion. The following story shows how the plan works:

At an early meeting this year of the Atlanta group, made up of students from three white and three colored colleges, the question of higher education for negroes was raised. One white student, a Georgia Tech football star and student leader, frankly said he did not believe in it; he thought it unnecessary and undesirable. He was asked to bring in at the succeeding meeting a paper in support of his view, while a colored student was asked to prepare a paper on the other side. With much interest the group looked forward to the expected debate.

At the next meeting of the committee the white student was called upon for his paper. He replied, "I haven't any. When I began to look into the subject, I could find no basis for my opinion. As I studied it further my views changed completely. I now believe that colored students should have the same sort of educational opportunities that other people have."

"Not only so," he continued, "but I think we ought to do something about this matter. A great many people still think as I used to, just because they do not know. Let's go to work to get the facts over to them through the press and otherwise."

DID YOURS COME?

Ben Johnson little knew the truth in his lines:
"I sent thee late a rosy wreath
Not so much honoring thee
As giving it a hope that there
It could not wither here."

For the average girl is a naturalist, a Miss John Burroughs when it comes to saving the life of a corsage, especially an Easter Corsage! I've often watched them take the corsage off with greatest care, gaze adoringly at each bud or shattered blossom and tenderly place each stem in water some times diluted with ammonia. Any girl will give you the guide for THE PRESERVING OF EASTER CORSAGES. At first she may tell you that its all in the flowers, "Bill always sends that kind, very expensive, you know." (Some Bills do that.) Days after Easter, perhaps the next Sunday, you can see Easter Corsages full of flowers which seem to say "Why don't you let us die, we're so tired of living."

Boys are certainly fortunate in that most any kind of corsage will do.—(Some boys don't know this.) A background of feathers, tinfoil, and ferns with a few blossoms in front is all that is necessary. There you have an Easter Corsage good for automobile rides, or long Sunday walks, the latter is out of style. Any girl will pin on a bunch of withered once-were roses as if they had just come from the gardens of Killarney and still fresh with sparkling dew upon the rosy petals.

Oh! the joy of inhaling the sweet perfume and gazing down upon the corsage is too great to describe here. There is a feeling of supreme satisfaction, "Well, here I am with mine on."

And now to think, as all must think of the poor maid who is forced to say on Easter Morn, "I don't know why but mine didn't come." Give her your deepest sympathy, but keep it to yourself unless you care to hear numbers of reasons as to "why they didn't come."

Now, if at early dawn, you see some desperate, hopeful maidens robbing the borders of their violets and ferns, just stop to think what you'd do and how you'd feel if yours hadn't come."

"Don't you love a day like this?" She said to him, in youthful bliss. He said, "I badly need a rest. But certainly I'll do my best."

"A paper which pleases everybody, pleases nobody," so we leave a few jokes unprinted for those of wild imagination.

STYLES IN THE HEREAFTER

A revival was raging in a Virginia colored church. The rains had been considerable. One obstinate soul, however, resisted the efforts of the elder, called to account for his reluctance, he replied:

"Yo' see how it is, Elder, I've got a problem. I don't see how I'm gwine git mah shirt on oval mah wings when I gits to glory."

"Dat ain't yo' problem," retorted the shorter promptly. "Yo' problem is how is yo' gwine git yo' hat on oval yo' horns."—Everybody's Magazine.

MIXED MONTHS

There was a grocer by the name of March. One day the butcher came around and said: "March, the first of April the price of meat's going up."

"That's all right," said March. A day or two later the wholesale obber's salesman came along. "March the first of April the price of sugar is going up."

"All right," said March. A few days later the landlord came around and said: "March, the first of April the rent's going up."

"That's all right," said March. A few days later March put up a sign: "The First of April will be the Last of March."

EMBLEMS AWARDED BY ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

This year the Athletic Association has taken as its motto 'Athletics for all.' The motto 'Athletics for all' is a recent movement that seems to be sweeping the entire country. The New Student recently published an article 'We are Tired,' which represents the thought of the majority in present-day up-to-date colleges. The article follows:

"We are tired!"
"We are tired of this everlasting blah blah about a winning football team."

"We are tired of having a football coach who trains forty men and receives as large a salary as four instructors who teach one particular subject to six hundred students."

"We are tired of having Rotary clubs donate scholarships for the alleviation of the financial sufferings of 'deserving athletes.'"

"We are tired of having more of these deserving athletes draw good pay for performing some trivial job at the gym."

"We are tired of having these silly speakers get up and exhort the boys to 'back that team.'"

"We are tired of having Alumni come back and say what a fine half back there is in Podunk High School and can't we find a job for him."

"We are tired of having our inter-collegiate teams sent all over the Middle West on expensive trips while the physical training of the ordinary students is neglected."

"We are tired of this stadium bunk whereby 50,000 spectators watch twenty-two men—or rather employees—battle for supremacy."

"We are tired of having tutors furnished for failing athletes."

"We are tired of these athletes calveades to induce more athletes to come to Northwestern."

"We are tired of all the efforts to make this the last resting place for the dumb but brawny boys."

"We are tired of being told that Northwestern needs more men."

"We are tired."

If this be treason, make the most of it.

Our school, this year, is giving every girl an equal opportunity in athletics. The number of letters, monograms and numerals awarded, show that a larger number are taking an active part in athletics, than in any previous year.

VIRGINIAN NEAR COMPLETION

The Virginian staff wishes to announce that "The Virginian" will be here around May 1st. No deliveries will be made until all money has been collected. Do not keep other people from getting theirs by your slowness. Pay for your representation and book at once.

From all indications this will be the best Virginian ever published. The annual staff has worked to originate new ideas which will make the annual more attractive.

An annual is the best memory book of college life, and no girl's keep-sakes are complete unless she has a complete set of annuals. The Virginian is a book for every girl in school. It contains information and pictures of interest to every one. It is more than a record, it is a valuable treasure. Pay for your annual promptly.

A Circus Comes to Town.

Wednesday, April 15th, Sparks Circus came to Farmville. The parade came through town and past the school. It is hard to tell which enjoyed it most the training school children of the college girls. High street, in front of the college building was a mass of human beings. This crowd did not assemble in vain for the parade was excellent. There were ladies and gentlemen riding beautiful horses; great painted wagons drawn by prancing steed contained a variety of wild animals; large elephants and striped zebras exhibited themselves, and of course there were many clowns.

A steam piano and a band or two, played regular circus tunes, and vendors peddled balloons, devils and birds.

The circus gave an afternoon performance which was rather good. There were three rings and at the greater part of the time, something was happening in each. In the middle ring, the wild animals performed, lions, tigers, polar bears, leopards and seals. In the other rings, hogs, lamars, monkeys, ponies and horses acted. Beautiful girls did all kinds of stunts. They swang in rings, turned cart-wheels, rode horses and ane gave an act with doves. Two Japanese boys performed wonderful balance experiments.

The circus ended with a fox hunt, which took place around the entire track. Some animal, (perhaps a coon) was led around, followed by a pack of yelping hounds, close behind, which raced the huntsmen and women in red jackets. This was one of the most thrilling acts of the entire circus.

Between different stunts, the clowns acted and a line of queer looking figures riding still queerer objects, rode around the track.

The circus was certainly worth seeing, and anyone who missed it, missed a lot of fun.

LETTER FROM MISS EVERETT

LAKELAND, FLA., April 7, 1925.

The Rotunda,
State Teachers College,
Farmville, Virginia.

Dear Rotunda:

Some kind friend sent me your April 1st issue, and I nearly jumped to the ceiling at the thought of all those glorious holidays, but the real excitement came at the second head-line: who could they be? And then everything began to sound queer! And—well, it certainly was a regular April Fool, and I enjoyed it immensely.

It did look so good to see such sweet familiar names as Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Florence Stubbs, Miss Brownie Taliaferro, even if they were in the queerest positions.

I am always so interested in the Rotunda and in dear Teachers College, needless to say, I love it very dearly.

Sincerely yours,

DOUGLAS EVERETT.

COMING ATTRACTION

One of the most attractive attractions of the Lyceum Course this year, is "Peg O' My Heart," a play, to be presented by the Dramatic Club in the auditorium, April 23-24. Needless to say there will be an all-star cast, including Peggy Moore as the heroine, and Lila Colonna as the hero. Watch the Rotunda for further information about the new play.

VIRGINIA SCULPTOR PICKED TO FINISH STONE MT. MEM.

RICHMOND, VA., Apr. 16.—Augustus Lukeman, born in Richmond and widely known here and throughout will be picked to complete the Stone Mountain memorial to the Confederacy, left unfinished in the recent conflict of Gutzon Borglum with the controlling association, intimate friends of his were informed today.

Lukeman is a resident of New York. He has completed many important pieces of sculpture among which are numerous pieces of colossal size.

The mention of Lukeman's name follows that of Sievers, another Virginia artist who has declined the post.—Ex.

AUDREY CHEWNING

There was not a single girl in school who was not dismayed and sorry when she heard that Audrey Chewning would have to leave school. Audrey has not been well for some time, in spite of this, she continued her splendid work and had a ready smile for everyone. The doctor however, has at last had his way, and Audrey is resting up this term. We shall certainly miss her and her place is almost beyond filling, however "Every cloud has a silver lining" and this one proves no exception to the rule. As a result of Audrey losing this term, we hope to have her all of next year, instead of only part. We are missing Audrey and all wishing her a speedy recovery.

FRESHMAN WIN FROM SENIORS

Wednesday night the Freshman met the Seniors in a Volley Ball game, and won both games by a score of 16-14 and 15-5. These games were the best games of Volley Ball played on the court this year, the score in the first game being: 14-14 at one time. The Seniors had the Freshmen 8 to 1 at the beginning, but the Freshmen come up and won.

The line-up was as follows:

Freshmen	Seniors
1—Hall	Shotwell
2—Perkins	Morgan
3—Smith	Miller
4—Uptide	Walton
5—Woodson	Francis
6—Peak	West

Substitute—Dulaney for Peak.

EXCHANGE

A student at Strassburg University was caught cribbing by radio. He had a set in his room and one in his desk at the University. On examinations he sent the questions to his room and a friend in his room broadcast the answers.

Eureka College has a custom both strange and interesting. The Senior Class buries a fruit cake at the beginning of the year and unearths it at the end of the year. If they luckily do unearthe the cake, a feast follows. But if the Juniors find it before commencement, they fall heir to it.

A MESSAGE TO THE ALUMNAE

Now that the time is drawing near for commencement, our thoughts are riveted to the Alumnae who have been here for other such occasions, and we would like for them to know just how badly we want them back with us this year. They have left S. T. C. to embark on the ship of Life in various parts of the country, but they are with us in spirit throughout each year and when Commencement day rolls around, we long to see our old friends once more. Perhaps they think they are forgotten in the passing years, but they live on and on in our memory, and we long for the opportunity of clasping the hands of our Alumnae during the approaching Commencement.

We've wanted a "College May-Day." This year, to our great joy, we are going to have one. Is this to be like a great many other things, something which after having been attained, loses its desirable qualities? If it is, it will be our own fault. Everyone has co-operated with us and made it possible for us to have our May-Day Program in the desired style, now it's up to us to co-operate and show our appreciation by doing whatever we are asked. Back up everything in connection with May-Day! Don't be an old stick and say, "I don't dance, or I haven't time to get decorations." Be a sport, if you aren't in the dance you want, or if you work in something in the mechanical way, do it to the best of your ability and without a murmur. We can't all be stars, but you know—

It ain't the guns nor the armament

Nor funds that they can pay.

But the close co-operation

That makes them win the day.

It ain't the individual,

Nor the army as a whole,

But the everlasting teamwork

Of every blooming soul.

—Kipling.

Resolutions are always associated with the starting of New Years. Who has ever started a New Year without first taking an inventory of himself, and then making great resolves to do and be better. If we stop to think, this is the real beginning of a New Year. The officers of the leading organizations on the Campus for the sessions of 1925-1926 have been elected.

We know our school is one of the best in the State; our Home Department and Faculty, included, but we are broad-minded enough to see our own faults. One of which we realize is our honor-system. Under our able president, Helen Miller, much has been done, but she has not had the thorough co-operation of the student body and faculty, that was due her.

If we are to be governed by the students, then each girl at S. T. C. should realize and feel her own responsibility, and act accordingly. The faculty and home department, if they recognize the student committee, should give them more authority and power.

It is said a chain is as strong as its weakest link. Well, we have some mighty poor links in our system of government. One of which, is the large number of unnecessary rules which are not obeyed or enforced; another is, the lack of trust that is put in the girls; and still another is, the lack of authority the students have. We clearly see our weaknesses, how are we going to remedy them? Shall we call a student body meeting, and discuss each rule in the hand-book, and have them passed by a majority vote? Shall we ask for more authority or none at all?

Girls, it is your school, and your honor that is in question. What are you, as worthy citizens of S. T. C. going to do to improve your government? Let's hear some opinions. Have we any thinkers in our student body who can solve this question?

CHICKENS

I had been caused to stop at a small country dwelling to spend the night, because of a chicken. I, with my tender heart, could not harm one of our feathered friends, and to prevent such an accident, I ran my car into a ditch. The thing took offense and broke its axle to get even.

I do not profess to be like the Princess of the fairy tale, who could feel a pea through seven mattresses; but I do protest, I am not like Br'er Rabbit, who was born and bred in the briar patch. Much to my disgust, and to the embitterment of my lovely nature, and to the tattering of my precious hide, I was placed, with no escape, on a mattress made of straw, which even the hens of the yard would refuse to lay on.

I was torn from the depths of my torturing feelings by the squawks of chickens, evidently in distress. I bounded from the place of my physical anguish to the paneless window. All was blank without. I beheld a house, a hen-house evidently, against which moved a pitch-black shadow flanked by two white spots, which jerked and emitted distressing noises. With no thought of the shadow the moon came over behind a thick black cloud. I beheld a gentleman of color keeping step to the double-quick squawks of the chickens he held in each hand. From the ground he grabbed a bag and hastily dropped the chickens therein, with no consideration for the delicacy of their plumage or the needs of their lungs. A shot rang out. The darky made a quick, side-ways motion, for one instant, I saw the white of his eyes. He grabbed his chickens with a strong grip, and flung himself over the fence, disappearing into the woods beyond. The moon went behind the clouds and I returned to my bed.

The inevitable happened; the weariness of my bones overpowered the torture of my epidermis and I fell asleep. I awoke with a start. Was I in the Bellows of my dreams, where all people looked like chickens?

No, evidently, this was chickendom. The last thought I had before that restless sleep—for my very skin was in tatters—was chick-ns. Once more I was awakened by them, this time, by their announcement of day.

I could not stand my rough couch any longer, so again I turned my mutilated form toward the window. I looked down into the barnyard, lighted by the fast-rising sun and there upon a stump, stood a very white rooster with a fiery comb. On the ground below, stood many hens and lesser roosters, of the same color. By the solemnity of their movements and the seriousness of their demeanor, they reminded me of a Ku Klux Klan initiation that I had seen in the city some time ago. Suddenly, the rooster let out one grand cock-a-doodle-doo; all the hens and other roosters joined in the chorus. Thrice this was repeated. A master of the old-Chantry schools would have been proud of such leadership; the response was perfect. An early insect flew by the stump, and the chorister, forgetting his chorus departed in pursuit of the juicy morsel. The old hens marshalled their little broods to a nearby shady spot, to teach them the art of scratching for a few long earthworm. The young cocks strutted about in their cake eaters' manners, pulling their combs far over one eye.

The young pullets were extremely busy helping each other out, biting one another's combs to make it appear more rosy and pulling out a few of their feathers to even-up the shingles.

The farmer's boy appeared with a large basket, from which he threw cracked grain in a long line across the yard. The chickens went down this line jostling each other as people do in a modern cafeteria: taking many pecks of grain as they hurried along.

The sound of foot-steps below caused me to turn from the window and start dressing. Soon the odor of fried chicken came up to me and as I hurriedly completed my preparations, I laughed to remember the bitter thoughts I had harbored against these creatures only a little while ago.

What have you heard most since you have been at S. T. C.? No, it is not the choice bit of scandal, nor is it what you must do when you get out in the State. It is the school bell. Having much leisure time upon my hands and a naturally mathematically inclined head, I determined to calculate in the easiest manner possible the number of times I had heard the bell ring. I made a chart and hung it upon my wall (not with pins and every time the bell rang, I hastily ran to that chart and put down a mark. I kept this chart accurately for one term and determined by trigonometry, the average number of times the bell rang in one day. I found the number to be fifteen.—The question was then raised how many times does it ring in a year? Now we may say that we come to school about 9 months and an average of 30 days to the month. If we multiply 30 by 9 we find that there are about 270 days in our school year. If we multiply this 270 by 15 we find that we have 4050. I do not wish to over-estimate, so I'll knock off the 50. Freshmen at the end of this year you will have heard (if you have been awake at all times,) the bell 4000 times. Seniors, you will have heard its silvery peals around 16,000 times. Some members of the faculty have been fortunate enough to hear it about 120,000 times. Wouldn't it be grand if it dropped a dollar for us every time it rang?

The bell has rung for many and varied purposes and for each it has a different tone. In the morning, it commands you to get up, it invites you to meals, it calls you to chapel, pleads with you to study and sends you to bed. The bell does not move in the same rut all the time, sometimes it changes. Once it shrieked the fire warning; again it announces the festive occasions and holidays.

Sometimes the girls like the bell and again they don't. It all depends on the tone it uses. How they hate it when it says "get-up," "get-up," how they love it when it says "school's out," "school's out." It does its duty but like everything else, it has its knockers.

ALUMNAE NOTES

The Executive Board of the Association of Alumnae held a very important meeting in Richmond on April 4. Plans were made for the annual reunion on June 6, and committees appointed to carry them out.

Miss Ariana Ammonette has been teaching in Richmond this year, and in February, was promoted to the position of critic teacher in the Richmond Normal School.

Miss Kathleen Gordon Crute became the bride of Mr. Maurice Headlee on Wednesday, March 18th. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Headlee left for a motor trip to Missouri and California, where they will visit relatives. Mr. Headlee is originally from California, but moved to Cumberland several years ago.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Harriet Cazenove Purdy, of Lawrenceville, to Mr. Ashby Carlyle Blackwell, of Ashland, on Thursday, April 9. After their return from a Northern trip, the couple will be at home at Barboursville, W. Va., where Mr. Blackwell is head of the chemistry department in Morris Harvey College, and also tennis coach. He is national president of Chi Beta Phi, a scientific fraternity. He is a graduate student of the University of Chicago and of Princeton, and will later resume work leading to the degree of Ph. D. Mrs. Blackwell is a B. S. graduate of the Farmville Teachers College at Farmville, and for the past two years was instructor of French in Woodrow Wilson High School at Portsmouth.

News was received on Sunday April 12, of the sudden death in Chicago, of Mrs. George Hobson Scott, formerly Miss Martha Cunningham, daughter of Dr. John A. Cunningham, second president of Farmville State Normal School.

Men students of the sophomore class at the University of Oregon have decided to adopt the blue denim trousers as official wearing apparel. The "blue jeans" will be made of a heavy cloth and cut in the latest college style.

PEGGY MOORE STARS IN "PEG O' MY HEART"

Our first and only adverse criticism of this play, is of the title, or rather the possessive objective in it, for it should be Peg O' Everyones' Heart, and is, after the performances of the Dramatic Club on Thursday and Friday night, April 23 and 24, in the College auditorium.

Peggy Moore as the winsome, dainty Peg, threw herself into her role with her usual skill and wholeheartedness, and was so pretty and appealing, that we commend Jerry, most heartily, for failing in love with her—we did ourselves. Such a droll, witty Irish tongue! Whenever we weren't sympathizing, we were laughing.

Lila Colonna made such a handsome Jerry, that every girl in the audience envied Peg. He was such a fine, noble man, and such a divine lover, that we've all decided to model our ideals after him.

Lucy Haile Overby underwent a complete transformation and was presented to our unaccustomed eyes as a typical English dandy, monochrome and all. He simpered with true English grace to the overwhelming pride of his doting mother, who in ordinary American life is Elizabeth Westbrook. Elizabeth certainly was the quintessence of maternal love. She is hardly to be blamed, though, for who wouldn't be, with a son like Alric, and such a truly aristocratic daughter as Ethel, who by the way, in her realistic performance, could scarcely be recognized as our own sociable, lovable Margaret Robinson. She did grow tired of her ornamental life, though, and tried to elope with "a scamp," (and Louise McCormick, as Christian Brent, certainly made an admirable "scamp.") Peg prevented that rash act, however, and attributed its source to Ethel's upbringing, adding that Ethel should have had a "fayther" like Peg's own.

Jarvis and Betty would delight any housekeeper's heart—such rare servants are not to be found everywhere! We never dreamed that Mary Mount and Gertrude Quinn could be such honest-to-goodness subordinates. Peg spoke of Jarvis as the man who was paid just to stand around and "look mad."

Montgomery Hawks was the typical barrister, and we have him to thank for delivering our Peg into her English home. Mary Alice Blanton, we owe you a debt of gratitude.

Oh, but we mustn't forget a most important character, who occupied a great deal of our thoughts and a small, but foremost position of the stage. We wish to introduce to the readers of this article, Michael, the loyal, affectionate friend of poor, harassed little Peg, and even though he was a mere dog, he certainly was a human one. Off the stage, he is, according to the dictionary, "a member of the canine tribe," but on, he is a splendid little actor.

In the name of every person who attended the play, we proclaim our pride that our college is able to claim such talent and ability.

Don't You Think He Would?

Have you noticed, during the past week or ten days, a certain gayety and lightness of spirit on the part of certain members of the faculty? I have; and I have my own theory to account for it. And I believe that if Dr. Jarman held the same theory, we would have a spring holiday next year of three days, or four, or maybe a whole week. Why, it's wonderful what's happened! The questions these faculty folk ask us in class don't seem as hard as they used to seem, and yet, for some reason, they make us think harder. And—oh, I don't know, the atmosphere's just different. It's—well, it's lighter, if you see what I mean. One of the freshmen wrote a little story not long ago about a student who was just crazy to get "out in the spring," but she couldn't, and so she decided to be brave about it and she was. And so there was spring in her heart, or something lovely like that. And you know, that's the way it seems to be with these faculty folk. They seem to have spring in their hearts. But they really went "out in the spring" to get it—way out to Willis Mountain, on Easter Monday. And do you know, I heard one of them say she climbed to the very top and thought it was an easy climb and thought it was funny that some of the girls couldn't take gym after going up Willis Mountain and down again.

Oh, they brought back the loveliest flowers—wild honey suckle and dog-wood and johnny-jump-ups—real store-bought johnny-jump-ups, with two petals of royal purple velvet and the rest of silk. Why, their class rooms were gay for I don't know how many days. And do you know one of them started to give us a test one day and all of a sudden that spring magic seemed to begin working again and she said maybe we'd rather write a story, and she let us do that instead of taking a test. And do you know, when we looked at the dog-wood and things it didn't seem so hard to write that story? There is something wonderful about spring magic—the way it is communicated from one person to another.

Yes, there was something strange about that trip to Willis Mountain. I believe those faculty folk forgot they had ever had a trouble like us in the world. Some of them didn't climb the mountain, but I think it must have done them just as much good to wander about in the woods awhile, and then lie down on the grass and rest, taking turns in reading. I don't know what they read, but it wasn't a school book, I know that. It had bright red covers, and great big print. I got a glimpse of it as they started, and honestly, I believe it was a regular thriller. And when the rest of the crowd came back from the mountain to the camp, the fire was going and the coffee pot boiling, and the wienies roasting. Why, they just had one of the grandest bacon bats you ever heard of. Oh, some of the faculty took a day off, all right. And honestly, I believe if Dr. Jarman knew how much good the outing did them, he'd give us a great long holiday every Easter. Don't you think he would?

Now I'll tell you who—all went. They

S. T. C. GIRLS ATTEND

LEAGUE OF WOMAN VOTERS

As I walked into the Jefferson Hotel, Richmond, Va., last week, I wondered why I was there. What did everyone mean, when they called us "New Voters?" We were certainly new, all right! However, my mind was soon set to rest. There were seventy girls present, representing colleges from eleven different States. There were girls from Nebraska, Georgia, Rhode Island, and many other States. The League of Women Voters is striving to interest the colleges throughout the States, in their work. They want to train the young women who are graduating from colleges to vote intelligently in order that they may not only be a benefit to their State or city, but also in the many homes throughout the country.

Colleges all over the country are organizing Junior Leagues to carry out the three-fold purpose of the league, namely: Education, health, and intelligent votes.

What are we going to do at S. T. C.? The following girls attended the League of Women Voters:

Anne Robertson, Clementine Pierce, Bessie Meade Riddle, Dot Witzel.

MONOGRAM CLUB

At a meeting held on Tuesday evening, officers for the new Monogram Club were elected for the succeeding year.

The membership of the club is composed of those who have earned the College Monogram or the Varsity "F." The president of the club is Jean Mitchell, and Helen Hall is secretary-treasurer. The charter members of the Monogram Club are:

Kathleen Morgan, Katherine Reid Virginia Perkins, Orlene White Eleanor Zacharias, Frances Jones, Erna Shotwell, Madeline Gary.

New members will be elected as soon as the next monograms are awarded.

MARK TWAIN'S STORY USED AS TEXT BOOK DURING FILMING

Mark Twain's famous story, "Life on the Mississippi," was used as a text book by James Cruze in filming his latest production for Paramount, "The Fighting Coward."

The producer, who carried a large company of players and technicians to Natchez on the Mississippi river, found Mark Twain's book was held in the highest respect by old-timers, who say it is a true portrait of the days of 1850 according to the traditions, which came to them through their parents.

"The Fighting Coward," which was adapted to the screen by Walter Woods from a recent stage play, "Magnolia," by Booth Tarkington, deals with the days before the Civil War in the South.

Ernest Torrence, Mary Astor, Noah Beery, Phyllis Haver and Cullen Landis are the featured players.

"The Fighting Coward," all-star cast Ecco Theatre, April 27. Benefit Student Building.

"A CHAPTER IN HER LIFE"

New Lois Weber Film at Ecco Theatre, Tuesday, April 28th.

Girls, next Tuesday, April 28th, Lois Weber will present "A Chapter in Her Life." Universal's new Jewel production featuring Little Jane Mercer and Claude Gillingwater.

This picture has caused no end of comment at the theatres where it has been shown. The play founded on the novel "Jewel" by Clara Louise Burnham, has proved one of the outstanding events of the season and one of the most notable triumphs of Lois Weber.

"A Chapter in Her Life," is a practical lesson in happiness, taught in an engrossing and entertaining play. The story is simple in theme, but colossal in its heart-appeal.

What movie men say of this picture: "Your patrons have never seen a picture as beautiful and as satisfying in every way from a picture lover's standpoint, as 'A Chapter in Her Life.'" If there is anything you can do to doll up your house for the special occasion—do it by all means. This picture will bring prestige to your theatre."

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsigned correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of presenting and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

It was with mingled sensations that the Rotunda staff sends this, their last issue to press. Even though we release our last hold with regret, realizing our shortcomings and failures, we are able to detect a sign of that ever-present silver-lining.

As we think of the ability, initiative and originality of the incoming staff, we know our work will be taken-up where we left it and carried on in a still better and more successful way.

Such success as has been ours this year, could never have been attained had not the student body and faculty backed the paper to a man. Such spirit and co-operation is typical of S. T. C., and we appreciate the everlasting 'stand-by-you-ness' that has been shown us.

To the incoming staff, good luck. Some of us will remain in school, others will go out to teach, but rest assured that wherever we are, we'll always have time to review your handiwork, note your progress, and delight in your triumphs and successes.

PRAYERS

Why should we go to prayers? Do we ever stop to think what our life without prayer would be? Prayer is the way by which we talk to our truest Friend—the One who gave His life for us. It is then that we commune with God, and thank Him for His loving kindness and tender mercies to us. He guides and keeps us during the day, and guards us through the night, so no harm will come to us. All that we have we owe to Him, and should we not pause for a few minutes at the end of the day and thank the One who has been so kind to us?

In the warm spring weather, it is very tempting to walk out of the dining room after supper, on out on the campus to enjoy the balmy air and the beauty of the setting sun—but can we not pause for a few moments in the twilight and lift our hearts in thanks to our Heavenly Father? There we will also receive strength and courage to go on with the tasks that are ever confronting us, and as we stand in His presence, we can sing with the poet:

"Day is dying in the West,
Heaven is touching earth with rest;
Wait and worship while the night
Sets her evening lamp alight
Thro' all the sky."

DON'T YOU THINK HE WOULD?

won't mind anything I've said, I know, because, you see, they've been "out in the spring." I'll just have to give you their last names because there's not room enough for all their Christian names—some of them are awfully long. Well, their other names are:

Wheeler, Stubbs, Haynes, Cooper, Draper, McDonald, Craddock, Hiner, Bierbower, Mix, Jeter, Barlow, Davis, Miss Settle and Miss McKee and Mrs. Jeter, were sort of honorary guests.

I feel sure every one of these people—and all the rest of us who have really been "out in the spring"—would be in favor of a spring holiday (a real, honest-to-goodness holiday,) even if the Christmas holidays had to be shortened in order to have it and at the same time keep up our academic standards. And don't you think HE would?

The ones who look down on the world from a great height are aviators, intellectuals and kids of sixteen. —San Francisco Chronicle.

THE TEMPTER TULIP-BED

Sunshine floods the dewy morn,
A glorious April day is born,
Earth yields up her heart of joy,
And sunshine makes a splendid toy.

Oh beauteous toy, so frail, so fair,
Brightening all the earth and air,
Glorious, scarlet Tulip-Bed,
A naughty wish is in my head!

I wish to pluck your choicest bloom
And take it up into my room.
But, fragile toy, I would not dare,
Lest the Home Department catch me there.

How good am I to leave the bed
Of unmolested tulips red!
Yet would my conscience quite forbear
Were not the Home Department there?

ARTISTIC ROOM-MATES

I feel that I am adequately equipped to discuss this subject, for I have indeed, an artistic room-mate. Yes, a real one; she's good and she knows it. She had enough art to know her stuff, to use the common expression.

Of all the species and varieties of room-mates, I believe, the artistic type is the most exasperating. Many a time and often have I come in from a class tired and thirsty, and upon rushing to get myself a drink of water, have found my pet glass filled with black paint water. I have turned to the other glass only to find it filled with water of some brilliant hue. Many a time have I dashed in to get a book before going to class, only to find the table so covered with posters, paintings, and paraphernalia that I could find absolutely nothing.

I have stated two evils of an artistic room-mate, but the third and greatest of all evils, is that of keeping me from my rightful amount of sleep. This is something I simply cannot forgive.

What would you say if you came in with your mind and body set for sleep—charming, restful slumber—and your bed was covered with artistic implements, card-board, drawing paper, letters, paste—any old thing—all dumped on your bed?

I don't know what you would say, but what I say shall always remain a secret between me and the bed-posts, at least as long as I can obey that sign which is hanging above my bed, and which states in large letters that "Quiet" is requested.

I do hope my bed will be allowed to remain where it is—I like it there. I've gotten attached to the particular spot where I've slept for lo, these seven months. I am never certain tho—Only the other day, I was surprised on walking into what I thought was my room, to find that it wasn't my room, that is to say, it didn't look like my room, but as I stood and stared, familiar objects began to loom before my astonished eyes. A Virginia pennant, an old eider-down, a picture or two—all of which I remembered having seen somewhere before, helped me to get my bearings.

Yes, it was my room with just a few changes—the furniture swivelled around, that's all. My bed was in the same place, that's goodness, but the bureau! There was one on either side of my bed, so when I got up in the morning, I would see mirrors to the left of me and mirrors to right of me. So I addressed my worthy room-mate thusly. "Room-mate," said I, "why place all these mirrors around me?" "I know I'm the ugliest person in the room, but why not let it in."

She answered: "Oh, don't flatter yourself, honey, it's not on account of you that I've changed the bureau, but just to maintain the formal balance."

Well, I don't know what 'formal balance' is, but I know that I had to use various balance movements to climb up on a bed to get to the book-shelf, and also that I had to do some tall jumping and wiggling to get across the room.

Most all artists have artistic temperaments, and my room-mate is no exception to the rule. One never can tell what will jar on an artistic temperament. I've known my room-mate to shudder with artistic horror at anything from the hanging of our curtains to the curling of my hair.

Artists are grand people. I admire their ability, and I think they are downright noble about making posters for people and things like that. We should encourage them, foster them, and stand for their little faults, and I, for one, will always be glad to do this as long as they are somebody else's room-mates.

President, Maxine Lucas.
Sec. and Reporter, Mary Elizabeth Lipscomb.

Treasurer, Viola Martin.
Plans were then discussed for a picnic, which the club intends having in May. After which, the meeting was adjourned by the acting president.

JEFFERSON LITERARY SOCIETY

The Jefferson Literary Society held a debate Saturday evening. The question debated, was: Resolved—That inter-collegiate contests are beneficial.

Those debating on the affirmative, were Lois Westbrook and Mamie Daniel, and those on the negative, were: Thelma Thomas and Mildred Folston.

Many good points were given on both sides. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

The Bells

(Another crime against Mr. Poe.)
Hear the loud, alarming bells—
Breakfast Bells!

What a tale of terror, now, their turbulence tells!

From out a cozy land of dreams
Girls are awakened by their screams,
Too cold to even speak,
They can only slowly creep—
Out of Bed.

They shiver and their teeth do chatter,
chatter,
As in mad expostulation with the icy radiator.

With a desperate desire
And a resolute endeavor
Now—now to sit or never—
At the table and be fed.

Oh, the bells, bells, bells,

What a tale their terror tells Of despair!

How they clang and clash and roar,
What a horror they outpour
On the bosoms of the palpitating girls.

Yet the ear t fully knows
By the clanging.
And the twanging

How the "zip" it ebbs and flows,
Yet the ear distinctly tells:

In the jangling and the wrangling
How the hash, it sinks and swells
By sinking and swelling of the bells.

How they hurry, hurry, hurry,
How the scurr, scurry, scurry,
To be first to get there
Ere their snags' noses eat it all!

How their hunger swells and swells—
Gosh-darned Bells!
Florida Flambeau.

JOKES

"Oo's icky honey bunch is oo?" she softly cooed.
As he let go the steering wheel to grasp the opportunity, the car lunged into a ditch. Crawling out and digging the mud from his eyes, he gurgled:
"Ooze!" —Fire.

Well, I must be off.
That's what I thought when I first met you.

A penny for your thoughts.
I was thinking of the shores
By the waves caressed.
Oh the many, many times
Your lips to mine pressed,
And how of all the world
I loved you more than any.—
Say, little girl, are my Thoughts worth a penny?

1—The bath tub at our house hasn't been working for 3 months.
2—When did you find that out?
1—This morning.

JUST A WOMAN

The snow was falling very fast.
The wind was getting colder;
Her ankles froze, and so she drew,
Her coat about her shoulder.—Yale.

"A familiar place," said the girl, looking at the sofa.—Cornell.

I was once a speaker?
Where?
I was toast-master at Child's restaurant.

My mind is like concrete.
Yes, thoroughly mixed and firmly set.

Dear Dr.—I have been deaf twenty years, couldn't hear a sound, but today I took a dose of your medicine, and heard from my brother in California.

Where is the clutch in a car?
In the rear seat.

THE SHEAR'S CLIPPINGS

Song entitled—There's a girl in the heart of Maryland with a watch that belongs to me.

My girl is so cold, I'm going to pour chocolate on her and turn her into an Eskimo Pie.

What is a bigamist? A man who makes the same mistake twice.

Were you ever pinched for going too fast?
No, but I've been slapped.

RARE

She took out the bottle
And shook her head,
"I hate to open
The thing," she said.
It came all the way
From far-off France.
Its labeled and sealed,
Good Stuff—at a glance.
Oh, what shall I do?
It'll go so soon!
So she put it away—
That rare perfume. —Pelican.

If money talks—
If that's no lie—
It always says to me—
"Good bye!" —Flat Hat.

Naturally

Riff—"Why do cigarettes have Oriental names?"
Raff—"Because they have good shapes and thin wrappers."

WHAT STUDENTS WEAR

Reformer, educators, journalists and novelists have been busy for a long time trying to decide how a college student clothes the interior of his head. The following are the first findings in an inquiry as to the external wearing apparel:

University of Florida—As a symbol of maturity, learning and distinction, Seniors at the University of Florida, wear brown derbies.

University of Oregon—Sophomore men have adopted blue denim trousers as their official wearing apparel. The trousers are of a heavy material and are cut in the most recent mode.

John Hopkins University—About half of the men on the campus go in for the latest loudest in ties, socks, etc., while the other half are conservative and wear clothes of less audible colors.

University of Washington—A rage for masculine clothing has possessed the girls of the University of Washington. It originated with the advent of the shingle bob which exposed many necks to the Washington weather and necessitated the wearing of Men's shirts, checkered flannel ones preferred. Then followed a crime wave in which the girls "borrowed" from their boy friends everything from "bow ties to knit ties, spotted neckwear to those 'push' turkey red affairs." —Exchange.

STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE, FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA.

VOLUME V.

FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1925.

NUMBER 31.

ELECT REPORTERS NEXT WEEK

The Rotunda requests every organization in the school to elect an active reporter for the coming year, and remainder of this quarter. News from any organization in the school must come from its reporter and must be dropped in The Rotunda box on the office door not later than Monday night of each week.

It is impossible for the staff to know the news of the many organizations in the school so a reporter from each should write up the news and drop it in The Rotunda box for the News Editor, Mary Alice Blanton, who will see that the news is published.

No news will be printed of any organization in the school after all reporters have been elected unless handed in by the reporter of the organization.

The name and room number of all reporters are asked to be placed in The Rotunda box in an envelope addressed to Mary Alice Blanton as soon as possible.

All presidents are urged to hold these elections as soon as possible as a list will be published in the next issue of The Rotunda.

CLASS ELECTIONS

For some reason or other none of us had realized that Commencement was really drawing near, we had to forget or else could not realize that a whole S. T. C. year had almost past. Last week's elections, however, left no doubt, in our minds.

Both the Senior and Sophomore class meetings were scenes of elections and heated ones, at that. As a result of these meetings, the following officers for Commencement were filled:

Senior Class Poet—.... Ann Conway
Senior Class Prophet—Ruth Bartholmew.

Sophomore Class Historian—Rosaland Harrell.

Sophomore Class Prophet—Lucy Haile Overbey.

OUR COACH

Have you ever heard any one say that a basketball coach makes the team? Well, no coach is more important than a Dramatic Club coach; a Dramatic Club coach makes a play; and if this is true, and I firmly believe it is, then Miss Wheeler should be highly commended for the perfection of her last job. Never has a director been more faithful, more energetic, and more capable than our Miss Wheeler. The Dramatic Club and the Student Body, at large, wish to express to Miss Wheeler their sincere appreciation for her splendid work throughout the past year, and especially for her very fine production of "Peg O' My Heart."

"Say something soft and sweet to me, dearest."

"Custard pie."

—Oklahoma Whirlwind.

What Kind of A Girl Are You Nominating?

When you begin nominating girls for Student Government, do you ever stop and think just what type of girl you want to represent you? More than once, you hear some one say, "Oh, that girl is really good, quiet and such a retiring girl, she'll make a splendid government girl." Does this seem to you to be the requirements which go to make up the best representative you could have? When you have thought it over, I know you'll agree with me that these are not the necessary characteristics. Then, what kind of a girl do you want? Certainly not a quiet retiring inactive girl to represent you in the law body of your school, but a thoroughly representative girl should be elected from every organization. She should be an outstanding girl with pep, leadership. A girl who can put herself in the place of the person upon whom she is to pass judgment. A girl who is a girl among girls, who believes in having a good time in the right way is the representative we should have.

Some one who is interested in school activities and above all, some one who can see more than one side of a question, and who will be fair and broad in her judgment. Some of us have the idea that a student government girl must be one who moves in a narrow groove, this is not correct. A girl who does not enter into the many angles of school life, is not fitted to be a judge of girls who do it. It should be the greatest honor to be a government girl, because only girls who are well-rounded, good sports, should be eligible for membership.

A Student Committee should be a fair representation of the Student Body. The Student Body has the privilege of electing the committee. It is up to you, what kind of girl are you going to vote for?

BLUE MIST

There's a blue mist over fairy-land,
Where'er it be,
That wraps an elfin airy band
In mystery.

There's a blue mist in the atmosphere
Of summer sea,
With foaming, flashing wave, that lashing,
Panteth free.

But ah! a bluer, fairer mist
Than these may be,
Aye dwelling in those eyes I kissed,
Enchanteth me!

TENNIS COURTS

Maybe you'll say, as all of us have said, that seeing is believing, but this time, it really is true. The tennis courts are now on their way toward completion, and will be ready for use within a short while. The Athletic Association has taken charge of the courts, and is putting out every effort to complete the work which was started on them some months ago. Rain, rain, go away, give us all a chance to play.

MAY DAY FETE

The May Festival which took place Friday, May 1, in the new gymnasium at 5:30 p. m., proved to be one of the prettiest ever staged at S. T. C.

The Festival consisted of the episodes—the first, a Dance Pantomime, "The Awakening of Spring." The sprites first came out and danced about the throne, semmoring forth flowers, who go to sleep, while Winter comes in and takes her seat upon the throne. She then bids the sprites go forth to bring Jack Frost and the Snowflakes, who give a dance and then spread their scarfs over the Flowers, making a blanket of snow. The Breezes float in and over the Flowers, and Prince Sunshine, with all his little Sunbeams shine brightly over all the Flowers, thus giving them strength to open a little. Winter who has now grown weak makes vain attempts to live, only to fall dead at her throne. The Sprites, Breezes, Flowers and Prince Sunshine all gather around her taking off her mantle. She now rises as Spring enters and she and Prince Sunshine dance. Spring now takes her seat upon the throne. The Flowers have awakened by this time, and the Butterflies fly around. Spring then bids them all go bring the Queen and her court.

The second episode was the Coronation. Martha Hinch, as Queen of the May, was lovely as she slowly walked to take her seat upon the throne where Spring crowned her.

The Queen's court was made of the following girls: Adelaide Emory, Maid of Honor, and attendants: Lucille Barnett, Lyla Colonna, Mary Spiggle, Florence Riss, Helen Miller, Polly Smith, Kitty Kaiser, Lucille Wright, Pat Cowherd, Helen Hodges, Gwendolyn Edye, Martha Wilkerson, Margaret Chandler, Mary Hunt, Catherine Shore, Elizabeth Arbuckle.

In the third episode, the Folk Dances of the People, the different groups representing the nations, danced before the Queen. The Maypole Dance was especially pretty.

After the groups had finished dancing, the recessional followed, which concluded the program.

The entire program was a success. The Pantomime was very artistic, the procession and crowning of the Queen, very impressive, and the dances were well done.

JEFFERSON LITERARY SOCIETY

At the regular meeting of the Jefferson Literary Society, held Tuesday evening, April 28, a debate was held for the purpose of selecting a representative for the debate between the six literary societies.

The question debated, was: Resolved—that institutions of learning should be co-educational.

Those debating, were: Lois Westbrook and Dana Hill, on the affirmative, and Ida Hill and Dorothy Askew, on the negative. The judges were: Misses Smithy, Russell and Coulting.

The affirmative side won in the debate, and Dorothy Askew was chosen to represent the society in the debate between the six societies.

ANOTHER NATIONAL CONVENTION

A year ago, four members of the Alumnae Association journeyed forth from Farmville in the rain to attend their first meeting of the National Association of Alumnae Secretaries held in Charlottesville at the University of Virginia. These people came back greatly impressed by the spirit of friendliness, hospitality and comradeship which existed among the members. They also were impressed with the wonderful help and inspiration offered by contact with people interested in and devoting their efforts to this new field of endeavor—that of bringing graduates and their Alma Maters in closer contact with one another for their mutual benefit.

For financial and other reasons, it was impossible for the same four persons to go such a great distance so it fell to the lot of the Secretary, Ada Bierbower, to attend the twelfth annual convention which was held this month at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. This was upon the invitation of Lehigh University noted throughout our country for its courses in engineering.

The meetings were held in the Faculty room of a beautiful building, Gothic in style, used for the first time in September and known as Alumni Memorial Hall. The same spirit of friendliness that existed between the members last year, pervaded the atmosphere again and was really deeper because of a year's acquaintance and co-operation.

There were present this year the record-breaking attendance. One hundred fifty persons represented almost as many colleges and universities from Toronto to Texas, from North Carolina to Kansas. University of Virginia, Randolph-Macon Womens College and Farmville State Teachers College, were the Virginia schools which sent representatives.

The conference is made-up of two organizations—the Association of Alumni Secretaries and the Alumni Magazines Associated. As most of the Secretaries have, as a large part of their duty, the editing of the Association magazines and papers, such questions as: The Editor and Business Manager, Cover and Cover Designs, Make-Up, Procuring Advertisements, and Collecting Subscription Dues, proved of great interest and help.

Among the interesting papers read at the Secretaries' meeting were: The Relation of the Alumni to the University and Educating the Alumni. The latter was a discussion of the general need for continuing education after graduation. Representatives from Smith, Vassar and Michigan, gave specific methods by which their schools are rendering this kind of service to the alumni.

One of the most difficult problems of an Alumni Secretary is to complete the files of proper addresses of the alumni. It is consoling to find that all secretaries had the same trouble so the paper entitled: Lost Sheep, discussing ways and means of finding and procuring addresses for all lost, strayed or stolen alumni, contained many definite and helpful suggestions, which when used, should bring results. (A hint to the wise is sufficient. Will you not, when called upon, render aid in finding Farmville's 500 lost sheep?)

All of the meetings were filled with witty remarks and personal touches, which made them enjoyable, but in spite of informality, a business-like atmosphere permeated the entire convention thus not only accomplishing the work set before the meeting, but also allowing time for the many social features which made the Bethlehem Conference so pleasant.

Many opportunities presented themselves in which the various representatives could talk to one another. Four notable times were at the luncheons given both days by the Lehigh Alumni and at the dinners on Thursday and Friday evenings at Hotel Bethlehem, headquarters for the guests.

The delegates were taken on a tour of the city and were accorded the rare privilege of a trip through the immense Bethlehem Steel Works, conducted by many of the courteous officials. After the visit to the shops we were served a sumptuous dinner in the dining room of the company's general office building.

The history and settlement of Bethlehem by the Moravians added to our knowledge and appreciation of the early Pennsylvania pioneers. We visited their church, the early meeting house, their cemetery in which are buried many of the early settlers and numbers of friendly Indians, among them being the Last of the Mohicans.

Altogether, it was a very enjoyable and profitable meeting. Your secretary hopes to put into use some of the many valuable suggestions she received. Her only regret is that you all could not be present to receive the inspiration that comes from such a convention.

ADA BIERBOWER.

ARGUS DEBATE

The Argus Literary Society held a very lively debate at their regular meeting Tuesday night. The purpose of this debate was to choose a speaker for the Inter-Society Debate which is to be held May 5th. The best speakers in the preliminary debate will make-up the team which is to meet Hampden-Sidney on May 25th.

The subject for debate was: Resolved—that there should be co-education in institutions of higher learning. The affirmative side was upheld by Mary Rives Richardson, Frances Barksdale, Flenimint Pierce and Olive Smith. The speakers on the negative side were: Bessie Meade Riddle, Lucille Wright, Madeline McMurdo, and Sally Roane McMurdo. The judges were: Miss Grenals, Peggy Moore, and Helen Chrisman.

The decision was in favor of the affirmative. Flenimint Pierce was chosen as the best speaker, and as the girl best fitted to represent the society in the Inter-Society Debate.

"KEEP OFF THE GRASS!"

Give the grass a chance! As Dr. Jarman stated in chapel not so long ago, our campus is very small and it's going to take the hearty co-operation of everyone to make and to keep it beautiful. In the first place, there is no urgent necessity for cutting across the grass. The walks are convenient to all entrances and the very size of the campus makes "cutting" almost ridiculous. Have you any pride in your school, which is your home for nine months of the year? Well, if you haven't, let's be considerate of those who do take some pride in their Alma Mater.

In the second place, the State has appropriated large sums of money for beautifying our grounds and our school authorities have done everything in their power to make us happy. It is not then them some consideration on our part—or are we going to prove unappreciative at every turn by making ugly paths across the otherwise green carpet of grass that Springtime has brought to us?

Then, too, don't you remember how thrilled we were when Dr. Jarman said at Christmas, "Your request is granted?" I'm sure you do! Don't you think he would be equally thrilled if we told him: "Your request is granted?" He has made a request that we use our walks. What are we going to do about it, girls?

And so, "it is with mingled sensations" that the new staff begins the work for the coming year. Great is the fear and trembling when we realize in whose footsteps we are to follow! We cannot say good-bye to the old staff, for we expect you to stay with us and help us over the troubles that are so new to us.

We ask the support of the school and will appreciate all notes of comment, criticism, and suggestions from all those interested.

BASEBALL

Did you ask what the next sport at S. T. C. will be? Well, it is now time for this long-expected to again enter the arena in the form of a baseball team. This year we are going to have athletics that we can already boast of. Seniors, Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen will again have an opportunity to compete for the ten points towards the "cup."

Every girl from every class that can play baseball or would like to try to play is expected to report on the athletic field every day at four o'clock. All four classes will practice together at first, but will be divided after "baseball form" is obtained. Don't forget—from now on, every day at four o'clock.

KAPPA SIGMA BANQUET

Boys were seen on our campus on a Saturday night. We have grown accustomed to boys on Friday and Sunday nights, but Saturday has not been turned over to them yet.

Girls, your curiosity may now be appeased. All of those manly creatures came here for the purpose of eating, drinking, and being merry. The occasion was the annual banquet of Kappa Sigma given for their alumni. All of the sixty who attended seemed loathe to leave, and so we wish to extend to them our invitation for next year.

ARGUS LITERARY SOCIETY

The Argus Literary Society takes great pleasure in announcing two new members:

Ruth Garland Richardson, Jackie Woodson.

I went to a fountain with Mary.
I met with an awful mishap:
For I awkwardly emptied a bottle
Of soda all over her lap.
But Mary was gentle and gracious
(There are few so tactful as she.)
For smiling with perfect composure,
Said sweetly: "The drinks are on me."

WILLIAM & MARY TRAINING SCHOOL

"Are you going to William and Mary College this week?" That is the question we all heard the Y.W. Cabinet asking last week. This week you can hear the next question: "Didn't we have the most wonderful time at William and Mary?" So we did! Such a royal reception we received when we hopped off the train. Every girl tried to show us a good time.

The main theme of all the discussions groups was "the restlessness of the young people of today." We tried to find the cause and the cure. We derived a great many ideas from our colleagues and hope that they will prove helpful in the coming year.

The Y. W. girls of William and Mary took us to many quaint and interesting places while we were there. We visited the old Burton Parish church and the Powder Horn. The climax of our visit was the trip to Jamestown. What could be more impressive than that old church? All the details and historical facts were explained by the rector.

Each cabinet member had had such a good time that she dreaded the time to come to say good-bye. For proof of this, just ask anyone who went, and I am sure they will tell you the same thing.

ORGANIZATION OF A HIGH SCHOOL "GIRLS' CLUB"

The organization of a Girls' Club for the High School students was begun Friday afternoon at a party given by the Freshman Commission in the old gym.

Everyone was given a hair ribbon and asked to leave if they were more than ten years old. No one left and so the "kid" party progressed with games and refreshments.

Mary Alice Blanton who has charge of the organization asked the girls if they wished to form a club. All voted enthusiastically for it, and it was decided that they would meet Wednesday to elect officers. Several members of the Freshman Commission have been chosen to act as advisors in the activities of the club.

ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION ENTERTAIN

The Winston-Salem Chapter of the Alumnae Association of the S. T. C., at Farmville, Va., entertained on Saturday at a delightful luncheon at the Robert E. Lee Hotel in honor of Dr. J. L. Jarman, president of the college.

Dr. Jarman was here visiting the local chapter. They also had as their guests, Superintendent R. H. Latham, and Assistant Superintendent, Frank H. Kos, of the city schools.

The table was decorated with spring flowers and dainty place cards. Covers were laid for eighteen. A delicious four-course luncheon was served.

Members of the association present, were: Miss Eleanor B. Foreman, who was toast-mistress for the occasion, and Misses Virginia Wall, Dorothy Diehl, Carrie Dugan, Nettie Chapple, Frances Jordan, Mary Eggleston, Frances Beadles, Annie Via, Sadie Upson, Katherine Cralle, Martha Christian and Mesdames, J. A. Mackie, Thos. Haskins and W. E. Clark.

HOME-MADE PHILOSOPHY

If you want others to be interested in what you say, first make it interesting to yourself.

In nature's "School of Experience," sooner or later, we learn self-reliance.

Some pupils have a persistent case of Spring Fever. It lasts twelve months each year.

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY AND ROANOKE COLLEGE DEBATE

Should the Child Labor Amendment of 1924, be Passed? This is the question that brought forth a heated debate in the S. T. C. auditorium Saturday night. The decision was rendered in favor of Hampden-Sidney, who had the negative side, but much can be said of the splendid speakers of Roanoke College. The argument for both sides were expressed in such a way, that much valuable information was gained by all who were present. As a whole, the debate was a great success.

CRITICISM

"The Darnmouth" in a recent issue, contains a detailed criticism of Darnmouth students. There is possibly something valuable in this criticism for other student bodies.

"The pressure for pretending in too many instances is breeding hypocrisy. The man who unashamedly is his natural self too often is either ignored or ridiculed. He who really is a source of amusement—the sham aesthete, the dilettante, the pseudo-intellectual—is taken seriously. The poseur reigns. We outlaw emotion. We encourage hypocrisy."

"Application in any field is belittled. Though extra-curriculum activities no longer attract numbers of men, no corresponding general increase in scholastic accomplishment is apparent. We boast of our new intellectualism, but our scholarly endeavor fails utterly to justify the boast. We loaf and take ourselves very seriously, but do not take work seriously."—Exchange.

ALUMNAE NOTES

Dr. Jarman was the guest on April 1, of the Richmond Alumnae Chapter. First a social hour was had, then the business meeting, at which all the officers were re-elected for another year.

Miss Jimmie Hurt, of Roanoke, has been appointed a member of the State Board of Teachers Colleges, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the retirement of Miss J. Katherine Cook, who is now in China. Miss Hurt's term will expire in 1928.

It will be of interest to many at the college to learn that Miss Mary Douglas Finch, of Chase City, who graduates from Scarritt Bible School in June, has been assigned to missionary work in Japan.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Ward, of Roanoke, announce the marriage of their daughter, Cecil, to Frank T. McFaden, on April 12, in Bristol.

Miss Edith Harrell, of Portsmouth, is a student this year at Simmons College, Boston, in the School of Library Science. She is taking the one-year course, which is open to college graduates only.

Among the alumnae of the school the following girls were back for the past week-end:

Frances Warren, Agnes Walker, Martha Blair, Mary C. Cousins, Doris Cochran, Eugenia Vincent, Eugenia Coghill, and Julia Alexander.

EVERYBODY'S TRACK MEET.

A track meet for everybody will be held Wednesday, May 6. The word—"everybody" was purposely attached to this announcement because every girl in the college is expected to participate in some of the events. If you can't run, maybe you can jump; if you can't jump or run, you know you can throw either a baseball, a basketball or a javelin. If you claim you can't do any of these things, you should try yourself out to see if you can't make your opinion of yourself a little better. What could you expect others to think of you if you haven't a better opinion of yourself?

This year are to be twelve events. Twelve girls have been selected from each class to take charge of each of these events in her class. These girls are responsible for that event and are expected to see that her particular event is represented by the best that can be found in her class.

The events which will be scheduled, are:

Relay Race	Baseball Throw
High Jump	Basketball Throw
Shot Put	Broad Jump
50-Yard Dash	Hop, Skip and Jump
Hurdles	Javelin Throw
Discus Throw	Standing Broad Jump.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

INSTALLATION SERVICES

An impressive service took place Monday evening in the auditorium when the officers and members of the new student committee were given the oath of office. A speaker from the University of Virginia came down for the occasion and gave a most interesting and instructive talk on the origin of the Honor System. Through his straightforward message new light was shed upon the work "honor" and each member of the student body was made to feel her own responsibility toward perfecting the Honor System at S. T. C. At the conclusion of a farewell address by Helen Miller, the outgoing president of Student Government, Kate Trent was presented with the cap and gown of the retiring officer, as an emblem of her own position as president. After a speech of acceptance, the new president gave the oath of office to the remainder of those who are to serve on the Student Committee, 1925-1926. The members are—Pres.—Kate Trent.

Vice-Pres.—Gertrude Quinn.

Secretary—Ida Hill.

Treasurer—Mary Ruth Winn.

Campus League Chairman—Fannie Rowe Brown.

First Prof. Rep. Polly Stallard.

Senior Rep.—Clara Thompson, Mary Venable, Gladys Moss.

Junior Rep.—Betty Hopkins, Margaret Cobb, Harriett Foster.

Soph. Rep.—Virginia Ellis, Greenhove Parker, Elizabeth Woodson, Dorothy Mattox, Maxine Lucas, Louise Coston, Alice Page Adams.

At the conclusion of the installation of committee members, Dr. Jarman gave us a wonderful surprise. Nothing could thrill an S. T. C. girl more than a solo by our president and when we realized that we were to be favored with a song, the applause was proof enough that we wouldn't have missed such an opportunity.

The services were concluded with the singing of "Ain't Mater" by the student body.

DR. DYER SPEAKS IN CHAPEL

Dr. Dyer, of Vanderbilt University, spoke in chapel Thursday morning. His talk concerning some of the social and industrial problems of today, proved very instructive to the audience.

The great and constant exodus from the country to the city, Dr. Dyer stated, was mainly responsible for the present industrial and social difficulties. Our ideals concerning life in the home have grown evidently different from those of America's foremost pioneers. The high cost of living and divorce, have resulted from the closer contacts of families. Dr. Dyer argued in conclusion, that the purpose of education is to produce teachers, leaders, who will help the masses to analyze and squarely face their problems.

First Co-Ed.—The check of that conductor! He glared at me as if I hadn't paid my fare.

Second Co-Ed.—And what did you do?

F. C. E.—I glared right back as if I had.—Yale Record.

The Freshmen out-classed the other three classes in every event by making ten first places, five second places and nine third places. Ten points will be added to the Freshman points toward the cup. Field Day was a very successful event of the year. Miss Graham is to be congratulated on her splendid success in every phase of athletics. Her untiring patience and encouragement, has been an inspiration to the student body.

The Physical Education Department has done admirable work throughout the year.

Y. W. C. A. CABINET TRAINING

COUNCIL MEETS AT WIL-

LIAM AND MARY COLLEGE

On last Friday morning, April 24th, 1925, never a more sincere, interested and enthusiastic group of girls ever departed from old S. T. C., for a week-end trip.

But who were they and where were they going? Why none other than members of the new Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, namely: Elizabeth Bugg, Mary Linn Petty, Lucille Wright, Gladys Moss, Dorothy Wetzel, Elizabeth Woodson, Daisy Mitchell, Amanda Gray, Ann Robertson, and Sue Puckett, with Miss Willie London, as the chaperon, and of course they were going to the Cabinet Training Council which this year was held at William and Mary College.

Surely historic Williamsburg and the much-famed College of William and Mary was an inspiration within itself, but with the deep spiritual meeting and the Christian spirit of the entire gathering each one acquired a much better idea of the Y. W. and its purpose, and a determination to live and carry out her particular work to the best of her ability.

Among the speakers of the occasion, were: Misses Mary Custis Foster, Catherine Newkirk, Catherine Lumpkin, Willie London and Miss Lucy Mason, who on Saturday night talked and led a discussion on the present industrial problem. Besides the open meetings, discussion groups were conducted by the girls themselves. Here we told frankly our own opinions and problems and shared those of other college girls.

Representatives from other Colleges of Virginia were present and never could a more friendly spirit of oneness be manifested.

The girls of the home College truly played the part of hostesses. Every hour was planned but not all with work for on Saturday afternoon the entire delegation motored to Jamestown where, after visiting the places

CONFEDERATE MEMORIAL SERVICE

At 10:30 Thursday morning, the S. T. C. girls assembled along High street in front of the Confederate Monument to witness the memorial service. At the first of the procession, were the Farmville Silver Band, the Home Guard and several members of the U. D. C., carrying flowers. Then came the Confederate Veterans, each accompanied by a S. T. C. grand-daughter of a Confederate soldier. The Training School children marched at the end of the line, "Dixie" was sung by the S. T. C. assembly. Three shots over the flower-laden monument were fired by the Home Guard. After the camera man had taken their picture, the Veterans with soldierly bearing, fled down High street. That is where the momentary impresses us now with even greater significance.

COMPARISON OF PREVIOUS RECORDS WITH THOSE MADE MAY SIXTH

Our Field Day records have varied greatly from year to year. The records of the different events have been higher or then lower, then higher again. In order that we may see how this year's records compare with the highest, we have ever made, in previous years, the following comparison has been made:

Ed.—Well, some of them I've seen before. The rest I haven't seen yet.

If I asked you to kiss me on the cheek which one would you choose? I'd hesitate a long time between them.

Y. W. C. A. INSTALLATION

The Installation Services of the Y. W. C. A., took place Thursday night at 7:00 o'clock in the auditorium.

This is perhaps one of the most impressive services that the Y. W. C. A. has during the year. The auditorium was lighted with candles, one in each window and a row across the stage. Each old member carried a lighted candle with which she lighted the new member's candle. The retiring president then gave the office to the new one, and each officer, in turn, lighted the candle of the incoming officer. After the president had given the charge to the Association members, followed by a prayer, Dr. Jarman sang very impressively "Thy Work to Do." The Recessional of the Cabinet concluded the services, "Follow the Glean," being sung as they marched out.

The officers for the coming year, are:

Pres.—Mary Lynn Petty.

Undergraduate Rep.—Elizabeth Bugg.

Vice-Pres.—Lucile Wright.

Secretary—Sue Puckett.

Treasurer—Margaret Cobb.

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsigned correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of presenting and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

DON'T BE A SLACKER—BE A BACKER!

The Rotunda is a school publication, and we want it to be a representative paper, don't we? To make it the finest paper ever, we need the hearty co-operation of the student body. You may say, what can I do about it? How many of you have ever contributed to The Rotunda? The box stands ready for your contributions and yet you pass it by many times a day, with never a thought of your duty toward the paper which should mean so much to each one of you. Some of you have short stories that should be read by your fellow-students—some have bits of verse, or maybe a joke, that would be appreciated by every reader of the paper. Why don't you give us a chance to enjoy your own achievements? There are writers and poets in this school who are doing themselves an injustice because of thoughtlessness. Come on girls—show the spirit that's ever awake at S. T. C. Fill up The Rotunda box and the staff will thank you with all its heart.

There can't be parties without any noise.
There can't be girls without any boys.
There can't be class without any teacher.
There can't be church without any preacher.
There can't be lodges without any dues.
AND there can't be a ROTUNDA without ANY NEWS!

COMMENCEMENT, AND OUR PLACE?

In spite of the plans we may have laid, let each of us answer this question fairly:—Where should my place be during S. T. C. Commencement?

Contrary to the general impression, our year of instruction does not end on June 5. Life at this college continues for four more days, and in some respects, it is the most glorious and inspiring period of the school year. It is a time for retrospection and forward looks, also. Without the demands of the ordinary routine, these closing days may yield pleasanter memories than may several months. And are we going to allow mere impatience to disregard this opportunity?

Two uninterrupted terms of work, no doubt, have detracted from our zest, so apparent in the beginning. But there remains a debt we still owe our school. Where do we place our goal, June 5 and Home? Then let us push it a little beyond the date, and our vacation will hold greater satisfaction. Oh, if we care to view the obtaining of an education as a martyrdom, why not add the finishing touches?

Surely none of the graduates have been working for so little that they would entrust a diploma into the hands of a postman. Nor could they possibly wish to strengthen a weak excuse.

If the Glee Club and Orchestra members can remain for Commencement, the act also lies within our power, as our duty and to our benefit. There will always be many undergraduates called home by real necessity, but how are the rest of us going to decide? Let us take a happy glimpse of graduates whose actions will offset any brief delay in our home.

If I were only faithful

The International Kindergarten Un-year, all of which are capable effectious workers. Good judgment was shown in electing Polly Riddle as pres-had any work of any description with conscientious worker who never leaves a task half completed.

The other officers, whose names fol-

SYLVA-CAPPELLI CONCERT

The climax of the observance of National Music Week, at S. T. C., came Friday, May 8th, in the joint concert of Marguerite Sylva, mezzo-soprano, and Mario Cappelli, tenor.

Marguerite Sylva is a member of the Opera and Opera Comique, Paris, and also the Chicago Grand Opera Company. She is said to be the world's greatest Carmen.

Signor Cappelli has been to S. T. C. several times before, but we are always glad to see him again. His last appearance was one of his best.

Both artists charmed their audience, receiving encore after encore.

Perkins—Our Field-Day Champion

How we watched with envy, her pluck, how we wished for her ability, and how we marveled at her success. Throwing herself into the spirit of Field-Day, she went out to win. While others sat back because they knew they couldn't make a high jump, they couldn't throw a ball, they couldn't broad jump, this spirited athlete buckled on her armor and "tackling the thing that couldn't be done, she went out to win and she did it."

There would be no question of spirit in it as S. T. C. had we more determination such as Perkins to lead on to victory. We expected great things of her and she didn't disappoint us. We are proud of you Perk, such spirit as yours could only bring success and we congratulate you!

BLUE RIDGE

There are three things that stand out especially in a cherished memory of a Blue Ridge student conference.

They are comradeship, religious sincerity and the inspiration of the wonderful setting of the place in "God's out of doors."

The spirit of get-together, of mental understanding and co-operation in both work and play is everywhere. It is not only a help realizing, also, the absolute sincerity of the type of religion that is preached and taught and lived by the leaders and members of the conference. There is no can or trying for effect, but a real effort to carry out the ideas of the Great Teacher in all the routine of daily life, in the class-room and on the mountain "hikes."

Religion is made a beautiful, helpful force that you want and need in your daily life.

And then, the mountains—they stand before you always—at sunrise, at noon-day and at sunset, touched with the mystery and glory of everlasting things.

To go to Blue Ridge is a rich opportunity for any girl who is able to avail herself of its choice blessings.

G. E. M.

MOONLIGHT AT BLUE RIDGE

One of the most beautiful sights I ever witnessed, was a moonlight scene from the porch of Robert E. Lee Hall. The moon had risen and was shining very brightly over the valley. Far in the distance, were mountains looming up; the clouds were fitting through the sky and the whole world was quiet and we gazed in reverence at this magnificent scene.

DAISIE ALLEN MITCHELL.

BLUE RIDGE

Sunrise and grey mist and the new day, a chilliness that welcomed a sweater; noon, a welcome warms the eager, hungry young people; afternoon—the quiet hour, a storm close down and almost gone, the sun again, and soft white clouds floating fast over rain-washed tree-tops; sunset and services and twilight on the steps of Robert E. Lee Hall, and then a darkness that seemed friendly and snug—these are some of the thoughts that Blue Ridge suggests.

But more than the physical beauty and comradeship, Blue Ridge meant to me renewed faith in youth, a veritable conviction that the eager, earnest, enlightened young people of our day will as the result of just such gatherings find a solution for many of the problems ahead of them. This hope for the future based on faith in youth was, I think, the strongest feeling I got from Blue Ridge.

MISS LILA LONDON.

WHAT BLUE RIDGE

MEANS TO ME.

B-l-u-e R-i-d-g-e, Blue Ridge! What a world of memories those two words bring to one's mind! Days of happiness spent in the heart of the glorious mountains, every hour filled with the joy of living. The spirit of fellowship, the deep inspirational talks, the whole-some good times, and above all, the glory of God manifested in all of nature's wonders. These are just some of the beauties of Blue Ridge.

There in the "Land of the Sky" one catches something of the vision of light—that light that brings joy and happiness into this world.

"Come up to the sky!

Come up to the sky!

Come up to the Blue Ridge sky!

The voice is not of mortal,—

It comes from heaven's portal—

Come, child, to the Land of the Sky.

DOROTHY ASKEW.

BLUE RIDGE AS

AN INSPIRATION

Blue Ridge is an inspiration morally, spiritually and physically. The lectures and discussion groups, always leave you with an earnest desire and purpose, not only for yourself, but for helping others. These are led by men, women and students whose mission in life is service for others, and one can not help but imbibe some of their enthusiasm and spirit. Our recreation is an important item also, and the mere physical joy of hiking in those mountains and getting in close touch with nature, in all her aspects, gives you a broader out-look on life and a greater kinship with your creator and the things He created. The swimming pool is a source of joy to all, and the pleasure to all and the many side-trips give you a view of all points of interest in that glorious "Land of the Sky."

To know Blue Ridge and to feel its influence, is to live through its experiences, experiences that can not be gained elsewhere.

GYPSIES AT BLUE RIDGE

Deep within the heart of each of us, there is a desire to "hit the trail"—just to play Gypsies. The lives of those wandering, care-free people, strikes a responsive chord in our hearts. In the spring, especially, this longing seizes us. Then it is that we dream of camp-fires by night, soft music, and dreamy silence surrounding all as the pitchy-night. Then comes rest—peaceful and deep. Morning and an early start, not caring whither one goes!! All nature seems to be in concert and our hearts sing with the birds.

"But these are dreams," we say, as we sigh and turn to the tasks at hand. Yet, we cannot rid ourselves of that longing!

At Blue Ridge, one may have an outlet for this longing. Hiking is one of the chief delights of people at Blue Ridge. A party sets out, not caring whether they are going, happy as larks, with a song on their lips. At such times, the best that is in one, comes to the surface. We give vent to the noblest in us. Tired and supremely happy, we return after many exciting adventures.

The best is saved for last of day—around the camp-fire or fire-place. Then it is that we come to know each other. All become beautified in the soft glow. Dear familiar songs come to our lips.

It is with a feeling of deep gratitude, that the Gypsies at Blue Ridge, kneel beside their cot or gaze at the stars to thank God for such a life and such an opportunity.

FRANCES HOWARD.

beautiful "Land of the Sky."

With the constant sound of running water in your ears, the strong hills, ever seeming to guard you, and always rumored by the many beauties of nature to be found here, you can't help but have the feeling expressed in one of the Blue Ridge Songs.

"As our Master used to ask for strength the blue hills win. So now we coe into the hills to keep on trust with Him."

PEGGY MOORE.

SOPHOMORE HOLD ANOTHER ELECTION

On Friday night at a special call meeting of the Sophomore Class, some more elections were held. Due to unforeseen circumstances both the Gatorian and Liberator had to resign. In their place the sophomores elected: Katherine Montague, Gatorian, and Pattie Smith, Historian.

He I certainly enjoyed that dance. She I'm so glad I feel now that I lost those shippers in a good cause.

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsigned correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of presenting and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

AIM OF BLUE RIDGE

In the last two weeks, Blue Ridge has been brought before the student body again and again, but the wonder, the glory, the miracles wrought by Blue Ridge, cannot be portrayed by pageant, pantomime, lecture, or letter. It must all be experienced, and once experienced, it is never forgotten.

Perhaps, no greater tribute could be paid this conference whose aspirations are so high and worthy, than that of W. D. Weatherford, "Blue Ridge is striving to be really Christian; and that goes a long way. Christianity is much bigger and much more vital than many Christians think. God is more eminent; He is more all-persuasive of life than a narrow interpretation of Him will admit. Blue Ridge is trying to find the attitude of Jesus toward human life." Dr. Ellwood continues: "To help to bring Jesus' religion to bear on modern life, and to help to realize Jesus' dream for society, is the one central aim of Blue Ridge."

SOME OF OUR LEADERS

Olive Smith

When one goes on a pilgrimage at S. T. C. in search of the various talents, qualities, and abilities that exist in the modern girl, one finds quite a goodly number of them. Many are musical, but rather impractical. Sally is industrious, but inefficient. Jane is accommodating, but rather careless. And so we go on finding in each girl a virtue that overbalances more or less her shortcomings. Now there is one girl in our student body who is different—yes, quite different from every one of the rest of us just ordinary folks. In her, we find a rare combination—a combination of misical, literary and artistic talent, wit, good-humor, seriousness, industry, efficiency sense, attractiveness, dependability, wholesomeness, personality.

Goodness gracious, we could continue to name her characteristic traits indefinitely, but there isn't any use for you have already decided that the girl about whom we are talking, can be none other than Olive Smith. The very best part of it all too, is how unconscious she is of herself and her ability. She won't accept praise and commendation if we try to sincerely give it to her, but she will have to accept our love and admiration for there is no one else who is worthy of so much.

Erna Shotwell
President Athletic Association

Whether through careful thought or fate, Erna was chosen as our President. I do not know but, nevertheless, the fact remains that no where could we have found another to equal her. She has made of the Athletic a vital organization in our school. She has set an example to every girl. A true sport, peppy and always willing, Erna has encouraged and helped each one of us in Athletics. Nothing stood in Erna's way, she stood the test on every occasion and against the greatest odds, she came out victorious.

Audrey Chewing

It seems as if destiny was playing into our hands when Audrey decided to come to Farmville for her Junior and Senior years. For who else was there with her experience, new ideas, ability, and foresight, that could have held the position as editor of the Virginian as well as she?

To say that she did her work thoroughly and quickly, is not enough. Very few editors ever have their work finished three months before the term is over and are able to leave it. Audrey has done this.

We are sorry that her health has not permitted her to finish the year and we hope that this piece of work for us was not very detrimental to it. We hear she is now on the road to recovery and will be with us after Christmas next year.

Kitty Morgan

Kathleen Carwile Marshall Morgan may not mean so much but when you say "Kitty," everybody knows who you're talking about. The name calls forth various and sundry positions that Kitty fills in our school. As president of the Senior Class, we see Kitty, the dignified; as head of the Training School lunch room, we see Kitty, the capable; in the Music Department, we find a talented Kitty; but the way we love her most, is as "Our Kitty," a friend to every one!

ALUMNAE NEWS

President S. P. Duke, of Harrisonburg State Teachers College, at one time head of the department of Education here, has had membership in Phi Beta Kappa Society conferred upon him by Delta Chapter at Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Whitlock, of Tobacoville, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Constance Elizabeth, to Mr. Robert Wilson Vennig, of Covington. The wedding will take place in Covington. Mrs. Whitlock has been teaching in Covington for the last two years.

Miss Martha D. Christian has been nominated by the employees of the American Locomotive Company of Richmond, as a candidate for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Election. Votes are sold, the money being used for the purchase of Monticello. The election carries with it a trip to France.

BLUE RIDGE FOR ALL

You may think that Blue Ridge is not for you, because you have never been of a "religious turn" of mind. How you have always been tired of church-going and "very religious people." As for me, I want good times—swimming, hiking, tennis, horseback-riding, mountain-climbing. If that is what you want, then Blue Ridge is for you.

Perhaps you are of a romantic turn of mind. You love mystery and romance. Then Blue Ridge is for you.

What could be more romantic and unusual than our adventure last year with the "moonshine?" Perhaps you, adventurous ladies, would like that. I'll say we did! Dorothy Askew and Frances Howard can testify as to the romantic and humorous possibilities of Asheville.

Have you always cherished secret desire to write, as the rest of us have? What more romantic of fitting material can be found than around Blue Ridge! "Spanish Castle" is filled with romance and mystery. One can picture its mistress, now old and wrinkled, as she once was. The gardens and castle fill one with a longing to write. Why, even the dogs which the mistress of the castle set upon you, are alive with possibilities, that is, at a distance!

Ruth Muskrat was a well of material. So was Dr. Crosby, as Miss Norris can testify. If you cannot find material there, you cannot find it anywhere.

Then you may be a sincere lover of nature. What is more beautiful and inspiring than Mother Nature at Blue Ridge? She blossoms out for us in her very best.

There are quite a number who love just the human contact and the mingling with girls from all over our Southland. Then you'll get it at Blue Ridge. This is one of its most delightful features.

Beautiful invigorating exercise, joyful companionship, wholesome food, (it can't be beat.) deep, satisfying sleep, the wonders and beauties of nature, uplifting the soul, all, cannot help but produce a "religious turn" of mind. You thank God for it all, and humbly seek with the rest for Jesus' law of love, and your little part in this universe. It is an experience and a living which no girl can afford to miss.

FRANCES HOWARD.

OUR SONG OF LAST YEAR

We have journeyed afar, as the wise men of old,
Over desert and mountain and wasteland, to Thee,
And as when they found Thee they offered Thee gold,
Today we have only our lives to give Thee.
Our lives and our services, in reverence, to Thee!

In th hills we have found Thee; thy glory divine
Will give us swift courage for days that are new;
Once more we go forward toward mountains of Thine
Toward paths in the valleys, with hearts firm and true—
In the low-land valley, still will we be true!

Thou' we may not see Thee, as, stumbling we go,
Searching the valleys for the light of Thy grace,
Thou surely wilt lead us from failure below
To Thy hilltops, and there grant a glimpse of Thy face,
In Thy radiant hilltops, the light of Thy face!

Written by Pauline Timberlake to tune of "The Lord is My Shepherd," entered in the competitive contest last year.

Blue Ridge, North Carolina, is a beautiful place in the month of June, when girls from all the Southern colleges meet there for the Y. W. C. A. Conference. The feeling of good fellowship among the girls is shown in the whole program of the Blue Ridge Conference. Keen intellectual zest proves the deep interest in the discussion groups. Religious ideals are expressed in discussions of inter-national interest. Afternoons of fun and frolic when girls recreate in various sports are especially enjoyed by all. Ten days pass by all too quickly, and each girl feels a great desire to remain at Blue Ridge. ELIZABETH WATERS.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help."

Early in the morning when I stand on the porch of Robert E. Lee Hall, and watch the shadows of the clouds playing upon the mountains, I feel nearer to God the Creator of all, than anywhere else in the world. The same is true at night, when I look up at the stars which seem almost near enough to touch.

God seems very near us all at Blue Ridge. I don't believe a girl can go there and not come into real communion with Him.

WILHELMINA LONDON.

IN LIFE'S GARDEN

Out in life's garden where sympathy grew.

God planted a soul, 'twas the soul of you!

Life's wonderful garden, Love seeking went through Till he found a heart, 'twas the heart of you.

I have sought through Life's garden of roses and rue

And find one sweet blossom all jeweled with dew.

Love, Faith, Sympathy, all unchanging and true,

And the heart of my flower, dear mother,—'tis you!

NUMBER 34.

DR. DALLAS LORE SHARP

Dr. Dallas Lore Sharp, author, lecturer, and teacher, made an inspiring address in the State Teachers College auditorium on Monday night, May 18. The subject of his address, was:

"Poet and Prophet."

Dr. Sharp said that President Butler said that out of one hundred and ten millions of people we cannot produce a single great philosopher or a single great prophet. Dr. Sharp disagreed with President Butler on this point, but from this came the necessity of producing such a person. Some have thought that Amy Lowell was such a poet and the people of Chicago think that they have such a poet in Carl Sandberg.

Dr. Sharp said that there are three elective courses for a poet: first, to work with his own hands; second, to know human nature; third, to go out into the out-of-doors into the world of nature. Great books are not written in libraries, but are buried there, said Dr. Sharp.

To quote Dr. Sharp: "All great utterance is characterized by three qualities, and the first is deep feeling, the second is utter simplicity of expression, and the third is great originality of thought."

Dr. Sharp's address certainly possessed these three qualities, and was truly great.

THE REPORTERS' CLUB

Everybody in school talks a great deal and I want to persuade every member of the student body to talk to the right persons. These persons are no other than the reporters of the Rotunda Staff. Without them, there would be no staff and without you there would be no news. The problem is not to find enough news, but to get that news spread all over school. Again, I'm asking you to talk to the "reporting people," and some of them are:

Ann Robinson, Virginian Staff.
Sue Puckett, Temporary Y. W. C. A.
Elizabeth Diehl, Junior Class.
Virginia Ellis, Freshman Class.
Arlene White, Athletic Association.
Ruth Richardson, Argus Lit. Soc.
Gwendolyn Edye, Cunningham Literary Society.

Mary Elizabeth Lipscomb, Portsmouth Club.

Louise McCormick, Cotillion Club.
If any organizations have not elected a reporter, please do so at once, and report to Mary Alice Blanton.

ALUMNAE NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. J. Camper, announce the engagement of their daughter, Gladys, to Marvin R. Moss, of Newton, Kan. The wedding will take place in June.

Mrs. Annie Bidgood Wood, of Roanoke, was appointed chief sponsor of the State of Virginia at the Confederate Re-union, held recently in Dallas, Texas.

Miss Ruby Burger has written an interesting article on Language Project Based on Health Rules which was published in the May issue of the Virginia Journal of Education.

SOME OF OUR LEADERS.

Peggy Moore

"Where is Peggy Moore?" is a question that many of us will have to confess that we've asked—and why? Simply because Peggy is one of the most brilliant and capable girls found at S. T. C. If you don't believe it—just talk to her once or ask a favor—and it's done right away! And with such abilities, we find one of the most lovable and attractive personalities in our college—always willing to help, always willing to give up her time and herself to make the lives of others bloom with rose-buds. Yes, she is a "wee, tiny bit of humanity—always happy and leaving a path of sunshine wherever she goes.

Peggy's work in the Dramatic Club has been the work of a professional. She has taken the leading part in a number of plays since she has been here. Her outstanding ones are: Hannah Lightfoot, in Friend Hannah. Plum Blossom in The Yellow Jacket. and Peg in Peg O' My Heart.

Ruth Bartholomew

There are several qualities which are necessary to a true leader. First among these, we would place idealism. No true service is ever performed in this world which does not have a vision back of it. With this ideal spurring one on, ability is added for one must measure up to the responsibility then.

To idealism, we would add the spirit of true service, the willingness to serve at any time and under any circumstances, in no matter how small a capacity.

If to these qualities are added clear, calm judgment and firm conviction, we have our own Ruth Bartholomew.

Our loss next year will be Scarlett's gain and her name together with that of Mary Finch, will always embody the ideals for which our College stands.

Ann Conway

Ann has shown unusual ability in the writing of poetry and in the directing of plays. It was greatly due to her creative genius that the "Gizzard of Was," make such a hit last year, when given by the Class of '24.

She has made an enviable record as a scholar. She is a born leader, whether in scholarship, pleasure, or any activities found in our college.

Rarely do we find a person of such broad sympathy, of such unusual tact, and of such great resourcefulness.

A picture drawn by Miss Bessie Barclay, also appeared in the Virginia Journal.

Among the recent visitors, were—Thelma Yost, Margaret Traylor, B. B. Brooks, Burdette Bagley, Dora Jett, Helen Patton, Bessie and Mary Wright, Linda Thomasson, Catherine Riddle, Maude Bailey, Julia Alexander, Emily Calcott, Cabell Gannaway, Mrs. Catherine Hill Shepherd, Mrs. Grace Woodhouse Hopkins, and little daughter, Mrs. Martha Goggin Woodson, Mrs. Vera Tignor Sandidge.

RE-UNION OF UNITED CONFEDERATE VETERANS AT DALLAS, TEXAS

On Saturday night, May 16, a party of eight left Farmville to attend the annual re-union of the United Confederate Veterans, which was held at Dallas, Texas, this week. Among those in the party, were: Miss Caroline Parkinson, of Warrenton, who was sent as maid to the Confederate Sons and, Miss Ruth Paultet, of Farmville, who was maid of honor to Commander-in-chief of U. C. V., General Thomas. The re-union lasted throughout May 22, and the party is expected to return Sunday, May 24th.

"Just to think," said Sam Pope, "I promised my mother never to be a baseball player."

"Well," said Coach Welch, "you've kept your promise."—Yellow Jacket.

COTILLION CLUB DANCE

Men!! Yes!! Mobs of 'em!
Food!! Yes!! Mobs of it!
Oh, haven't you heard about it? The Cotillion Club gave a dance Friday night in the Recreation Hall. Good time. That doesn't express it! There were just enough stags to keep the girls from getting "stuck," and just enough couples to keep from having a crowd.

Jac Draper and Mr. Portlock led the figure. Music? Oh, we had one of the best orchestras in this part of the country. The famous Sensational Synopaters. Miss Mary and Miss Winnie Hiner were there to see that everything went off all right and when the final chord was struck everybody stopped, with sighs, wishing that it could happen again really soon.

Cotillion Club's next year's officers:
President—Jac Draper.
Leader, "Dot" Myers.
Bus. Mgr., Alice Thomas.
Reporter, Louise McCormick.

WRITE IN MINE

Vaccination conversation has been forgotten—arms are no longer discussed in sympathetic and agonizing tones. Need you wonder why? The Annuals are here, and such exclamations as: "Write in Mine," "please autograph y-e-r picture," "you haven't written in mine, yet," are heard daily. Vaccinated arms are bravely carrying heavy volumes while fountain pens are being brought to the front as never before. All day you push madly back and forth, up and down, for write-ups from your never-to-be-forgotten school chums, and when night comes you while away the precious moments of study-hour rambling through the pages of those loving parting words. In the dining-room, the other day, I heard a notice: "Anyone who wishes to sell her Annual for $5.00, apply to—". Why—I wouldn't part with mine for $25.00, would you?

PI KAPPA OMEGA'S CONVENT'N

Pi Kappa Omega held its annual convention at S. T. C. Farmville, Va., on May 16, 1925. The business meeting and the tea were given Saturday afternoon, followed by the open meeting at eight o'clock and the banquet at nine-thirty.

Dr. Shannon of Washington and Lee University was the speaker of the evening end, after being introduced by Mr. Grainger, gave a most interesting and enlightening address on a modern college curriculum.

The visiting alumnae were: Misses Emily Calcott, Julia Alexander, Catherine Riddle, Helen Patton, Maude Bailey, and Mrs. Catherine Hill Shepherd. The representatives from Beta Chapter, were:

Misses Elizabeth Sparrow and Virginia Campbell. Other guests of the active chapter, were Dr. and Mrs. Jarman, Misses Sutherland, Mary Clay Hiner, Winne Hiner, Coulling, Mrs. H. E. Barrow and Mr. W. B. Anderson.

BLUE RIDGE

Last year when our delegates went to Blue Ridge, they found that they would have to share a cottage with the William and Mary delegates because not enough girls were being sent from here. Of course they had a good time and enjoyed everything just lots. Besides getting a great deal of benefit from what they did, they could not help envying colleges who had enough representatives to fill a whole cottage. These girls made a resolve on the spot, that this year, there would be a Farmville State Teachers College cottage.

They have more than carried out their resolve, for there are to be more delegates than the required number for one cottage—even enough to have the fun of crowding up a bit. Every day it seems, some one is added to the Blue Ridge list. At a recent meeting of the Rotunda staff, Lucy Haile Overbey, was elected to go as their representative.

JUNIOR LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS TO BE ORGANIZED AT S. T. C.

Miss Wilhelmine London has just returned from a week-end trip to Roanoke, where she has been attending the Virginia State Convention of the League of Women Voters.

Earlier a number of S. T. C. girls attended the National Convention which was held in Richmond. As a result, these girls with Miss London's assistance, are planning to organize in our college, a Junior League.

We welcome this innovation with great enthusiasm, for we welcome every opportunity for training in better citizenship.

MR. MONTGOMERY SPEAKS IN CHAPEL

Mr. Montgomery, of the Co-operative Educational Association in Virginia, acquainted us in chapel, May 8, with the work and aims of this organization. As a co-ordinate organization of all the State departments, it seeks to make the school the community center. Its first division, that Mr. Montgomery explained, was the County Council, which serves to bring the county officials together. The Community League offers the teacher an opportunity to transmit her ideas to the patrons, while the Junior Community League works with the boys and girls' other organizations, for the betterment of school and community. To study and meet the needs of the child below school age, the Child Study Organization, have been formed. One of our duties in the future as teachers should be to interest our special community in this Educational Association.

"Yes."

"Well, I've done it! You said you would give me a quarter if I brought home a good report from school."

MAKE A DEGREE YOURS

At some time or other, you will decide upon the extent of your training for the teaching profession. It is easy, at the end of two years to say that you have had enough preparation, at least a sufficient amount to try teaching. With such qualifications, do not let yourself feel satisfied. Two principal reasons make a B. S. in Education of increasing importance.

In the first place, your lot as a teacher, will present fewer difficulties, for added training has supplied the ability to cope with problems. Your salary will be greater in proportion to your fitness. Moreover, the time is not far off, when Virginia's demand, as well as need, will call only for degree graduates.

In the second place, how much greater is the worth of a degree teacher's service! Pupils cannot help but be benefited by the more thorough preparation of their teacher. And, after all, is it not for the best possible instruction of Virginia's young girls and boys, that we students at S. T. C. are being trained?

THE ROTUNDA

TO MARCHETA (?)

When fall the shadows of the eventide,
And in the windows lamps begin to glow,
Your vision comes and hovers by my side,
And in my ears your laughter, soft and low
Comes tinkling like the waters of a stream
That flows thru shady woods and meadows bright
The live-long day, 'till evening shadows gleam;
Then passes on into the quiet night
I feel again your hand within my own,
And try in vain to press it to my lips;
Your hair, by soft Utopian breezes blown,
Across my cheek like liquid moonlight slips.
When evening shadows fell, and lights were low,
You charmed away the sadness and the pain—
Marcheta, love me still—I need you so;
My sweetheart, let me kiss your hand again.
—Hootman.

RECOLLECTION

On the ocean's moon-washed beaches,
Wandering happily went we,
I made love in pretty speeches,
And she (so she said) loved me.
Then we sat upon the sands there,
And we watched the distant ships,
And, though soft and warm her hands were,
How more sweetly soft her lips!

How the minutes fled that June night!
Far too short the golden hour,
As we wandered in the moonlight
By the crumbling light-house tower.

There in repetition pondered
Of the "wandering," I'll not Mention just how far we wandered,
But we didn't leave the spot.
—Widow.

WHAT SHOULD A GIRL DO?

If a girl doesn't talk enough she's "uninteresting."
If she does, she's a "bore."
If she goes with all the boys, she's a
"flirt."
If she goes with one, she's married.
If she giggles too much, she's silly.
If she don't, she's too serious.
If she majors in mathematics or science,
she's "queer."
If she gets all A's, she thinks she knows more than the rest.
If she gets all F's, she's dumb.
So tell me now, "What is a girl to do?"—Exchange.

Greek Parody

If a Theta
Meta Beta
With a Gamma Phi
If a Theta
Greeta Bet
Needa Kappa Psi
Every Theta
Has a Meta
None to say have I.
But all the boys
They smile at me
'Cause I'm a Hunka Pi.
—Exchange.

BELIEVE IT?

A woman's heart's like a toy balloon
Knows no binding or fetter
She never loves a man so well
That she can't love another better
I had a girl seemingly true,
But vamp me, I would not let her,
So, it don't hurt my heart a gosh darn bit
To see my rival get her.

WHAT DO YOU ASK?

Do you know you have asked for the costliest thing,
Ever made by the hand above—
A woman's heart and a woman's life,
And a woman's wonderful love?

Do you know you have asked for this priceless thing,
As a child might ask for a toy, Demanding what others have died to win,
With the reckless dash of a boy?

You have written my lesson of duty
out,
Manlike you have questioned me—
Now stand at the bar of a woman's
soul,
Until I shall question thee.

You require your mutton shall always be hot,
Your Sox and your shirts shall be whole—

I require your heart shall be as true
as God's stars,
And as pure as Heaven your soul.

You require a cook for your mutton and beef
I require a far better thing
A seamstress you're wanting for stockings and shirts;
I look for a man and a king.

A king for a beautiful realm called home,
I require your heart shall be as true
as God's stars,
And as pure as Heaven your soul.

And a man that the maker, God
Shall look upon as he did the first,
And say, "It is good."

I am fair and young, but the roses will fade
From my soft cheeks away some day
Will you love me then mid falling leaves
As you did mid the blossom of May?

Is your heart an ocean so strong and deep
I may launch my all on its tide?
A loving woman finds Heaven or Hell,
On the day she is made a bride.

I require all things that are grand and true,
All things that a man should be
If you give this all I would stake my life,
To be all you demand of me.

If you cannot do this, a laundress and cook
You can hire with little pay,
But a woman's heart and a woman's life
Are not to be won that way.

COLLEGE DAY OBSERVED

Friday, May 15, was neither a national nor a school holiday, but simply a day to notice the college side of this institution. Those students who expect to return for a degree were dressed in white for the occasion.
After the Seniors had taken their places in chapel, the future degree girls marched in, also to the tune of "Alma Mater." The importance of a degree was thly discussed by four students: Misses Ida Hill, Mary Rives Richardson, Marlina Willis, Grace Noel. The number of girls who plan to take the four year course, is encouraging, and evidently increasing every year.

HIAWATHA

(With apologies to Longfellow.)
In the land of Arrow Collars,
By the valley of Corona,
Where the lover Instant Postum
Met his sweetheart Cutie Cura.

By the mountain of Fels' Naptha,
In the hut of Beaver Board,
Dwelt they then with Aunt Jemima,
Mother of the Cutie Cura.

On the shore of Enralypstoi,
Hard into the Liquid Tar Soap,
Aunt Jemima with her Kodak
Stood and pointed to the Crisco.

"Yonder dwells the Locomotive,
In the forest of O Cedar;
He it was who killed Van Heusen,
Slew him with his Kuppenseimer."

Boldly then the Instant Postum
Seized his trusty Biflex Bumper,
Gave his bride one last fond Djer-Kiss,
Kissed her by the Coca-Cola.

"I am going, Cutie Cura,
On a long and distant journey,
Where the great names Skinner's
Satin
And Palmolive are unknown.

"Guard you well your daughter Jello
And our last-born baby, New-Skin."
Launched he then his Evinrude barque
On the shining Pluto Water.
Stood she then and munched the Grape-Nuts,
As he chugged toward the sunset;
While she smiled the smile of Ivory,
Shed she tears of Listerine.

THE EXHIBIT OF THE INDUSTRIAL ARTS DEPARTMENT

From Monday, May 25, to Thursday 28th, the Industrial Arts Department displayed its work of the past year.

To enter the room and look upon the numerous beautiful articles, one might believe they were in Valentine's Shop on Fifth Avenue.

The work represents that which is taught in the 2nd grade and on through the High School. While the girls are taught to make these attractive, inexpensive and practical articles, they are taught how to teach children to make them. On close examination, it can be seen that the articles were not made from expensive materials. Some of the beautiful pictures are made from wrapping paper. The boys of the Fifth and 6th grades of the Training School made useful and attractive fern stands from shell boxes. The girls made their own parchment paper used in making lamps, etc. The real work, originality, and artistic touch, is what makes the articles stand out.

All of the students have done admirable work, but especially those who have continued the course for more than one term. The work of Elizabeth Rucker and Margaret Wallace, is unsurpassed.

The work of the department is to be commended. The students attribute their success to the patience, and kind instruction of Miss Hazel B. Millican, the instructor of the Industrial Arts Department.

The following are some of the articles which have been made:

Desk sets, fern stands, baskets, candle-sticks, sandwich trays, bread boards, foot-stools, vases, posters, pictures, chairs, tables, rugs, toy animals book-ends.

OUT-DOOR PRAYERS

There is always something new and delightful to think of. Perhaps the idea of holding our after-supper prayer service outside, is not as purely original as it is enjoyable. If you haven't yet tried its charm, do not let another evening pass without attending this service under the trees.

Perched somewhere in the foliage, the birds mingle their chants with our hymns, and lend an accompaniment unsurpassed by that of a piano. All around lie the freshness of Nature and the quiet that we can be truly thankful for.

Prayer seems a more spontaneous utterance amid such surroundings. But instead of believing me, that it's nicer than strolling along High Street right after supper, why not take part yourself, in this evening devotional on the hill?

VIRGINIAN STAFF

At a joint meeting of the old and new Virginian staffs, Cornelia Dickinson was elected to represent the annual at the Blue Ridge conference.

The contract for the annual of 1926, has already been re-let to the Brown-Morrison company, whose work this year has been very satisfactory.

Stone Mountain Tragedy Explained

On Monday evening, May fourth, Meredith College students and friends of the College were fortunate in hearing the noted sculptor, Mr. Borglum, deliver a most impressive lecture. Mr. Borglum is best known to the public because of the recent Stone Mountain tragedy.

In the beginning, Mr. Borglum stated that he had chosen Raleigh as a place for refuge for a temporary home. In his lecture Mr. Borglum cleared himself of three charges that have been brought against him. First, Mr. Borglum said that he did not destroy the Angel of Saint John the Divine. Second, he explained the coin charge that has been falsely interpreted, and Third, he explained that he had never collected one cent for the work he had done on Stone Mountain, but has even gone so far as to finance some of his plans.

Mr. Borglum then said that he had held a special conference with some of the Stone Mountain committee the day he delivered the lecture and he expressed the belief that possibly the Stone Mountain Memorial would be finished by himself.

Mr. Borglum succeeded in gaining the sympathy of his hearers by his lecture, and it is hoped that the people of the South will co-operate and show their loyalty to Mr. Borglum in so great an undertaking. For just as Milton would not be capable of finishing a play of Shakespeare no other sculptor will be able to finish the task Mr. Borglum has so originally and whole-heartedly designed.

LITERARY PROGRAMS

The classes in American Literature, have all turned their attention to the study of a number of modern writers. Miss Davis, the instructor in that branch of the English department, suggested programs as an interesting way to study these interesting persons, about whom everyone should know something. As a result, each class period is devoted to a study of one special author, in the form of a literary program. At some time or another, each girl participates in one or more programs.

There is a two-fold purpose: practice in literary work and becoming acquainted with great writers. Sara Barksdale, Edna Lindsay, Edna St. Vincent Millay, mean more to some girls than ever before.

The student teachers at Prospect entertained their supervisor, Miss George Mai Taylor, in the tea-room, Wednesday, May 20th.

PI KAPPA OMEGA PRESENTS PLAY

On Thursday night the members of the Pi Kappa Omega Society, presented two delightful on-act plays. The first one, was entitled: 'Entre Acte' and the second 'His Two Candles and a Fan'. Both plays were very charmingly presented and the audience greatly enjoyed them.

JUNIOR STUNTS

You have read of it, heard it expounded on in the class-room, and preached against. Now the Juniors have given their thoughts on it. On Thursday night, May 21, the Junior Class presented their opinion on evolution, that is, evolution of the dance and orchestra. That and two solo selections by Miss Bennett were so well received, that the stunts were repeated on Friday night, May 29th. All of which shows that the Junior class contains some of the best talent in school.

The Jefferson Literary Society accompanied by Miss Lea, went on a picnic to Farmville Lake, Saturday morning, May 23.

After breakfast, the new members were initiated, after which, a very interesting impromptu program was rendered. The remainder of the morning, was spent in wading, rowing, and informal entertainment.

The entire trip was delightful and the society is very grateful to the committee for making possible this picnic.

DEBATE BETWEEN H. S. C. AND S. T. C.

ATHENIANS ENTERTAIN

Last Saturday morning, under the guardianship of their goddess, the Athenians—yes, Miss Graham and Mr. Bowman, included—left S. T. C. for Willis Mountain.

The sun, the bumps, the loss of a hat and the songs enlivened the ride. Of the activities of the Athenians, I am allowed to say but little. I may mention the fact that they climbed the mountain, that they ate such quantities as would have horrified Dr. Field, and that certain members spent the day chasing "bugs." Other incidents, however, must remain a secret, unless you, yourself can probe from an Athenian the number of ice cream cones Mr. Bowman consumed, the depth of Miss Graham's dive into the spring, and the dream told by one of the girls.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Have you heard what is going to happen at Chapel hour Monday, June 1st? No! Why, just this: We are going to have the regular Chapel service. Is that all? Well, I should say not! The cup, yes, the cup is to be awarded. But to what class? The one that has the largest number of points. If you don't know which that is, you had better come and see! There is also another cup! Another cup? Yes, an individual cup to be awarded to the girl who has won the most points in Athletics this year. She is—Why, just every one come and find out!

Now do not forget, Monday morning at Chapel, two cups,—a class, and a girl.

FIRST STUDENT BODY MEETING HELD BY NEW PRESIDENT

A student body meeting was held on May 19, by our new president, Kate Trent.

After the regular business of the meeting, Helen Miller gave the girls an account of her and Kate's delightful trip to Tallahassee.

Kate then told the girls of the new plan she had brought from the conference at Tallahassee. This plan provides for the training of the Freshmen in the various phases of school life, soon after they enter school next year. Its aim is to make the Freshmen acquainted with the college in its many aspects.

LIBRARY NOTICE

Notice!—From now on, all books are due in the Library by May 30th. This is to enable the Librarian to see that all books are in before school closes. Look around your room to be sure that there are no books which should have been returned. Co-operate with the Librarian.

Johnny: "Ma, would it kill baby if he fell off the bed?"

Mama: "Of course, it would."

Johnny: "Now, it wouldn't. Go in and see for yourself."

Friday evening, May 22, was an important date in our college history, as the first inter-collegiate debate between Farmville and Hampden-Sidney was held at that time.

The subject for debate, was a universally accepted question, Resolved: That Institutions of Higher Learning should be Co-Educational. Hampden-Sidney, represented by A. K. Dudley and C. W. Kernan, took the affirmative side of the question, while the negative was presented by Susie Watson and Flenimintine Pierce, of the S. T. C.

The audience voted their opinions on Co-education before and after the debate. Before the debate, the vote was 158 for Co-education and 218 against. After the debate, 173 voted for Co-education and 176 against.

Forceful arguments were given by both sides. The decision of the judges was two to one in favor of the affirmative.

Musical was furnished before the debate by an orchestra consisting of the members of the Farmville and Hampden-Sidney orchestras, combined.

SOCIAL NEWS.

On Friday, May 22, Mrs. Herbert Stokes entertained Pi Alpha delightfully at an informal dance in her home on Appomattox street. After whiling away the evening "mild dance and song," a salad course was served after which each guest was presented with an attractive fan, made in the club colors of white and gold with the Greek letters: 'Pi Alpha,' on the handle.

Tri Sigs have been very fortunate in having many entertainments given in their honor. Miss Camper, the faculty advisor, gave the girls a delightful picnic at Serpell's. Food? All kinds and sorts were not only to be found, but enjoyed to the fullest extent of enjoyments. But this did not end the gaiety! Mrs. S. W. Watkins gave a party on Thursday, June 3. B. Crute and Mrs. Wm Dunnington entertained the members of the Sorority at Farmville Lake on Saturday, June 23. When Monday came, Mary Rives Richardson, a Tri-Sigma, was the gracious hostess of a delightful dinner given at six o'clock in the S. T. C. Tea Room.

The Student Body was greatly grieved to hear of the death of Mrs. Barksdale, who died Monday, May 25, and of Mr. A. B. Armstrong, who died Thursday, May 28. We wish to express our sympathy to Frances Barksdale, and Jennie Armstrong, our thoughts and sincerest sympathy are theirs.

THE BOOKSHELF

The Green Hat by Michael Arlen.
"The Green Hat is the brilliant heroine of the Green Hat is someone we will never forget. In her, we find the light of Michael Arlen's 'lovely people.' The St. Louis Globe says: 'The literary excellence of the book, in which the common place, never, by any chance, intrudes, the exquisite art of it, the rare beauty of it, goes to one's head.'"

THE ROTUNDA

SHOWER IN HONOR OF MISS HELEN MILLER

One of the prettiest and delightful social events of the year, was the miscellaneous shower, given last Saturday afternoon by Miss Mary White Cox, in honor of Miss Helen Miller, whose marriage to Mr. Harold Brown, will take place on the twenty-fourth of June. The many guests assembled in the Senior Parlor where the announcement was made by attractive cards, arched by a rainbow. Then the company followed the bride-to-be, who was led by a trail of rainbow yarn, to the balcony of the dining-room. The rainbow ended in a basket of lovely gifts for the bride. The balcony was decorated charmingly, with ively and cut flowers.

The guests of Miss Cox, included the members of the Home Department, the old and new Student Committees, the Campus League, and a few special friends.

Education as An Asset.

go to school, or if you failed to improve your opportunity when young, you can still set out upon the royal road to Education if you have the will.

And even in the case of those who are college graduates, the best part of their education is gotten from their studies in the ten years after leaving school.

There is no single thing so essential to success, in whatever calling, as Education.

TRAINING SCHOOL ATHLETIC MEET

The Training School Athletic Meet took place Thursday afternoon, May 7th, on the Training School Play grounds, under the direction of the Student Teachers with Miss Elizabeth Crute, as chairman, and Miss Mary Barlow, as supervisor.

A new plan was tried this year very successfully. Every child who was physically fit took part. Children fifteen per cent. under-weight, twenty-five per cent. over-weight, being exempt from running and throwing events.

The program opened with a posture parade of all grades from Third to Seventy, inclusive. They were judged on order of marching and on body carriage. Then followed the jumping, running, throwing events and stunts planned according to the age and ability of different groups.

The scoring system was worked out on the group plan. Each grade being divided into two teams, the Red's and the Blues'. The minimum standard for the group was taken as the average; thus making it possible for the average child to score points for his team.

Each grade went straight from the parade to some event and as soon as that was over they started another, changing places with another group. This rotation continued until every grade had participated in every event. The score was reported to the central score-keeper after every event. After all had completed the course, the score was added and the Reds were the victors. All the children enjoyed participating and they showed good sportsmanship throughout the contest.

ORGANIZED PLAN IN THE TRAINING SCHOOL

Near the end of the fall quarter, a plan of organized recess was worked out and successfully put into operation at the beginning of the Winter Term. Each grade was assigned a place on the playground and under the direction of one or more student teachers.

WHAT DO I ASK?

I know I have asked for a wonderful thing,
The theme of Heaven above,
The song that is played on angel's harps,
A beautiful song called love.

I know I have asked for this priceless thing,
And I'd gladly die for you,
But I would be dead, and love is not love
Unless it is love for two.

My lessons of duty are taught by God,
You have not questioned me
For I have told you of my love—
I do all things for thee.

I have lived a life of roses—and thorns;
I have done my best at success,
Though discouragements have torn my heart
Love is still there I guess.

And while I was fighting to make my start
You sat and waited in peace
For someone to come and kneel at your feet
With a heart full of love to release.

You want a king for a beautiful realm,
A man whom the world admires;
I want a woman whose love is pure
And free of worldly desires;

A heart that is filled with love alone,
Love that will stand the test
Of sorrow, misgivings, sacrifice,
Troubles and all the rest.

Love that will be full of recompense
For the days and weeks and years
Of work, of worry, of struggling on,
Of efforts—and of tears.

You require all things that are grand and true,
All things that a man should be?
Have I not given all that I have,
All—everything, for thee.

This I have I have done — my best — that's all,
Cannot you love me for this?
If not — farewell — and remember, dear,
I seal my love with a kiss.

Mr. Me:—Define space.
Lucille—I have it in my head, but I can't put it into words.

"Who's smoking?"
"Well, you got your pipe in your mouth."
"Yes, and you've got your pants on, but you ain't panting."

She—No.

Ada—No, you don't, I do.

To many a S. T. C. student, the little red lip-stick is more important than the little red school-house.

In German "fast" means "almost." There's no uncertainty about it in English.

Conductor—I say, young woman, you can't go to Richmond on this ticket, it's marked "Richmond to Farmville."
Ruth—That's all right, I'll ride backwards.

"She said she could read me like a book!"
"Well, I suppose you immediately got red."

Steamboat Captain (who had just fallen overboard.)—Don't stand there like a dumb-bell! Give a yell, can't you?
New Deckhand—Certainly, sor. Captain! Rah! Rah! Rah. Rah! Captain!!

Organized Plan

who had previously planned the program for the day, interested in group activities. There are two fifteen minute periods given to recess during the morning session and an hour at noon when most all the children go home. No recess is given after dinner as the lower primary grades do not return and the upper grades are held only forty five minutes, mostly in such work as industrial arts, sewing, cooking, etc., where there is a certain amount of physical activity. This is not enough time for either free play or regular physical training during school hours. As the Training School gives more special subjects than the ordinary public schools, it is difficult to schedule more time for play activities, but there is no doubt that the time will be lengthened next year during the morning session there will schedule at least twenty minutes regular physical training and twenty minutes free play.

We all recognize the educational value of play, that the child grows and develops not only physically but mentally, morally and socially through his play, that the school playgrounds is an important laboratory where the child under supervision learns many of life's lessons that cannot be learned successfully otherwise. Since the above plan has been in operation there are no children standing around doing nothing, fewer getting into mischief during the recess periods. Instead there is more team work, a finer spirit of play, co-operation and sportsmanship.

Of Course

Two freshmen were excavating for a proposed building, when the foreman inquired: "How is it, Pat, you and Mike started together, he has a bigger pile of dirt than you?"
"Shure," was the quick retort, "he's diggin' a bigger hole."

To Miss Graham, who we feel made all this possible. Jean Mitchell gave the College Monogram and the Varsity "F". Miss Graham, in turn, presented the tin cups to the Junior Class.

This class has the distinction of entering every event and winning none. She read the returns of the International Field Meet, which was held on May 6. One hundred and eighty in the United States entered. The S. T. C. of Farmville, won tenth place.

Up Farmville, on Farmville, on to Victory!!

FAREWELL TO OUR FAVORITE HAUNTS

The best of friends must sometimes say good-bye and when we bid farewell to our favorite haunts—the Tea-Room, Gilliam's and the Bakery, sad will be our hearts, for they have each one, meant much to us during our stay at S. T. C. Just what we would have done without them, we do not know. They have been friends to the hungry, and their welcome has brought happiness to many home-sick girls. We cannot forget our own beloved loitering places, and when we leave we will carry with us a memory which will always mean much to each one of us.

THE SOPHOMORE PLAY

The Sophomore Class play will be given Monday, June 8. Do you know what an "Indian Summer" is? If not, you will have a chance to find out all about it on Monday. The cast for the play: Adelaide Emory, Frances Sales, Mobley Brown and Madeline McMurdo.

This play can be characterized as one of the most charming, yet simple, little one-act plays in existence.

ODE TO A GRADUATE

Hail to thee, Girl Graduate!
Unquestioned is thy reign;
We pay thee humble homage,
Like serfs from thy domain.

We hail thee, radiant maiden
In your snowy-white array,
Wondrous as an Angel
Come to earth to stay.

Glorious your beauty,
And many are your charms
Which seem to glorify
The flowers in your arms.

Your fascinating eyes reflecting
The happy spirit harbored there;
Your exquisite, smiling lips effecting
Cameraderie everywhere.

Your molten-golden, rippling laughter
Which drives our cares away
Like a skylark's song which, after Night, ushers the dawn of day.

Many and sincere our wishes
That you may live to learn success
We realize that your noble virtue
Has fully earned your happiness.
—H. C. St. L.

THE LAST DAY OF SCHOOL

The last day of school is the second of June.
And we all are so happy, we could hum
a sweet tune.

Our lessons are over and we're happy
and gay.
As we skip along home to just play,— play,—play.

The swimming hole calls: "Come take a dive!"
The flowers are blooming and the world is alive.

Our lessons are over, and we're happy
and gay.
So come on children, for a nice happy day.

(Written by Edward Gravely, of the Training School, Sixth Grade, eleven years old.)

VESPER SERVICE

The Senior and Sophomore Classes will have charge of Vesper during Commencement, tonight, right after supper. The Sophomores will hold prayers on the Campus. Everyone invited to come. There will be special music and an effort will be made to make the prayer service one which will mean something to everyone.

The Seniors are going to have prayers on the Campus Sunday night after supper. We have not been having prayers on Sunday nights, but I am sure that everyone who comes, will feel that the service has been one never to be forgotten. The music and the service which have been planned, will make of their prayer service, a never-to-be-forgotten part of the Commencement exercises.

MISS DOUGLASS EVERETT

Every year, some of our teachers leave us to journey to far countries, or far States. Miss Douglass Everett left S. T. C. last year, but she has proved that she had no idea of allowing us to forget her, and we have no notion of being a party to such a happening. She decided that a newspaper was the best way to keep us posted, so recently, her high school class in Journalism, of Lakeland, Florida, took charge, edited, and issued the "Lakeland Star-Telegram" for one day. On the front page, Miss Douglass Everett's name met our view, to assure us that she is doing big things.

BLUE RIDGE

The largest delegation that Farmville has ever sent to Blue Ridge left Thursday. This year, Farmville College is to be filled with our own girls, the first time in their history.

The heads or representatives from nearly every organization on the campus have been sent which we feel will mean that a great benefit will be realized next year. The Y. W. has of course been instrumental in getting these girls to go and it is to it that we owe an undying debt of gratitude.

The most active and representative girls were elected to go and we are sure that will add a great deal to the conference, as well as being a wonderful store of inspiration to us for next year.

OFF TO EUROPE

Miss Peck, instructor of history at S. T. C., will spend the summer traveling abroad. Miss Mary Mount, finishing her Sophomore year, sailed a week ago to tour Europe during June and July. Last Wednesday, Miss Evelyn Beckham and Miss Lucy Keith, departed for New York, from where they will cross to Europe to travel in France, Switzerland and British Isles.

SENIORS - SOPHOMORE BREAKFAST

"Oh, broken is the golden bowl! the spirit flower forever! Let the bell toll!—a saintly soul floats on the Stygian river."

The spirits of the departing Seniors are fast being swept away from us! Soon our only hold to them will be that fruitless and empty thing called: Memory!

Wafted on the wings of the breezes, joyously upheld by scores of young voices, is the accompaniment of all kinds of musical instruments and half a dozen happy birds, there came to us this Tuesday morning out at Jackson's spring, that even though the Seniors hiked out and sang and ate and made merry as the Sophomores, forgetful of all Seniors' dignity, much to our delight, that they were nevertheless almost "departed spirits." We realized that we would not have many more opportunities to entertain them here, so we put forth our most mighty attempts to make the Senior-Sophomore breakfast a howling impression there, yet the nature of that impression we will never know. Ah, well, I make Madam Fate a state-y bow; we are grateful for this opportunity.

—The Returning Sophomores.

JUNIOR CLASS MAN ENTERTAINS

There have been parties and parties this year, but the party given the Junior Class by their Class Man, was the finest ever in the party line, because it was different. An out-door party is the best kind and the spacious porch of Hiner Dormitory was alive with the "hub-bub" of happy voices Thursday night. Not only the porch, but the steps were crowded with laughing and chattering Juniors gathered together for a good time, which is never lacking when they are with their Class Man. From all appearances—why! just a peep at the empty saucers showed a Junior's fondness for strawberry cream and not a crumb of the delicious devil's food cake could be found upon a single plate. Why, even the little spoons were proudly taken home for memory books, but we don't need such a book to remember your party, Miss Hiner.

WELCOME

Welcome to our visitors. We are glad you are here. Especially, are we glad to see those who have been graduated in the past, and are still bound to their Alma Mater by ties of love and loyalty. It gives us an inspiration to work harder and spurs us on to go upward, even though the way be rugged and steep.

To you, our parents, relatives, and friends, we extend a hearty welcome. We hope that you will love S. T. C. as much as we do, and, even though you are strangers now, we feel sure that this visit will always be a bright spot in your memory. And again—we say, WELCOME!

GOOD - BYE

You only think you're saying good-bye
When the best of old friends part.
Good-bye's in the hand-clasp, good-bye's in the smile,
But is good-bye in the heart?

I do not speak of the common horde
Whom you meet in this bustling age,
But the one you can open your life—book before,
And whom loves every line on each page.

The one who's not blind, or pretends not to see
Each faultily little way,
But who loves you well in spite of them all
With a love that grows greater each day.

Her finest ideals, her cherished hopes,
When she's gone, you'll remember them all,
And you'll never forget your dear old friend,
So it isn't good-bye, after all!

FAREWELL

We look forward to Commencement this year. Your places can never be filled and we will miss you every day to day the thought that we have only a very few more days with our friends. The Juniors, Freshmen and Sophomores who are coming back have a feeling of relief, for they, at least, are sure you that you will at all times, be welcome. For the Sophomores we can hold out more hope, we hope and we wish you would come back next year, or if not next year, in the year to come, and get your degree. Farewell! It has to be said, so please remember you will be missed and wanted next year!

DRAMATIC CLUB PICNIC

'Twas on June 3rd, about 5 o'clock, when we finally got started, after much hustling and yelling around Farmville lake was our destination, and needless to say, we reached it in good time. Then we went rowing and ate, and did the usual things done on a picnic. A rehearsal was called for 7:30, so of course, we had to be home. The cast drove up to the Student Building, alighted and rushed onto the stage, doffing their straw hats in true dramatic fashion. Thus ended the picnic. Those who had the pleasure of going, were: Miss Wheeler, Gertrude Quinn, Eula Harris, Lucille Wright, Pat Cowherd, Lucy Haile Overbey, Peggy Moore, Frances Sale, Isabel Paine, Kitty Morgan, Louise McCormick, Lyla Colonna, Nelda Frances, Anne Smith, Elizabeth Westbrook, Madeline McMurdo, Isabel Smith, Harriet Boker, Miss Stubbs Mrs. Barre Wall, Billy Anderson.

The Dramatic Club wishes to thank Miss Stubbs, Mrs. Wall, Harriet Boker and Billy Anderson for their kindness in using their cars for the good cause.

THANKS TO MISS WHEELER

Miss Wheeler left Farmville June 4, to take up her job of newspaper work for the summer. This school, as a whole, and the Dramatic Club, particularly, owe a debt of gratitude to Miss Wheeler for her untiring efforts to keep dramatics at S. T. C. from being "amateurist."

SOPHOMORE GIFT

In order that the students who were leaving before Commencement might see the Sophomore parting gift to their Alma Mater, the picture, their gift, has been hung in the Student Building auditorium. The picture is Peace and Plenty, by Innis. It is very beautiful and adds greatly to the attractiveness of the reception hall. The scene of the picture is laid in New York State.

Everyone will feel well repaid if they will take time to go to the Student Building and look at the picture, which is hung in the reception hall.

MISS MILLICAN HONORED

Miss Hazel B. Millican, supervisor of Industrial Arts, at S. T. C., has been made a member of the Society of Arts and Crafts, Boston. The society is the largest of its kind in North America. Miss Millican was also given honorable mention for creditable work in the list of 1924-25 commendations.

CHAPEL SONGS

The unique and interesting systems which reign at Farmville, of classes singing to each other, to the Faculty to the classmen, to the school and to our dear Dr. Jarman, was held this week in Chapel.

The songs were lovely and expressed beautifully, the sentiment of all. Some of the songs were funny, speaking of Flossie D. and J. L. J. in very familiar terms, but some were sad—telling of their love of the school and of heart-rendering partings.

Friday was the climax of the week, when Seniors with tear-dimmed eyes, bade farewell to their Alma Mater.

PORTSMOUTH CLUB

At a recent meeting of the Portsmouth Club, it was decided that the club should give a social and program to the girls graduating from Woodrow Wilson High School, and who are intending to come to Farmville next fall. Two of the club girls are to give short talks at the High School in order to interest the girls further and to give them a desire to continue their education in college.

The social will be given at the Y. W. C. A., and the help of the Y. W. Secretary has already been extended to the club. In this way, it is hoped that there will be gained a better spirit of friendliness and of co-operation among the new girls who come to study in our college.

FRIENDSHIP

When the bonds of friendship are loosened,
And the duties are trampled in dust;
When the bonds of law are strengthened,
And none but their ways are right;
When the hand-clasp of a friend is torn
By the rusty claws of the law;
When custom overshadows my love
For my dearest friend among men;
Then my place will need refilling,
If it's worthy of anyone's charge,
For I am ready to leave it forever,
Forever and a day,—I'm thru.—Exc.

DARN

I woke to look upon a face,
Silent, white and cold.
Oh, friend, the agony I felt,
Can never be told.
We've lived together; but a year,
Too soon it seems to see,
Those gentle hands outstretched and still,
That toiled so hard for me.
My waking thoughts had been of one,
Who now to sleep had dropped;
'Twas hard to realize, Oh, friend
My Ingersoll had stopped.

Letter From A Lover of Literature.

We have the following letter from a lover of literature:
To the Editor-in-Chief of The Rotunda:

If you have room for it, in your next issue, which, I believe, will be the last for the academic year 1924-25, I should like to make public a few very sincere words of commendation in regard to your new literary venture—the State Teachers College Magazine. I have read with interest every item included in your first number, and I feel that they are creditable. Of the verse, it seems to me that the little poem on the first page, entitled: Poetry, is to be especially commended; of the prose, the stories entitled, respectively, Imagine It, and The Decision. Verse expressing profound feeling without a trace of sentimentality; stories, one notable for its modern tone, its refreshing quality, its wholesomeness, the other delicately sweeping and stirring of pathos. All this in a first venture by college students. "Imagine It!" And then the essay on The Purpose of Job. One would read many pages of college publications before finding so deeply thoughtful an interpretation of a piece of literature.

But you probably have not space for detailed criticism. Permit me simply to express again my interest and pleasure in your magazine. I should like, also, to add that I admire its dress, and particularly the use of the college seal for decoration.

There is a need for such a publication as the State Teachers College Magazine. Many readers will watch its career with eager interest.

WHAT IS A FRIEND?

A friend is the first person who comes in when the whole world has gone out.

A bank of credit, on which we can draw supplies of confidence, counsel, sympathy, help and love.

One who considers my needs before my deservings.

The triple alliance of the three great powers, love, sympathy, help.

One who understands our silence.

The jewel whose luster the strong acids of poverty and misfortune cannot dim.

One who smiles on our fortunes, frowns on our faults — sympathizes with us — weeps at our bereavement, and is a safe fortress in all times of trouble.

One who, gaining the top of the ladder, won't forget you if you remain at the bottom. The holly of life, whose qualities are overshadowed in the summer of prosperity and blossoms forth in the winter of adversity.

He who does not adhere to the saying that number one should come first.

A watch which beats true for all times and never runs down.

An earthly minister of heavenly happiness.

A friend is like ivy, the greater the ruin, the closer he clings.

One who, himself is true, and therefore must be so to you. The same today, the same tomorrow, whether in prosperity, adversity or sorrow.—Ex.

Devil: "What are you laughing at?"

His Assistant: "Oh, I just had that flapper locked up in a room with a thousand hats and no mirror."

SATURDAY MORNING MEDITATION

Just a-sittin' wondering what it is I ought to do.

Saturday morning, don't you know, and work a-plenty, too—

There's the floor that should be swept, or mopped around a bit.

There's so many things to do to make the room look fit.

The bed looks sort o' lumpy, the mirrors aren't so clear.

There's dust upon the table, dresser, everywhere, I fear.

The mantles piled up high with books, they'll soon be tumbling down.

But still I sit and gaze and think about the things around.

This little room that should be done, and get I while away.

The precious time which could be spent in useful ways today.

Perhaps you think its laziness and may-be that is true.

But something else prevents me doing what I ought to do.

No classes and the day is hot—don't blame me altogether.

For no one could clean up today,—it's not me, it's the weather!

THE ROTUNDA, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1925.

Number 1

FRESHMEN INVITED TO JOIN VARIOUS CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

The Rotunda, Literary Societies, Dramatic Club, Honor Society, Student Government and Y. W. C. A. Interest Freshmen.

The organizations in school do not belong to the upper classmen alone, they belong to every student and they are glad to have every student take part in them.

Sometimes Freshmen come to Farmville and have been here two or three terms before they know that The Rotunda is their paper and that the Staff is always glad for contributions. Vacancies are constantly occurring and every Freshman has an equal chance with the upper classman to fill the vacancy, but how can The Rotunda Staff know which one out of 450 who is gifted with literary ability unless you help us. If you are interested in school papers and would like at some time to become a member of the staff, give yourself a "try-out", that is write some article, theme or news event, sign your name and drop in the Rotunda box; your name will not be printed but it may give you an opportunity to become a member of the staff.

Do you know that there are six Literary Societies in school? The Argus, Cunningham, Pierian, Athenian, Jefferson and Ruffin. You are eligible to membership in any one of these. Keep your English work above average so that you may be recommended. Then there is little doubt but what you will be a member.

The Dramatic Club "try-outs" will take place very soon. Every new girl in school has a chance to become a member of the Dramatic Club if she has any talent. Don't be ashamed to try, be a good sport. If you are talented the Dramatic Club needs you. If there are girls who can do better along the Dramatic line than you can, you have at least done your part.

Like the Dramatic Club, the Glee Club decides on its new members by a system of "try-outs". Now there are certainly quite a number of excellent voices to be found among 450 girls. So don't be timid, Mrs. King hasn't time to go round and try all of those 450 girls. If you know that you have a voice which is average or above, go and sign up to try out. Give the school the benefit of your voice.

Some girls have come here and stayed a year before they knew we had such a thing as an Honor Society. Did you know it? We have, and the name is Pi Kappa Omega. Any and every girl has a chance to become a member. However, the requirements are that a girl shall make an average of nearer "A" than "B" on all of her academic work, that she show an ability to lead and a spirit of service. Scholarship, leadership, character and service are the four things required, by studying you may make your scholarship average, take part in the

Y. W. C. A. AT CENTRALIA

From Saturday, September 19, until the following Tuesday morning, the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet of our College, with Miss Willie London, held a set-Hedge Lawn. Isn't the name itself in Centralia near Richmond.

Hedge Lawn Isn't the name itself suggestive of a large, rambling home with a beautiful lawn surrounded by evergreen? There business and pleasure mixed. Conferences half-filled the afternoons and nights; and our Cabinet considered, talked over, and finally settled upon various plans to make this year the best ever at S. T. C. From such an environment as Hedge Lawn came the Book Store idea. (We always knew "Doolittle" could extract money from a person who had been "broke" a week.)

People, however, dear readers, must not think too deeply and continuously. Therefore, girls of the various clubs and organizations there that week-end amused themselves by rambling in the nearby country, swimming, and playing tennis. Everyone met everyone else, and everybody went to Richmond Monday. Sh-h-h! It's a secret! But "Chubby" and "Doolittle" missed the street car one day—and consequently dinner; came puffing in while dessert was being served, and compromised with "Sweets for the Sweet." That isn't all concerning "cats" either. Picture the Cabinet seated on the beautiful lawn eating slices of luscious watermelon!

Envious? Of course you are. 'Cause we had a grand and glorious time. Ask Miss London!

MISS GRENELS JUNIOR MAN

At a meeting of the Junior class held this week, an event that promises well for the future took place. Miss Grenels was elected class man for the Junior class. She has all Juniors backing her and she is sure to bring the Junior class lots of new, original ideas.

To come down from the clouds and speak of finances, the class has found a rather profitable way of adding to the amount in the treasury. On Monday and Thursday night the halls were filled by the Juniors selling sandwiches of several different kinds. They proved to be greatly in demand so we have hopes for the future along the same line.

You are invited to Prayers after supper each night in the auditorium.

"What are you writing?"
"A joke."
"Well give him my regards."

TEACHERS COLLEGE HAS LARG- EST ENROLLMENT IN HISTORY

Forty-Sixth Session Opened September 22nd, With 900 Students; Forty-six Applying For Degrees—Large Freshman Class.

Y. W. C. A. RE- CEPTION HELD

On Friday evening, September 25, the student body and faculty of State Teachers College and the ministers of the town were delightfully entertained at a reception, given by the Young Women's Christian Association in the Recreation hall of the college. The hall was attractively decorated with goldenrod and potted plants. During the evening punch was served.

The guests were entertained by a charming musical program. Miss Emma Mehan Hunt of Roanoke, who has studied voice in New York, sang three very beautiful selections and Miss Virginia Vincent of Emporia, and Helen Hodges of Sutherland, also added to the program by singing. Althea Chappell of Norfolk, played several selections on the piano and Mrs. Warren D. Bowman played charmingly on the violin.

The reception was well attended, everyone having an enjoyable evening.

MISS HINER SENIOR MAN

At an enthusiastic class meeting of the Seniors last Wednesday night, Miss Mary Clay Hiner was unanimously re-elected "class man."

The Senior's installation service will be held as soon as their caps and gowns arrive. After the service, they will, on Saturdays, march into Chapel in caps and gowns.

The Senior class is glad to welcome the following to its number: Mrs. May Marshall Edwards, Fanny Bell Shorter, Selma Hindle, Virginia Boyd, Audrey Chewning, Margaret Lewis Stearnes, and Mildred Smith.

CONGRATULATIONS, FRESHMEN!

Freshmen—we want to congratulate you! You are a fine bunch. We know of the inconveniences overlooked by you and we are proud to have your smiling faces among us. Some of you are far away from the main building, but you get to me on time, you get to class on time—you don't complain. Maybe you think these things haven't been noticed, but we can assure you that we sympathize with you in your troubles and smile with you because you smile at troubles. Keep it up Freshies and you'll surely come out on top!

Support the Student Government!

The State Teachers College opened its forty-sixth annual session on September 22, the enrollment being the largest in the history of the institution. Nearly 900 girls have already matriculated, 450 of these being members of the freshman class. The degree class this year has an enrollment of forty-six, this being the largest class ever enrolled for the B. S. degree. The junior class numbers eighty-five and the sophomore about 320.

In spite of the fact that four new dormitories have been added to the rooming spaces of the college, every room is not only filled, but large numbers who applied during the summer, could not be admitted. The chaperones of the new dormitories include Misses Mary Peck, E. Myrtle Grenels, Brownie Tallaferro, and Ida Hill.

The formal opening was held at the chapel hour on Friday morning. The Rev. Mr. White of the Methodist Church conducted the devotional exercises; and after a word of greeting from the ministers of the town Dr. Jarman welcomed the students and introduced the new members of the faculty, who include the following:

James E. Walmsley, Ph. D., head of the department of history, who comes from Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C.; Elizabeth G. Marshall, Ph. D., associate in the English department, who is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and the University of Virginia, and who also studied in England last year; Frances Waters, B. S., associate teacher in the department of geography and a graduate of the George Peck College; Clive T. Her, a graduate of the Sargent School of Physical Training, Harvard University, who is an associate in the department of physical education; and Miss Elizabeth Lewis, A. B., graduate of State Teachers College, Farmville, and Randolph Macon. Miss Lewis is an associate in the department of English. She is taking the place of Miss Carrie Sutherland, who is spending the year at Columbia University, taking graduate work. Miss Ilma von Schilling, supervisor of the seventh grade, is back after a year's leave of absence spent in studying at Columbia.

Misses Grace L. Russell, Katherine Tupper and Alice Carter of the faculty were engaged in graduate study during the summer at Columbia University. Miss Russell took a part of her work under the leadership of the department of journalism while there.

HONOR AND STUDENT GOVERNMENT.

Since the freshman training councils and examination are over, some may decide that student government rules and regulations are new things of the past and that everyone is through with such things. But, on the contrary, your responsibilities with reference to them are just beginning. You learned the rules and policies in order that you may uphold and obey them from now on.

There is nothing more closely related to student government than honor. The mere routine of training councils may come and go, but honor lives on forever. No one would be willing to have her sense of honor taken from her; therefore, let her make use of this highly prized possession by employing it in becoming an enthusiastic law abiding member of our Student Government Association.

When one is pleased one can smile, when one is happy one can laugh, when one is spellbound one can not talk and so, Dr. Jarman that is the state we are in when we think of the beautiful gifts you have given us this fall. We can never tell you how much we appreciate all the beautiful new furniture.

"How darling," "How perfectly adorable," and such phrases are all we have said or heard this week. The Student Building Reception Hall is simply gorgeous and so artistic with the little red chairs scattered among the grey against the blue rug. Our dormitory rooms in the Student Building are so complete and pretty that we don't dare leave our room in a mess for fear of spoiling the beauty of the furniture.

But the Main Building has not been neglected upstairs on the second floor is the coziest little sitting room with bright colored draperies where many a cold wintry afternoon will be spent.

After prayers there is a mad scramble through the hall to the Recreation Hall. Of course, Dr. Jarman does certainly and a lot of girls and that all work and no play will make Jane a dull girl. The Recreation Hall has its supply of pretty furniture and decorations but the large space has been left for dancing and to be used for any kind of fun.

Dr. Jarman, if we can't tell you how much we appreciate your gifts, we will let actions speak and you just watch us enjoy this winter more than any other.—Thanks to you!

JOAN SPEAKS—

How many years I have sat here I can hardly remember but it is always with a great throb of joy that I see the old front doors thrown open to welcome the old and the new girls in the fall.

Old girls, you know your Joan is glad to see you back and is, as always, your friend. But it is to the new girls that I want to talk especially. From my position in the Reception Hall I see and hear a great deal and that is why I often take a tiny space in the Rotunda to talk to you. First of all I want you to love Farmville and feel at home here, and the way to do this is to go into every activity on the campus with all your might. What about studying? you ask. Of course study and study hard. We'd like for Miss Jennie to have to order a new supply of Honor Roll cards but you can study a great deal better if you are busy and happy.

I know this is true for I have been here long enough to know. I saw the school when it was very, very small, when we had our first degree class, when we built the Student Building and now when our family has grown to nearly a thousand and we have fifty proud Seniors who will soon be donning their caps and gowns.

Freshman, I love you and want you to love me. Some of you have already learned to say, "Meet me at Joan." I am the spirit of Farmville, of love, service and honor. As surely as I led my France to victory in days of old, I will lead my girls of S. T. C.

JUST VASES

I stand within my shop
And gaze about at shelves piled high
Such funny wares!

Hardly a vase in all the lot
Not seamed by wear
Or crooked, or with a handle off
A corner gone.

Poor, time worn clay
I smile—so tired.
Remembering a day
When each was fair and whole

And colorful and new;
Remembering a day
When each was broken;
And being broken, mended . . .

I gaze about the shelves
All full, except one little spot
Vacant; pitiless in its emptiness.
I do not smile

Remembering a day
That first vase fell—
Shattered—on the floor,
The only one

Too broken for mending . . .
I gaze about the shelves
With quick distaste
Just mended clay

Better to break forever
Than mar oneself by mended corners.
Queer, how easily they broke
After that first vase fell.

S. T. C. GIRL HONORED

Elizabeth Bugg, undergraduate representative of our Y. W. C. A., has been appointed as Virginia State Representative of Southern Council for Week-end Conferences. In the Spring, she will plan week-end conferences for the training of new Cabinet members.

CHAPERONES ENTERTAIN NEW GIRLS

What can drive away the blue quicker than real friendliness? And what can make a homely girl more contented than the feeling that she is really among friends? Our hand goes out to the chaperones who have welcomed the new girls with open arms. Not only have they given them words of cheer, but have entertained them with little parties in order that they may know them better and also to acquaint the Freshmen with each other. The Rotunda speaks for the Freshmen who wish to extend their thanks and loyalty to their chaperones.

Get Sweets

If you are hungry, eat candy—got it from the Sophomores in room twenty-nine.

"Ye Second-hand Book Shoppe"

If perchance, in your wanderings about the halls of this, our College, you espied a girl—that is, her head—surrounded entirely by volumes of knowledge, you would have discovered upon investigation, that it was not the most studious person at S. T. C. (perhaps) but a seller of books in a uniquely devised book shop. It is the only one of its kind in existence—at S. T. C.

How the old girls, with a giggle or a malicious grin passed over a much marked Psychology or History book to an unsuspecting Freshman! (Wait until next term, you "Rats", and you too may declare that "Revenge is Sw. et.")

The Y. W. C. A. had charge of this book-selling plan, by which old and new girls alike were benefitted. About $200 worth of books were sold and the "Y. W." reaped the small but well deserved amount of $17.50.

All students concerned express their appreciation to the Y. W. C. A.

VOICE OF THE ROTUNDA BOX CALLS TO FRESHMAN

The Rotunda wishes to invite all Freshman as well as old girls to contribute to its columns. The staff has no way of finding out Freshmen who can do newspaper work except by a formal questionnaire. If you wish to contribute to the Rotunda write your name, room number and what phase of work you are interested in on a slip of paper and drop it, in the Rotunda box through the slot in the office door. All contributions to the Rotunda must be signed, your name will not be published if there is an objection. Your work is solicited and appreciated by the student body.

Notice to Reporters

All contributions to the Rotunda must be in the office box not later than Friday night of each week as the paper will go to press Saturday and will come out on Tuesday.

FIRST STUDENT BODY MEETING SEPTEMBER 23

As Kate Trent, president of the Student Association arose to address the student body for the first time this term on Wednesday evening, she was greeted by cheers.

The meeting was opened by the singing of our Alma Mater song, after which the president extended a cordial greeting and a hearty welcome to both new and the old students.

It was necessary to bring before the girls a few important regulations and to announce that the Student Government rules would go into effect on Thursday, September 24.

The question of having an open forum at each regular meeting of the student body was openly discussed, voted on, and passed.

By the open forum, it is hoped that both old and new students will feel to a higher degree that they have a part in student government.

SENIORS HAVE JUNIOR GIRLS

Instead of selecting their Junior girls at random from either the freshman, sophomore or junior classes, the Senior class of 1926 has decided to choose their Junior girls on a firmer basis of friendship, and that by their doing so a more collegiate standard may be reached. This leaves the sophomore the chance to have a freshman for their Junior girl and makes a more equal division. The junior class is delighted that they are to have the honor of having senior sisters.

MISS BESSIE TREVOETT AT S. T. C.

Miss Bessie Trevoyett, representing the Woman's Mission Board of the Baptist Church, has been with us this week conducting a class in Missions study. She also spoke to us at Princeton on Tuesday night. Those who had the opportunity to meeting Miss Trevoyett and hearing her speak, have been both charmed and delighted. We enjoyed having her with us and sincerely hope that she will visit us again.

DRAMATIC CLUB TRY-OUT THIS WEEK

The Dramatic Club is eager to be a weak again. There are many of the old members back and we feel that with them, and the material we can see in the freshman class, we shall have the most successful year we have ever had. All girls, either old or new who are interested in this work, will be given a chance to try out either Monday or Tuesday night of next week, before the following committee:

Miss Leola Wheeler, Miss Mary P. Haynes, Louise McCormick, Lucy Harte Overmyer, Mary Alice Baman, and Frances Sale.

The passage selected by the try out committee is a short scene from "She Stoops to Conquer," but any reading or recitation may be used. Come on, girls, try out. Let us cooperate with Miss Wheeler and make this the most enjoyable, as well as the most profitable, year the Dramatic Club has ever spent.

WARNING—Keep doors and windows locked and your valuables hidden away. "THE THIEF OF FARM DAD" is coming to Farmville soon.

MONOGRAM CLUB

The students who won their S. T. C. monogram and varsity "F" last year organized a monogram club. The purpose of this club is to promote and encourage good sportsmanship, and all phases of athletics in this school. This club has its place among the various activities of the campus and any student winning either a varsity "F" or S. T. C. monogram is eligible in this club.

GLEE CLUB HOLDS MEETING

The regular meeting of the Glee club was held Wednesday afternoon, in Room D. Miss Louise Marsh, who represented the club at Blue Ridge gave a very interesting account of her stay at the Conference. She brought back many interesting facts in regard to music clubs in other colleges. It was decided that, following the example set by many other colleges, we should have a Glee club and a Choral club. The best voices in the Choral club shall be picked by Mrs. King for the Glee club. The new Glee club, which shall be composed of the best voices in school, will have only about fifty members. Try outs for all students will be on Monday and Tuesday nights in Room D. The try-outs will be before a committee chosen by Mrs. King from the old Glee club. Come on, girls, don't be afraid to try; show your school spirit by helping this year's Glee club, to be the best ever.

WHY DO WE HAVE TO GO TO SCHOOL ON SATURDAYS?

This question is being asked all over school. Dr. Jarman wants to do every thing possible to make S. T. C. rate as an A-1 college. All of the best checks have a six-day week of classes. Having classes on Saturday also relieves the schedule committee. Most of the classes are over by four o'clock; only rarely are classes held after four. If other girls' colleges can do it, we can too, so buck up, girls, and stop complaining.

Morning Watch is held by the Y. W. C. A. every Sunday morning at 7:45 in the Student Building Lounge, all are invited.

Freshman (not so sweet): "Sure I love masquerade parties."

Englishman: "I say, old chap, do you carry that brand of cigarettes, or a Fortunate Stroke?"

Absent minded dentist (tinkering with his car for car): "Now I am afraid this is going to hurt you just a little."

I see by the papers there's been a lot of picknickers around here.

Bible Prof. "What was the straightest man of Bible time?"

Fresh Freshman: "Joseph, because the Pharaoh made a ruler out of him."

"I'm the cat!" said the mouse when he saw he was covered.

Our prize dumb question heard at the prom: "Who is that girl over there with the bobbed hair?"

Jonah: How far are we from land?

Wahne: 3,000 miles.

Jonah: Don't leave me, big boy.

Entertainment

Licence Clerk (pausing at street corner) Look here stranger, you can't sell anything in this town without a pedler's licence.

Pedler: Man, you certainly speak truth. I know I can't sell anything in this town but I didn't know the reason.

That's Different

GIRL: Will you please turn on the radio, Jack.

Harold: Why do you keep calling me Jack?

She: Oh, I'm sorry. I keep thinking this is Wednesday instead of Tuesday.

Laugh This Off

Loud Ticker: "With I was boss of our place, I'd show 'em how to run the business."

Other Fellow: "Athlete! Let's assume that you are. Now answer me this. If you were trying to build up 'fovatts' would you hire yourself for your present job if you were boss?"

Keep the Campus Beautiful!

ATHLETIC ACTIVITIES

Is the Athletic Association awake? If you want to know what has been planned for this season in order to answer this foolish question glance over the sports that will be scheduled immediately then answer the question for yourself.

Tennis Tournament

A tennis tournament is to be scheduled as soon as the courts are dry. In other words—if the weather permits a tournament for everyone will be scheduled this week. Only singles will be played and the winner will be presented with a loving cup. Some whisper around that the Freshman will "walk away with it." Others claim the Sophomores will surely win while still others are positive that either the Juniors or Seniors will get the cup without half trying. But remember this, everyone has an equal chance, and everyone should not only fight for the cup but for her class.

Sign up to play and then watch the bulletin board to see whom you will play against. Those who play in the finals and semi-finals will be announced later.

Hockey

This week another game will be introduced on the campus. It is almost too good to be true. However, it is true that we are going to play hockey this year! Every girl in every class has a chance for the class hockey team. And then the real competition and fun will begin when the inter-class hockey tournament is staged. Come on and help make your class team the champion team the first year hockey is played here. Practice will be in the afternoon from 4:15 until 5:30.

Basket-ball

Will the red and white continue to celebrate the athletic cup this year? Will the Sophomores win the Thanksgiving game again this year? We wonder!

Basket-ball practice has begun. All four classes have already started working hard to put out the championship team of 1925-26. We have seen the Seniors, Juniors, and Sophomores play. We know what they can do, but what we are all wondering about is the Freshmen.

The first inter-class games will be played Thanksgiving when the Freshmen play the Sophomores and the Juniors play the Seniors.

Do your part to make your class the victorious team. Come out for basket-ball, work hard; do your part. The time for regular practice will be announced later.

"Try-outs" for the college monogram will start right away. With the exception of the individual cup the S. T. C. monogram is the greatest athletic honor won. Some girls can play basket-ball but can't play tennis but the monogram is in reach of every student who has the grit and determination to stick and win. The monogram stands for all round development. You have a chance for this so work from the beginning of the season rather than starting later and losing by just a few points.

Watch the A. A. bulletin board for announcements of "try-outs."

Varsity

S. T. C. is planning for a larger basket-ball schedule this year than we have ever had. Many schools have been challenged and it thinks work as expected S. T. C.'s varsity will be kept on the "go" this year.

Athletic Assn. Officers Prize

The Athletic Association offers a prize for the best original school song that is passed in this year. We need things that belong to S. T. C. alone, and worst of all, we need original music and songs. There are many who can help S. T. C. by contributing a song for this prize so why not try to write one. The prize will be something of value and as pretty as the silver bar pin which was awarded to Mary Baker last year. The contest will close Thanksgiving to get to work and write a song.

Wanted—A Cheer Leader, Snappy Songs and Peppy Yells.

Have you thought of a cheer leader for the school this year? One must be elected at the first possible date so be thinking who you think would be the best we could have. Also be thinking of snappy songs and yells. We need them.

DRAMATIC CLUB ELECTIONS NEW MEMBERS

The Dramatic Club takes pleasure in announcing the following new members:

Miss Amanda Grey

Miss Polly Riddle

It will be remembered that these girls substituted for two characters in "The Yellow Jacket" last February. They did admirable work and took the parts on two days notice.

MR. McCORKLE IS SOPHOMORE MAN

The Freshman of '25 have returned, three hundred strong, with even more pep and enthusiasm than they showed last year. With Mr. McCorkle as class man they are determined to make this Sophomore class the best in the history of S. T. C.

At a recent meeting Elizabeth Armfield was elected Monogram representative. "Jackie" Woodson and Isabel Payne, who showed their ability last year were re-elected cheer leaders.

The Sophomores are planning a surprise for the student body on the ninth—watch for the posters!

activities, show your willingness to help and conform to the rules and you will have a chance to both lead and serve.

The Student Government, you have already been told, is made up of every member of the student body. We are told this every year and yet some students seem to think that the committee comprises the whole Student Government. This is not true, they are merely our representatives, it is up to each one of us to prove our school spirit by keeping the pledge we sign. Don't forget that you are a unit in the government of your school.

Every girl in school is asked to join the Y. W. C. A. and we try to have a one hundred per cent membership each year. While signing your membership card makes you a member of the association, your duty as a member has only just begun. Back the Y. W. C. A. in all of its activities, pledge as much as you can. Don't forget that prayers are held every night after supper, and morning watch every Sunday morning. Go and take away with you the inspiration which is so often gained at such meetings.

With so many organizations at our disposal there is no reason why every single girl shouldn't feel that she has her own special place in school. Get into the thing which you are most suited to, and make yourself a part of it. Start now, don't wait until the end of the year, and then regret that you waited.

DULANEY ELECTED SECRETARY ATHLETIC ASSN.

Due to the fact that Virginia Lewis did not return to school this year the office of Athletic Association Secretary was left vacant. As a result of the election held Friday, Evelyn Dulaney was elected to fill the vacancy. While we are sorry that Virginia is not back, and we are going to miss her. We are glad to have "Dulittle" and we know she will be a secretary who will cooperate with the Council and the Association. We are plenty glad that so capable a person is to fill in the vacancy. Good luck to you, in your work, "Dulittle." ?

STOP THE STOPPER FIEND

Have we a stopper fiend at S. T. C.? What can be the appealing characteristic of plain, rubber, bathtub stopper? They are not beautiful; it can't be beauty; they are not pawnable, it can't be value; they are not wonderful, it can't be awe—and yet they disappear, I know of no more helpless situation than a human being ready for a plunge into a stopperless tub. A search today revealed one stopper for six tubs. Will we have to print in next year's handbook, "Bring a bathtub stopper with you?" Please, please kind fiend, have mercy upon us and don't stoop to stoop and steal a stopper!

Lady waiting to use phone—Say you've been in that booth twenty minutes and haven't said a word!

WHAT'S EDUCATION?

The basis, the bulwark, the epitome of modern civilization is education. Yet, when you get down to actual cases and look back at the school stuff from a perspective of twenty years or so, what does it amount to but this:

Latin—All Gaul is divided into three parts: amo, amas, amat.

Greek—On that day Xenophon marched twenty-eight parasangs; a sophos anthropos.

Algebra—What does X equal?

Geometry—The square of the hypotenuse of a right triangle is equal to the sum of the difference of the opposite sides or something like that.

Arithmetic—A jeweler sold a watch for $20, making 25 per cent. profit. What did the watch cost? Answer on page 234.

History—"Give me Liberty or Give Me Death!" Patrick Henry. Sir Walter Raleigh brought the first tobacco into England.

English—Scott was born in 1632 or was it 1734?

German—Ich weiss nicht was sol es bedeuten; Oh, Tannenbaum, Oh Tannenbaum, wie treu sind deine blätter.

French—Je t'adore. (Shut the door) Geography—Tropic of Cancer, Capricorn, et al. The capital of Florida is Tallahassee.

Physiology—Tobacco weakens the heart. Capillary veins, aorta, floating ribs.

Music—Nothing.
Drawing—Ditto.
Manual Training—Ditto.

FRESHMEN! TAKE NOTICE!

Do you know that within a few days you will be called together to elect your president and the remainder of your class officers? Have you been thinking of this and do you know who is the best girl for each office?

Freshmen, you have the largest class in school and your aim should be to make it the best freshman class in the history of S. T. C. You can do it if you will. Listen carefully and take heed to what follows:

First of all, when the president of your sister class calls you together, every "man" must be there. Be sure that you choose and elect the best girl for each office. Do not feel that because you have not been elected to one of the offices that there is no work for you to do. The staff of officers is the executive committee of your class, but without the whole-hearted cooperation of every girl in the class, they can do nothing.

Secondly, when any organization in school calls for aid, go to its assistance. Show your class spirit, stand by your colors, and show S. T. C. and the world what YOU can do! There are enough types of work at S. T. C. for each girl to find something interesting and something "along her line." So, when you are given an opportunity to join the Dramatic Club, the Glee Club, the literary societies, and all the other organizations in school, avail yourselves of the aforementioned opportunities. If you are not interested in work of this kind, perhaps you would like athletics. Basket-ball practice has already started! and here you have a chance to make the varsity or your class team—add maybe both if you will fight hard enough. Those that do not play can show their spirit by coming out and supporting their team.

Thirdly, whenever you are called upon to do any kind of work, be ready and willing to do your share. If every girl will just catch this spirit and then pass it on until every girl in the freshman class has caught the same spirit, you will have the best freshman class that has ever come to S. T. C.

Come on, Freshmen, and show S. T. C. what you are made of!

TO THE GIRL IN CHARGE:

By a Freshman

"Five long nights of toils and cares,
"Studying and learning S. T. C. affairs;
Not to visit nor talk to men,
And be in bed by half past ten;
Where to go to curl our hair,
To stop walking when the lights aren't there;

When to go shopping—how to sign up,
Which bell is for Chapel—by which do we sup;
Learning Alma Mater; what Honor is,
Not to go riding in any kind of a "Liz"

Oh it's a hard, hard life for a Freshman lass Attending each night the new Training Class.

TO THE FRESHMEN:

By a Girl in Charge

I was your teacher for five long nights
And this I must confess;
Though many were late and some got lost,
You certainly did your best.

So, dear Freshman Class, you have learned our rules
And know how to obey;
We welcome you with open arms,
You're a part of our College today.

ALUMNAE NEWS

Dear Alumnae:-

Those of us who are under the roof of our dear Alma Mater are eager to hear what our sisters are doing in other sections of the State and elsewhere. So many of you say, "Oh, I know of nothing interesting to write." But let me hasten to assure you that a letter, telling us of the daily happenings in your home, your school room, or your office will be of great interest to your former school friends. Tell us about your school children, your patients or your clients. Whatever interests you is of interest to us.

We have already had visits from a number of you and we hope that the number will be greatly increased before the year is over.

And again, let me say that we are eagerly awaiting letters from all of you.

Sincerely,
THE ROTUNDA STAFF

CRITERION MALE QUARTET DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE

The Criterion Male Quartette of N. Y. City, on their southern tour, opened a series of entertainments known at S. T. C. as the Lyceum Course. It was decidedly one of the best performances held here for a long time, and marked a brilliant beginning for the school year.

Every seat in the Auditorium was occupied, as well as extra chairs that were brought in. Judging from the hearty applause and the repeated encores, no one was disappointed.

Each member of the company was exceptionally talented, and with the assistance of a very able and charming pianist, the program was a delightful success from start to finish.

The Quartette came to Farmville from High Point, North Carolina, and went from here to Fredericksburg, Virginia.

The program was as follows:-

FRESHES HOLD FIRST MEET

Virginia Vincent, President of the Junior Class, called the first Freshmen meeting to order Tuesday, October 6, at seven o'clock. The meeting was opened by Virginia telling the Freshmen how glad their sister class was to have them here.

The first business taken up was the election of representatives to the Student Standards Committee. Maude Baptist and Mattie Smith were elected as Freshmen representatives.

Virginia then reminded the Freshmen that some time in the near future they would be called on to elect their officers and that now was the time to think about WHO they would want. We hope the Freshmen are going to go about this in the same capable way they have everything else.

When Virginia had finished all the business to be brought before the class, the meeting was turned over to Jackie Woodson, a representative of (Continued on last page)

PRAYERS

After the whirling rush of daily duties, and before study hour begins, there comes a pause in S. T. C. known as Prayers. Every evening after supper, we hold a short prayer service in the Auditorium. We want all girls both old and new, to come and join in the service and to "Wait and worship, while the night gets her evening lamps alight, Through all the sky."

It is the time when, spent with the day's toil and tribulation, we may bow our heads in prayer, and feel the divine spirit of rest and peace steal over us; it is the time of twilight, when our spirits may meet and commune with God, our Father.

Let us appreciate our opportunity and attend these prayer services regularly.

Y. W. C. A. MEMBERSHIP WEEK

To you, Freshmen, the Y. W. C. A. of our College extends a most cordial and hearty welcome to become one of us. The aim of the "Y" is to develop Christian character in its members, to promote a friendly spirit among students, and to train and send forth girls to take their places as leaders in the world.

Have you been attending our prayer services in the evenings after supper? Then you have heard and enjoyed the inspirational talks that have been given and have felt something of the spirit and purpose of the Y. W. C. A. You have seen a model Cabinet meeting and have heard the plans of various committees for the coming year.

Let's make this the biggest and best year ever at S. T. C. The Y. W. C. A. needs you and your support—both personal and financial. You will be given an opportunity this week to join our Association, which will put you in touch with the highest deals in a student's life.

Again, we extend a welcome to you!

ALUMNAE SUBSCRIBE

The staff and every girl at S. T. C. is working to make this the best Rotunda year ever; but the cooperation of all the alumnae, especially the girls of last year's class is needed. One dollar and a half ($1.50) and your address sent to the circulation manager will bring you each week The Rotunda, full of news of your Alma Mater. Keep the spirit of S. T. C. and "co-operate." Send your money and address at once. You can't afford to miss a single issue.

Greetings From Dr. J. L. Jarman

Farmville, Va.

October 9, 1925

To the Girls of the Class of 1925:

"Let me say right in the beginning that we miss you. While we have a goodly number of you back with us as Juniors (and are delighted that they made "the wise choice") there is a large percentage that is scattered to the four winds of heaven—and these are the ones we miss.

To those who took the Degree we extend a hearty invitation to come back from time to time to see how we are progressing, what improvements we are making, and to hearten us in our work by their interest in what we are doing.

To those who took the Diploma we say that we are still looking forward to the pleasure of having you back with us some day.

To all of you we send affectionate greetings and good wishes for your success and happiness wherever you may be.

Sincerely your friend,
J. L. JARMAN

HOME DEPARTMENT NEWS

Mrs. Eva Hetrick Warren, who was formerly employed in the business office, is now assisting Miss Mary White Cox, head of the Home Department. Mrs. Warren's place in the business office is now occupied by Mrs. Warren D. Bowman, nee, Miss Olive Smith.

The college regrets to learn that Mrs. Lizzie B. Williams will not be back this year. She is now in St. Petersburg, Florida, teaching in a school for young women. Mrs. Williams' position has been filled at the college by Mrs. Warren.

Mrs. Province, of Cumberland, Va., is a new assistant in the pantry. Miss Coline Bagley, of Kenbridge, Va., is substituting in the dining room for Mrs. Alice Peery, who will not return to S. T. C. for several weeks.

Practically every member of the Home Department enjoyed a very pleasant vacation in various cities and resorts. Miss Frances B. Shelton spent three weeks visiting in Washington, Philadelphia, New York and Willoughby Beach.

Mrs. Emma Bugg Blanton was at Massanetta Springs, Va., while the Presbyterian Conference was being held there.

Mrs. Hallie K. Laing, accompanied by her daughter, Martha Anne, visited Huntington, Lewisburg, and Beckley, West Virginia. She also spent a large part of her vacation in Washington, D. C.

THANKS, FRESHMEN

Miss McDonald and the assistant librarians wish to compliment the entire Freshman class for their splendid attitude in the Library. From seven o'clock until eight-thirty the Library is what a library should be.

NEW MEMBERS DRAMATIC CLUB

The Dramatic Club try-outs were held last week and a committee selected the new members to be taken in. A word of explanation about the try-outs is necessary. The committee had many points to consider in selecting the members. Certain types are needed in the club. Some of the girls trying out were very good but their type was not needed at present and the club only has a membership of about thirty. Girls who would play men's parts were more in demand than any other type and out of the number trying only a few were able to take them. A few girls were chosen on their ability to play character parts and others to play girls parts. Other points which were considered were stage presence, voice, posture and naturalness in acting.

The new members were voted upon by the committee and the entire Dramatic Club.

We take great pleasure in announcing the following new members: Eleanor Bennett of Norfolk. Emma Mebin Hunt of Roanoke. Virginia Potts of Lynchburg. Anne Ferree of Danville. Carrol Cromwell of Norfolk. Gertrude Jarman of Charlottesville. Virginia Boxley of Orange. Mildred Lohr of Madison.

FIRST MEETING OF THE DRAMATIC CLUB

The Dramatic Club met Friday night. Several officers were elected in place of the girls who did not come back. Evelyn Dulaney resigned as business manager on account of holding other offices. Eleanor Bennett was elected business manager and Polly Riddle, assistant business manager. Frances Sal. was elected secretary.

Miss Wheeler spoke to the club about new plays. The play will be presented around the first of January and the cast will chosen as soon as possible.

FRESHMAN TRAINING AT S. T. C.

During the second week of school, the Freshmen and other new girls at S. T. C. attended a series of lessons on the general regulations of S. T. C., including the learning of our Alma Mater song. These classes were conducted by several members of the upper classes. The series of lessons culminated in an examination held on September 26.

Those conducting the lessons say that the examination papers show excellent work.

The president of the Student Association hopes, by these training classes, to make our school regulations understood and known by all new girls. She hopes by them to help the girls and to help the school, and she is sure that if these regulations are practiced in the same spirit in which they were learned, the training classes were not conducted in vain.

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsolicited correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism, and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of presenting and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

PECULIAR COMPLAINING ATTRACTS ATTENTION

A remark made by a Freshman was accidentally overheard by a member of the faculty, as was also the reply made by her companion. Open your ears upper classmen and list to the remark!
It was made in a complaining tone but on such a peculiar subject.
The Freshman were complaining that they had, not too much-- but too little work to do. Naturally the faculty member was terrified to think that the faculty was allowing people to waste time.
Speaking for the Sophs, Juniors, Seniors, and quite a number of Freshmen, I should like to ask just one question, what course are you two Freshmen taking, and who are your teachers? I'm sure that some of us would like to trade just half way with you, because we have almost more than we have time for. However, I think there is an explanation, and for goodness sake, don't you Freshmen write home and tell your parents that you haven't anything to do. You see the schedule committee has done an untold amount of work; and in trying to arrange things to your advantage they have often changed sections, giving you one or two difficult teachers, then very likely you had nothing to prepare for one recitation. Going to school on Saturday is intended to relieve some of the congested schedules and give more time for preparations. Surely if you put two hours on every recitation and then in not too long a time, your time will be filled and you will have to look for time to do things in, rather than looking for things to fill up your time.

AN IDEAL SCHOOL PAPER.

Just at present, our minds, and the minds of students all over the country, are on the subject of "what is an ideal school paper?"
Have you ever seen one? If you have, please present it to The Rotunda Staff immediately.

There are so many sides from which to look at the question.
Do we want a newspaper alone, or do we want it combined with literary material?

The Staff alone cannot make the school paper an ideal one, the paper belongs to the students and the students are the ones who make the paper.

Do you think our editorials are what they should be? Do they discuss current topics of interest and do they express an unbiased opinion? How can the Staff alone judge them?

An ideal school paper is democratic. There is a column for everything and each column has a special place--Y. W., Student Govern-men, Society, literary societies, athletics, etc. Think how nice it would be to be able to pick up your Rotunda and know exactly where to look for what you want.

Articles on athletics play no small part in the make up of an ideal paper. They must be well written, and exact, so that they may be depended on as correct statements.

Has it ever occurred to you that if our school paper is ideal it will be something which we will always want to keep. It will keep a record for us of the happiest days of our lives. Our class elections, athletic meets, dramatic club plays and glee club operettas will all be fully described and recorded. Can we keep so complete a liary?

The humorous side of a paper plays no small part; wonder if we ever stop and think how hard it is to find good jokes that have plenty of humor and yet are not stale? It's no small job and it composes one of the absolutely essential parts of our ideal paper.

The literary material in an ideal paper should differ in type.
One needs formal and informal essays, poems, short stories, book reviews and literary material of all types, and in various styles.

These are merely some of the things which I can think that go into the composition of a paper bordering on the ideal. Can you think of some other characteristics which should be included?
Don't be afraid to say so, and won't you make it one of your aims at S. T. C. to do your bit to make The Rotunda a paper which may be said to be ideal?

OUR "MISS MARY".

I have often wondered how this school would get along without Miss Mary White Cox,—have you? She is our Mother, so to speak, for nine months, and have you ever stopped to think how well she takes care of, manages and improves her large family. Her care of us starts long before we arrive. How would you like the job of rooming 800 girls, trying to put the old girls where they ask to be, and giving the new ones every consideration? You know I think I'd rather have any other job, and yet we fuss about our rooms, our roommates, and the smallest sort of things. I believe if we would all stop and think how much Miss Mary has done, and is doing for us, we would have only thanks and praise for her.

Miss Mary is never too tired to hear our excuses, complaints, desires and troubles. I wonder how many times already this year she has had to hear, "I don't like my room, can't I possibly be changed, my mother said—". I'm afraid most of us would give up in despair, but not Miss Mary, she goes cheerfully on, and instead of getting disgusted, she tries her best to make us happy and satisfied.

Our parents and we, ourselves, can never thank Miss Mary enough for the excellent care she takes of us. We have pleasant surroundings, clean, attractive rooms and lovely social rooms, thanks to Miss Mary's thoughtfulness.

We fuss and we fume and yet under it all we appreciate what is done for us and, I think, every, single one of us, love Miss Mary dearly, let's think more in terms of what is being done for us and see of we can't shrow Miss Mary that we love her, and we appreciate her many, many, kindnesses, and her excellent care.

JOAN SAYS--

Well, well! Guess what. Last week, after reading The Rotunda, a Freshman wanted to know who was Joan that had so much to say. So I don't feel so big after all. But even if I am not big I see a lot, and one thing I have noticed this week is that quite a few new girls looked as if they would just as soon be at home as not.
How about it? Isn't that true?

That's what I thought so I began thinking what I could do to cheer you up and I happen to remember this little jingle—maybe it will help. I hope so anyway.

"Be cheerful, chirped the Robin.

"Be busy," hummed the Bee.

"Be loving," said the Dewdrop.

"And no matter what you do,

If you are busy, lovin', cheerful,

You will be HAPPY too."

3. T. C.'S LATEST BEAUTY SPOT

Around S. T. C., they are always springing up, where our feet have just been—or rather, our feet have not been—and these things of sudden, exquisite growth are attractive garden plots. Have you noticed the very latest one? Your glance scarcely could miss seeing it—the lot by the Tea Room outside entrance that has been beautified recently, with tall cannas and velvety grass. Only our cooperation is needed to complete the beauty of the patch.

When autumn leaves blow high

To classrooms down the hall."

ATHLETICS

Tennis Tournament

Who will be the tennis champion? That's what we all wonder. However, the mystery will soon be solved for the rest of the games will be "played off" this week. Last week the first three rounds were "played off" and these matches made everyone realize that the semi-final and the championship games will both be hard-fought battles.

Tuesday, the fourth round will be completed; Thursday the semi-final games will be played and Saturday at 4 o'clock the championship match will be played. And after the game—the loving cup. Who will be the "proud possessor?" We wonder!

Hockey

Have you wondered what happened to keep us from having hockey practice last week, or are you one of the "dead-weights" that hasn't enough school spirit to know hockey will be played this year?

The hockey sticks have been ordered, but have not arrived. There has been some delay, because the style of stick ordered was not in stock. However, they will arrive at an early date and when the do, practice will begin immediately. Listen for an announcement and do your part to make hockey successful this year.

Varsity

Miss Blanche Edith Oliver Graham is practicing the varsity in squads at present. The Freshmen compose one squad, while the upper-classes compose the other, each squad practices two days a week. Later another schedule will be arranged for varsity practice, but the change will be announced.

CHANGES IN CHAPEL PERIOD

This year the faculty and students have decided to make some changes in order to make the chapel period more interesting. The Committee is willing to cooperate with the classes and do all it can to help make a success of this plan. Miss Florence Stubbs, head of the Committee has already discussed this question with some of the classes to get their view on the subject. Everyone wants to see this plan carried out, and to do it, each student back up the committee and cooperate in every way.

DON'T SAY IT WITH MUSIC

There was a time not long ago, before arriving here—
That to my mind, of instruments
A person could hold dear,
Victrolas held the upper hand
I loved their music so,
That I never tired of hearing one
Wherever I might go;
But the mystic charm has vanished
I crave them nevermore.
They are to me a bother, a worry
and a bore,
Perhaps you'll wonder why I changed,
It wouldn't be hard to guess,
Their music dins my ears by day,
At night it brooks my rest.
They start them here 'fore breakfast
And wind them all the day,
Until you wish sometimes you could
Fly many miles away—
The same old records all the time
Until I sometimes doubt They'll be O. K. the next day,
Why don't the things wear out?
Please owners dear be kind to me,
For what will be my fate,
I do not know—until you swear
You will Cooperate. —F. R. B.

It isn't what a girl knows that bothers us, but how she learned it. Ex

ALUMNAE NEWS

A recent book is entitled "Laws of Health and How to Teach Them." It was written by Miss Pauline Williamson, an alumna of State Teachers College, and Dr. Winslow, Head of the Department of Health at Yale University. It has already been adopted by Columbia University of Chicago. The book has been highly recommended by the National Education Association.

Miss Grace Holmes received the degree of Ph. D. from George Washington University, Washington, D. C., in June of the present year.

Mrs. May Hudson Wright received her degree of B. A. from the University of Denver.

Misses Elizabeth Thompson of Warrenton, Nancy Lyne of Orange and Lillian Nunn of Farmville are teaching in Porto Rico this year. Miss Nunn completed her work for the B. S. degree at the University of Virginia during the summer.

Misses Daphne Gilliam and Pauline White are attending classes at college this session. This session, they taught in Porto Rico last year, as did Lucy Irving, who is spending the winter at home in Farmville.

Miss Mildred Dickerson is doing graduate work at the University of Virginia, and Miss Mary Friend is taking a secretarial course in Richmond this winter. Both were in Porto Rico last winter.

Even glimpses of the wonders of the West did not cause alumnae to forget their alma mater. Dr. Jarman was pleased to receive the following letter: "The Grand Canyon Alumnae Chapter of today sends best wishes to you and the Student Building." It was signed by the following alumnae: G. Carey Jeter '15, Edith F. Abbott '15, S. C. Douglas '00, Min Mason '23, Elizabeth Moring '23, Zula Cutchins '09, Sallie Kle '22, Ethel Wiley '17, Ruth Coleman '18, Myrtle Harvey '23, Alice Lee Rumbough '23, Louise Dent '20, Louise Rose '17, Oley Helm '22, Alma Carver '14, Lucille Carver '18, and Susie Lee Phaup '88.

Miss Selma Hindle, Gladys Stodd, Helen Craddock, Pauline White, Fanny Belle Shorter, May Marshall Edwards, Louise Brewer, Winnie Hines, Katherine Cralle, Grace Chambers, Lucille Wood, Katharine Watkins, Daphne Gilliam, Jane Crawley, are welcomed back as students at S. T. C.

SOCIAL

Sara Fox, the Staff's Business Manager, has been elected to membership.

Alpha Chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma announced the election of Miss Alexandra Gray to membership.

The Sigma Sigma Sigma society announces the installation of two new chapters: Alpha Alpha at S. T. C., Kent, Ohio, and Alpha Beta at Concord College, Concord, W. Va.

Latest news announces that Miss Katherine Watkins left Friday morning for St. Cloud, Florida, where she has accepted a satisfactory position as kindergarten teacher.

Training School

Miss Hilda Von Seibitz, Supervisor of the seventh grade, has charge of the lunch room, which is being well patronized.

Dr. Susan W. Felt, resident physician, was at S. T. C. during the summer school. For part of the remaining few weeks she visits her home in Lincoln, Nebraska. She also visits the great Mt. Rushmore, Glacier House, Rochester, Minn., for a number of days.

Mrs. Lillian Smith is very pleasant summer touring through Virginia and West Virginia.

Mr. E. G. Fry, of Roanoke, is the contractor employed for the enlargement of the main building. He is working on a plan for making dormitory space for one hundred girls, one of the old extension on the second floor of the east wing.

THE WAY TO A GIRL'S HEART

"The thing that brightens any mood is good, old-fashioned, homelike food." Just a few encouraging words for the fact we have had this year. It has been both better and hotter and we have appreciated it. There are also things that are of home and loved by us all. Gentleness, then, serves, speak for this wonderful chance. Only and enter the portals of our dining room and often the smiles turn to grins at sight of favorite dishes. Such remarks as "Oh, I loved this once, why haven't we had them before?" "What pie is great?" and "Why, what had dessert for this week?" are common remarks these days. We have you to thank, Mrs. Baker. You are saved on our side.

THE GOOD SHELL

Ende Step Editor by Sarah P. Whit. They look much alike with the interesting exception of the difference in color. The one is black, the other is white. The one is the back of the year. It is interesting because of its sturdiness, its strength and its protective power. It is a book that a woman with it is enabled to quote from Dumas' "The Masterly Book, extraordinarily vivid."

NOTICE

An error occurred last week in the list of an article on postmanship. The title should have been "Good Sportsmanship Is Used."

There are only two kinds of cars in a machine; both drivers.

RAT INITIATION

Absolute silence in the lengthy room the Rat Pass on the floor awaiting orders—The honorable Sophomore president enthroned in the center of the big room surrounded by her willing lieutenants—The balcony filled with upper classmen. What did it all mean? It meant that hundreds of Rat subjects were to be welcomed into the realms of Ratdom. It meant that they were to become willing subjects of the honorable Sophomores, and more than all else it meant that class spirit would be kindled at S. T. C. Roll call brought Rats, big and small; short and tall, before their majesty, King Uptide, and the solemn oath was given individually while the Rats caps were donned. Orders were obeyed to the minute and the Rat class gave to the onlookers a very good performance.

Don't weaken Rats—keep the rules—obey orders and wear those caps. Remember—when you weaken, the Sophs harden.

May class spirit ever live at S. T. C.

Freshmen Hold First Meeting

the Sophomore Class.

Jackie struck the Freshmen silent by her direction as to wearing caps. She informed them that every Freshman would have a cap and would be compelled to wear it. Instructions as to the "rat parade" and the first wearing of caps, Saturday afternoon were given, and dire threats were made as to what shall become of the first Freshman (also the last) to disregard the regulations.

The class adjourned after their directions and it is probable that in a very few weeks another meeting will be called for the purpose of electing officers.

THE ROTUNDA, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1925

Number 3

SPECIAL ISSUES OF ROTUNDA TO APPEAR

Music Number to Appear First

The Rotunda Staff is very much interested in the fact that different departments of the school are taking such an interest in The Rotunda that they wish to edit special issues.

Mrs. King, as head of the Music Department has already spoken for the first issue. An entire staff will be elected from her department and will have complete charge of the paper. The department will finance all extra charges for cuts and extra copies of the paper. This issue promises to be an interesting one.

Miss Coulling, has also spoken of an art issue. The details of this have not been worked out but we feel sure this issue will be a successful one.

Classes have published class issues in the Spring but departments of the college have never taken this much interest before. The Staff is interested in these issues and is willing to help any way it can.

SERVICE NOT CREDIT IS WHAT WE PRAISE

Two girls were talking a few days ago and after hearing that typists were needed on The Rotunda Staff one remarked, "I cannot see why anyone wants to type articles for The Rotunda, what credit is gained from typing articles week after week?" And then after a pause came the remark, "Do they get paid for it?"

This girl had in mind only the credit gained and not the fact that she was serving others. She overlooked the fact that no student officers in the school receive salaries for their services but that they do it in a spirit of willingness and through love for the school.

The Rotunda has to be typed before it goes to press and someone has to type it. On the staff at present we have Frances Jones, Elsie Gibson, and Helen Cohen who type the paper. Aren't there others who are willing to give their services?

A MESSAGE TO THE FRESHMEN

The other day a Freshman was heard to remark that she really wanted to contribute to the school paper but just how to go about it she did not know. This proved that the Freshman class is anxious and willing to help do her bit for The Rotunda. All contributions must be dropped in the box at the door of The Rotunda office and names must be signed to all articles. Now Freshmen—we are banking on you. That big class of yours can't fool us. We know there is hidden talent in your ranks, so step out Freshmen.

She: The flowers you sent were lovely. I think there was still some dew on them!"

He: awkwardly: "Aw—er—yes, but I'm going to pay it off tomorrow."

Buck Prince: "I call my girl Lislterline."

Henry McElveen: "Why?"

Buck: "Because she takes my breath away."

MR. WYNNE GOES TO COLUMBIA

Mr. J. P. Wynne, director of the training school, and head of the Department of Education here, left on Tuesday, October 13, for New York. Mr. Wynne is receiving a leave of absence for several months in order that he may continue his studies at Columbia University. Mr. Wynne has been working on his Ph. D. and he hopes that with a few months work he may obtain this degree. We shall miss Mr. Wynne, but we wish him all kinds of good luck and while we say goodbye to Mr. Wynne, we hope we may welcome Dr. Wynne back.

SOPHOMORE MINSTREL

The Sophomores gave a very good minstrel show on Friday night. Evelyn Delaney directed the show and Mary Lynn Petty was accompanist. The end men were Chubby Grey, Isabelle Payne, "Sis" Jordan, Jackie Woodson, Mittie Quarles and Virginia Perkins. Songs and jokes held sway until the last act which was entitled, "A Ragtime Court Scene," and this act was the best act of the four given as it was a good black face comedy.

The Sophomores are to be congratulated on being the first class to make the largest amount towards the Student Building Fund.

SLICKERS

"They put a ban on knickers.

But they haven't forbid us slickers."

The slicker craze is on. These past rainy days have brought forth the slicker army. They are some army, but the colors vary greatly—red, green, blue, purple and yellow. Well do I remember the first appearance of the slicker at S. T. C. Surely some Hampden-Sidney lad had left it here overnight by mistake. Or was the wearer posing as a Uneda Biscuit advertisement? But no. The owner did not return for his slicker. Instead, the number gradually increased until several bearded yellow coats were owned by invited girls, to be borrowed by envious hundreds. Then one dismal day a human rainbow walked proudly through our hall, composed of slickers in various bright shades. Since that eventful day the light yellow shade has been a wee less popular. But they have their advantages. They prove a more picturesque background for the artistic talent displayed on their backs. There must be hundreds of these coats in S. T. C. They are not all beautiful, they do not always fit, perhaps they even leak; but they are slickers and what is life without one? "So here's to the slickers—may they ever be

The joy of the rainy days at S. T. C."

The Belgian franc has risen above par of the French franc. This is interpreted as due to New York pressure, which shows that countries who agree to debt terms of U. S. will fare better in international exchange market.

COUNTY AND CITY CLUBS ORGANIZE

For the first time since 1922, a Northern Neck Club has been formed. The girls, thirteen in number, met on Saturday, October 10, organized and elected the following officers:

President Grace Jones
Sec. & Treas. Evelyn McKenney

PITTSBURGH CLUB ORGANIZED

The first meeting of the Danville-Pittsylvania club was held Tuesday, October 6, 1925, for the purpose of electing officers. Alma Williams was elected president, Gladys Poe was elected secretary and treasurer.

The second meeting was held Wednesday, October 14, at which time Thelma Williams was made vice-president. Dues were decided upon and since a name has not yet been chosen the girls were told to be thinking about one for the club.

BLUE RIDGE CLUB ELECTIONS

At a called meeting of the Blue Ridge Club the following were elected as officers for 1925-26:

President Alice Carter
Vice-President Gladys Moses
Secretary-Treas. Mamie Daniels
Reporter Virginia Boyd

The club is glad to welcome so many new members and hopes that all others who are interested in Blue Ridge will join.

THE DAHLIA SHOW

The townspeople of Farmville do not realize how much pleasure the S. T. C. girls derived from the Dahlia Show which they have every year.

The flowers were some of the loveliest of their kind, and every girl who had a chance to see them came away rested and inspired.

We enjoyed looking at the lovely flowers but this was only half, for the food was tempting beyond resistance. All the girls who enjoyed the suppers are wishing the Dahlia Show would continue all the time.

Mrs. Todd: "Graham, run across the street and see how old Mrs. Brown is this morning."

G. Todd returning in a few minutes: "Mrs. Brown says it's none of your business how old she is."

INVITATION TO ATTEND NATIONAL CONFERENCE

KEEP OUR SCHOOL BEAUTIFUL

"Don't walk on this grass!" How many of you think the little sign with the above, or some other "don't," is attractive, and adds to our campus? Someone evidently likes the sign, or else, someone has forgot. We know that none of our girls mean to be thoughtless enough to deliberately walk across new grass, or any grass plots, someone forgot, and another and another, and another, until there was a path which detracted from our campus.

Not only on the campus do we find traces of the thoughtless girl, but in the school building as well. Trash is thrown along the halls which seems so unnecessary, when there are numerous waste baskets to be found. Pen and marks on desks and walls never did look attractive, and very probably, they never will. They only cause extra work for one of our maids and extra worry for someone.

How many of you have beautiful places, buildings, etc.? All of you do of course! Then, let's make our school, our Alma Mater, a place to be proud of and beautiful to look upon! "A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

GETTING OUT A PAPER IS NO JOKE

If we print jokes, folks say we are silly.

If we publish original material, they say we lack variety.

If we publish things from other papers, they say we are too lazy to write.

If we stay on the job, we ought to be out after news.

If we are out after news we are not attending to business in our own department.

If we don't print contributions we don't show proper appreciation.

If we print them, the paper is full of junk.

Like a not some fellow will say we swiped this from an exchange. Well, we did.

IN HONOR OF MISS VINCENT

On Saturday evening at eight o'clock the Alpha Chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma, gave in honor of Eugenia Vincent, a graduate of S. T. C., a miscellaneous shower. The room was tastefully decorated in purple and white, the sorority colors. The color scheme was further carried out by the use of a tiny purple wheelbarrow on which Miss India Dunnington brought the gifts to Miss Vincent. After the shower, a sandwich spread was given in honor of the freshmen. The guests were Mrs. Wm. Dunnington, Mrs. N. Scott, Mrs. L. L. Wilkins, Miss Mabel, Miss Mary Rives, Miss Marion, Miss Davis and Miss Pauline Ganser, the faculty advisor of the sorority.

To Be Held at Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh on November 27 and 28, 1925.

The Invitation list, according to Dr. Thomas B. Baker, President of Carnegie Institute of Technology, and author of the plan of the conference, includes many of the American universities and colleges and the community playhouses. As far as it is possible, informal student organizations which give serious plays are being invited to send delegates. In addition, the list includes theatrical critics, and representatives of those theatrical groups that include producers, playwrights, actors, and artists.

"The program," according to President Baker, "will be so arranged as to bring out not only the nature of the work done at the colleges, but also to show the significance of the community theaters. It is felt that the relation between the college theatricals and the community theaters is very close. The representatives of the colleges will be given an opportunity to tell what his institution is doing for the cultivation of the drama. Such questions as the purpose of the work, the financial support, college credits, etc., will be considered during the sessions."

As a sidelight to the conference details, it is planned also, by special permission of the author, to have a production of one of Galsworthy's plays presented by the students of the Department of Drama of Carnegie. B. Iden Payne, who gave up his work as a producer to become a full-time professor of drama at the Pittsburgh institution, will direct the production of the play.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN WIT AND HUMOR

Wit is intellect while humor is more or less the appreciation of what is witty. A witty person is one who can see quickly the connection of two things which are not usually thought of together, and thus surprises his listeners. The person with a sense of humor stands by and laughs because he recognizes the incongruity of the situation. Humor is of a kinder nature than wit, but it is more closely connected with pathos though they are thought of as opposites. We see much humor in things that are really sad. Wit is more closely connected with sarcasm than anything else. Witty people are often sarcastic as the surprising effect of unthought of expressions is what real wit is. Some are so thoughtless that they are often witty at the cost of someone's feelings.

A show may be advertised as one with much humor in it but it is really the comical, ridiculous acting that appeals to your sense of humor, which is your appreciation of such things.

Humor acts upon what wit suggests.

Shorty Harrell: "Yours may be do vine, but mine's de berries."

TURN OUT THE LIGHTS.

Last year some little misunderstanding occurred on a date night when the lights in the parlors went out. Whether they were trying to save some on our electric light bill or not, has not yet come to light, but we hope the purpose was good.The light bill of the school comes to a large amount each month and each bulb in the school has a part in running the bill higher.
A number of us have a habit of leaving lights on in our rooms when we're to be out several hours. Every little bit of electricity saved, helps toward making the bill smaller.It is said that John D. Rockefeller turns the lights out in his home as he walks from room to room. There are no "John Ds" here, we know, but let's all try to be like him in one way and turn off lights when we do not need them.

When you go about
Turn your lights out,
Don't leave them burning there,
We have no light money to spare.
Now when you have a date
Of course, a light you rate!
But when you have not need of light
Why, put it out of sight.
Let's pull that bill so far down,
That when the light man makes his round
He'll be so surprised to see
The light bill "ain't what it used to be."

DO YOU CHARGE?

What a funny question, but do you? If you do, please stop and think about some of these things. The merchants in Farmville are kind enough to give us the privilege of having credit accounts with them, we are going to be honest enough not to walk over their kindness. Many people, when they see something they want have the habit of walking in and getting it, whether they have the money or not. They simply say, "Please charge this to me." The other day I happened to hear a girl say that she had seen a pair of shoes, liked them and had gotten them. Her companion made the remark that she wanted a pair but she simply couldn't afford to get a pair at the time. The first girl laughed and said, "Oh! I couldn't either but I charge them. I don't know where I'll ever be able to pay for them but I simply had to have them."
Is this fair? All of us, at some time or other, want to make use of this privilege as a convenience, but if some girls are going to over-step bounds all of us are going to be deprived of this privilege. You know the old saying, "pay day has to come." It is certainly true, so let's pay as we go, as far as possible, and not charge until we know how and when we are going to pay for what we get.

THE LITERARY HACK

He was a writer, and he learned
The art "to: fit the phrase,"
Of using well-known sentences,
And penning hackneyed phrases.
"Compliments by his absence" was
A rather standby, too.
A maiden had "a willow form,"
And "hair of gold-a lace."
"Let blowed on 'with hated breath,"
"So near and yet so far,"
"An eagle glance," "magnetic gaze,"
"The meaning of the hour,"
"A sight to make the angels weep,"
"The human form divine,"
"Dilatating nostrils," "flowing locks,"
"And all the case nine,"
"The finer man," "last but not least,"
"A few well-chosen words,"
"The mellow moon" and "twinkling stars."

And "little twittering birds,"
"Arch smile" and "lips of ruby dye,"
"A dainty gloved hand,"
And "succulent bivalve," of course
Was always in demand.
To "philosophic height" he'd rise
"Of reason-chew the salt,"
And never once did he forget
To write of "licking the food."

GIRLS AND GIRLS

There are many different kinds of girls.
Some with straight hair, some with curls.
Some are awkward, some are bold.
Some who need do as they are told.
Girls who are bashful and painfully shy.
Who, when you tease them will always cry.
Girls who are dumb and girls who are bright.
Some look "the thing," some look a fright.
Some are quite pretty, some are not.
Some are dignified, some are not.
Some girls are happy, some are blue.
But the question is—What kind are you?"

THE BOOK SHELF

One Increasing Purpose by A. S. M.
HutchisonThis novel by the same author as Main Street, is a splendid expression of the spiritual effect of the World War on certain people in England.Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, says,
"The fumbling search of this generation for spiritual meaning in life is admirably portrayed in Hutchison's Simon Paris. His name will be a staple of dinner table conversation on every Main Street in America before the year is over."Glorious Apollo—by E. Barrington
This is the story of the life of Byron a connection of history and fiction.
It is well worth reading.

LITTLE THINGS

It takes a little muscle
And it takes a little grit,
A little true ambition
With a little bit of wit,
It's not the "biggest" things that count
And make the "biggest" show;
It's the little things that people do
That makes the old world go.
A little bit of smiling
And a little sunny chat
A little bit of courage
To a coarser slipping back,
It's not the "biggest" things that
count
And make the "biggest" show
It's the little things that people do
That makes the old world go.
It takes a kindly action
And it takes a word of cheer
To fill a life with sunshine
And to drive away a tear, Great things are not the "biggest"
things
That make the "biggest" show;
It's the little things that we may do
That make this old world go.

WHAT IS A TYPICAL S. T. C. GIRL?

Every girl at S. T. C. in one sense of the term is an S. T. C. girl, but in another sense, she is merely a student enrolled in an educational institute to get what she can and give nothing. There is another type of what an S. T. C. girl really is and should be.

First, she is a truly representative girl taking part in all school activities, her work well above and having a general interest in everything about the school. Second, in every sense of the word, a leader. Her work must not be below average nor is it necessary for her record to be A throughout.

An S. T. C. girl is a girl who seems to have the school at heart and all her actions in connection with the school will show whether she has or not.

NEWS ITEMS

The Senior's long awaited caps and gowns have arrived. However, due to Dr. Jarman's absence, the Senior's installation service will not be held until Thursday night, the 22nd.

Mary Alice Blanton has resigned her chairmanship of the Social Committee of the Y. W. C. A., on account holding too many other offices.

The College Choral Club announces the election of sixty new members. Work on a musical program will begin immediately.

Miss Willie London, Miss Katharine Tupper, Miss Fleeta Cooper and Miss Georgia Norris attended the Cumberland Court House fair, where they judged the industrial arts and handwork exhibits.

Dr. Jarman has been greatly missed by all this past week. During his absence Mr. McCorkle and Dr. Walmsley presided in Chapel.

Saturday afternoon, October 10th in the Recreation Hall of the College, a dansant was given by the Senior Class for the benefit of the Student Building. Dick Lewis and a part of his orchestra furnished the music which added greatly to the pleasure of the afternoon.

Due to the cooperation of the Sophomores, who saw that all Freshmen were present at the dansant, as a part of their initiation, a large crowd was present.

The Sophomores are not forgetting the Freshmen. Their caps are in evidence every day, and they are to be worn from now until Christmas.

Miss Burton Mair of Stuart, Virginia, an alumna of S. T. C., Farmville Virginia, was married to Mr. Robert McCrady of Radford, Virginia, Saturday morning, October 17.

HOME DEPARTMENT & FACULTY NEWS

Several members of the home department and faculty have recently been to Richmond on shopping trips; among whom may be mentioned Misses Mary White Cox, Jennie M. Tabb, Winnie V. Hiner, Mary Clay Hiner, Florence H. Stubbs, Pauline Camper, and Mrs. Bessie Camper Jamison.

Dr. Susan Wilson Field recently attended a medical convention in Richmond.

Mrs. Alice Peery, assistant housekeeper, returned to the college on Wednesday, October 14.

Mrs. Jamison spent the summer at her home in Salem, Virginia. This was the longest vacation she has spent in years. She has been a member of the Home Department for 21 years. We certainly appreciate the extra effort that is being made to give us better food and we know that Mrs. Jamison is back of it and on our side. The occasional extras are a joy to our hearts.

Young Shiek Bandit: "We are going to rob all gents and kiss all the girls."

His Partner: "No, we rob all the gents but we will leave all the ladies alone."

SOCIAL

Last Wednesday afternoon the Dramatic Club was entertained at a tea given by Miss Wheeler, at her room. An enjoyable hour was spent, during which refreshments were served. Some of our members were unable to be with us, but we were especially glad to have the new member present.

After the tea a short business meeting was held for the purpose of discussing our first play for this session which we expect to present some time the first of this year. Characters were chosen and parts assigned. Practice will start the first of this week, and we hope to make this one of the most beautiful we have ever presented.

TEA FOR MISS MARSHALL

Miss Grace Mix and Miss Elizabeth Davis entertained a group of friends at a little tea on Saturday, in honor of Miss Elizabeth Marshall, recently added to the English faculty of the State Teachers College.

The tea was given at the home of Mr. Frank Hubbard, who poured tea. The sitting room and dining room were decorated with marigolds, which added a note of warmth and cheer to the pleasant occasion.

Those present were Misses Hayne Wheeler, Stubbs, Peck, Carter, Lewis McDonald, Her, Lila London, Willie London, Jones, Penny, Cooper, Mary Clay Hiner, Winnie Hiner, and Mrs. Coyner.

FORUM ARTICLE ASKS $50,000.00 FOR PROFS

Frank Bohn Says That College Professors Should Receive From $20,000 to $50,000 a Year, Instead of $3,020.

The October issue of the Forum contains an article by Frank Bohn which is particularly interesting to everyone connected with a higher institution of learning in the United States. The title of the article is "$50,000 for Professors," and in it Mr. Bohn makes a rather general arraignment of the American college as it now is.

In the beginning the author reviews recent gifts to colleges by Rockefeller, Eastman, Duke and others totaling $1,585,500,000. He compares this with the average salary of a college professor, which he places at $3,292. The result, he says, is the decay of the trained leader and the consequent degeneration of cultured democracy, which is "drowned out by a noisy flood of ignorance and vulgar materialism." Mr. Bohn's diagnosis of the trouble is best shown by a quotation: "Our colleges and universities suffer primarily from elephantiasis. One Western State university advertises that it ministers to over 40,000. . . . Under the circumstances, we might expect from the . . . head of the department of dietetics that each student in his department eats regularly five pounds of baked potatoes with his dinner."

The prescription given under a head called "The Endowment of the Mind." Mr. Bohn first suggests a restriction of numbers. He adds the following as the remaining steps for the "regeneration": a faculty of about two hundred, the division of the faculty into less artificial classes, and the paying of larger salaries. On this point Mr. Bohn says:

"The salary of either sort of professor should equal that of the average corporation lawyer and the leading scientists in our industrial laboratories. At present the professors should receive from $20,000 to $50,000 annually. . . . Probably it would be expecting too much to believe that one of our existing schools can save its soul and regenerate its body after the fashion we have described. . . . That group which has the vision, the means, and the will to create the first school of the sort will be among America's most useful benefactors in this terror-stricken generation."

SENIOR INSTALLATION SERVICE IS HELD

The installing of the senior class made an unusually effective service. Thursday night at seven the seniors in their gowns, with their junior girls carrying their caps, walked down the center aisle of the auditorium to the strains of our Alma Mater. On the stage Dr. Jarman palced each senior's cap on her head. After singing the Alma Mater song, Dr. Jarman gave a short talk in which he stressed the two ideals of our college, high scholarships and, of still more importance, the spirit of service. Miss Emma Mebane Hunt ended the service by singing in her usual charming manner "Smiling Thru."

HONORARY MEMBER PRESENTED BY SENIOR CLASS

Miss Hiner Honorary Member Senior Class

The Seniors, in order to celebrate fully their first appearance in chapel in caps and gowns, on Saturday morning, presented their honorary member, Miss Mary Clay Hiner. After their president, had presented Miss Hiner to the student body, the class sang to her the songs, which are her own, written for her by the class.

The Seniors have the honor of being the first to present their "class man." This presentation proved so attractive that the other classes will have to think hard in order to have a better one.

DR. JAMES ELLIOT WALMSLEY SUCCEEDS DR. TURNER AS HEAD HISTORY DEPT.

DR. JAMES ELLIOT WALMSLEY

We are fortunate in getting such a man as Dr. Walmsley as head of the History Department. He has had much experience as one may see from the short account of his career as a teacher since 1893 when he began as a professor of English and Greek. Dr. Walmsley has already won his classes by his outspoken opinions, his fairness, his knowledge of his subject, and his ability to impart it with interest. We have every reason to believe that he will win his future classes as he has won these of the first term and at the close of the year Dr. Walmsley will be one of the most popular and highly respected teachers on our campus.

Dr. Walmsley is a member of the honorary fraternity Pi Gamma Mu, the new fraternity in social science, with the same requirements as Phi Beta Kappa, in academic work.

The following will give an account of where he has been and what he has done before he came to S. T. C. His most recent work is a book of documents on "The Change of Secessionist Sentiment in Virginia in 1865."

WEYANOKE HOTEL FORMALLY OPENED

Raising of the Flag Over the Building Attended With Ceremonies by American Legion, Silver Band and Company G.

The opening of the Hotel Weyanoke on last Tuesday, October 20th, marked a new day in the hotel history of Farmville. Together with the two other hotels of this city, The Prince Edward and the Continental, it lists this city with the leading hotel centers of this State. Situated on the Washington-Raleigh highway, half way between the two cities, and about the half way point on the Norfolk-Bristol highway, Farmville will undoubtedly be known as the most convenient hotel center in the State.

The opening of the Weyanoke was attended by an elaborate program. The parade formed at the north end of Main Street at 5:00 o'clock, and was led by the Farmville Silver Band, up Main Street to the hotel, on the corner of North and High streets. In the parade were the American Legion, Company G, The Directors of the hotel and the stockholders. Little Miss Virginia Martin, daughter of E. S. Martin, president of the hotel corporation, was dressed in a red, white and blue costume, and had the honor of raising the flag at the hotel, while the band played the national anthem and Company G, fired a salute.

Governor E. Lee Trinkle, made the address of dedication, in which he praised the community spirit which fostered the hotel, and greatly complimented this city for its progressive spirit.

Following the Governor's address of dedication, over two thousand people made an inspection of the new building between the hours of 6:00 and 10:00 o'clock. Many interested persons came from out of town, and hotel men from the nearby cities were guests of the hotel management.

"So you can have a good laugh!"

"What for?"

"What a silly question; for the Student Building, of course!"

The admission is only ten cents and you get at least a quarter's worth of laughs, besides seeing our own Faculty and the men in town in the wedding. If you miss it you shall be eternally sorry. Be sure to come and bring a dime.

SHOULD SORORITIES HOLD BACK CLUBS?

Would the clubs, Pi Alpha, Mu Omega and Zeta Tau mean more to the non-sorority girls if the sorority girls were not allowed to be members? From all observations and experience in the matter, it is, without a doubt, evident that the clubs would be better off without sorority girls. There is proof of this in the Zeta Tau Club, which is recognized as meaning more to its members than either Pi Alpha or Mu Omega.

Of course the sorority girls have more interest in their sororities than in their clubs. This is expected and is evident in all cases, by their indifference and attitude after the club bids are all over.
Sorority "rushing" was given the preference, and right to "rush", and bid first. This is evidence enough of where most of the interest of the sorority girl lies, for each member of the sorority Pan-Hellenic is a club girl.

Sororities accomplish something and do good whether it is made public or not. And at the same time enjoy some social life. What do the clubs do? Nothing,—because they are not as one, the interest is divided. The very name "Club" signifies that it's members should be "club girls". And it makes the name "sorority club" a misnomer.

Without sorority-girl membership clubs would eventually take in a larger group and this will give more girls the advantage of social life while at school. Should the sorority girls monopolize the social field of the school with the exception of the Y. W. C. A. social functions? The club will have its interests from a different viewpoint and will be able to accomplish more in the social line or any other line than it can take up.

A girl who is a member of a club in the year should wish to bid a club girl.
The club will not be so binding as to not allow any resignations.

Sorority girls have expense enough in their sororities, without the expense of a club.

At a recent club meeting fifty girls' names were "brought up."
These names were "rushers" of sororities. Is it fair to ask a girl to rush the same dead "timber" year after year and by so doing, destroy all hopes of ever making the club membership

The only solution to the matter, it seems, is to expel the clubs from the school or turn them over to "club girls" who can make something of them.

The Editor of The Rotunda has given consent to publish an answer to this in any form provided the article be signed. (The name will not be published.)

LET ME WALK WITH THE MEN IN THE ROAD

By Walter J. Gresham

'Tis only a half truth the poet has sung
Of the house by the side of the way;
Our Master had neither a house nor a home,
But he walked with the crowd day by day.
And I think, when I read of the poet's desire,
That a house by the road would be good,
But service is found in its tenderest form

When we walk with the crowd in the road.
So I say, let me walk with men in the road,
Let me seek out the burdens that crush,
Let me speak a kind word of good cheer to the weak,

Who are falling behind in the rush.
There are wounds to be healed, there are breaks
we must mend,

There's a cup of cold water to give;
And the man in the road by the side of his friend
Is the man who has learned to live.

Then tell me no more of the house by the road,
There is only one place I can live;
It's there with the men who are toiling along,
Who are needing the cheer I can give.

It is pleasant to live in the house by the way,
And be a friend, as the poet has said,
But the Master is bidding us, "Bear ye their load,
For your rest waiteth yonder ahead."

I could not remain in the house by the road
And watch as the toilers go on;
Their faces beclouded with pain and with sin,
So burdened, their strength nearly gone.

I'll go to their side, I'll speak in good cheer,
I'll help them carry their load;
And I'll smile at the man in the house by the way
As I walk with the crowd in the road.

But there in the road that goes by the house,
Where the poet is singing his song,
I'll walk and I'll work midst the heat of the day,
And I'll help falling brothers along.

Too busy to live in house by the way,
Too happy for such an abode,
And my heart sings its praise to the Master of all,
Who is helping me serve in the road.

SHALL WE HAVE POST OFFICE BOXES?

How many times has this question been asked? Every year it comes up anew and always the answer is, "We want them," but the question was "Shall we have them?" Whether we shall have them or not depends a great deal on the Students, if we want them, we must do our part toward getting them. The school has very heavy expenses to bear and Post Office boxes cannot be had for nothing.
Dr. Jarman hesitates to add one cent of expense to that which we already have, so it is up to us to find a solution to the problem.
Here is one we think suitable. The classes, that is Seniors, Juniors and Sophomores, have decided that they want Post Office boxes so badly, that they will willingly earn money and pay for the boxes. They are willing to give a part and to give in proportion to the members in the class, providing of course, that Dr. Jarman is willing and that the expenses will not be too heavy.

Since the girls want the boxes so badly there must be some reason, and when a proposition is stated, reasons must always be given. Why do we want Post Office boxes instead of getting mail in the dining room as we have been doing? There are many excellent reasons. One is that the meal is interrupted if we get the mail before we start to eat, some piece of news which we may receive in a letter will distress or excite us so that we cannot eat our meal, and certainly cannot digest it. When we get the mail during the meal, the meal is interrupted for we either eat hurriedly in order to get through and read our letter or, sometimes when we have a letter that we are particularly anxious to read, we stop right where we are and read the letter. If the mail is not given out until we finish we are kept in the dining room longer, noise is bad when the notices are being read, then in case of bad news or of some unusual piece of news, our digestive system is likely to be upset, so that the food we have eaten does us little or no good. There are other reasons, sometimes the message in a letter comes just too late for you to catch a train, or get a letter off in time to catch one, while if the mail were put in boxes when it arrives this would be avoided. At present we waste a great deal of time standing in package line. A great deal of this lost time might be saved and a large amount of slips and energy by having Post Office boxes; for all the packages of small size might be put in these boxes, while the larger ones could be called for.
The question of why we eat at one table a whole year has often been asked, the answer is simple. When mail is given out at the table, it is simply impossible to change tables during the year, without a great deal of confusion and trouble. If this were done away with perhaps every term a table hostess might have the privilege of inviting different girls to eat at her table. Things would certainly be much more pleasant, for it very often happens that girls at a table aren't entirely congenial, and at the same time it gives each girl a chance to become well acquainted.

Shall we have Post Office boxes. Do we want them badly enough to work for them and to cooperate? Can you think of stronger and better reasons why we shouldn't have them? It's up to us if we want them, to prove that we do. Shall the answer be "we will"?

NEW CLUB ORGANIZED

The thirteen girls who represent Lunenburg County at S. T. C. met last week and organized a club. The Lunenburg Club elected as its president Madeline Gary, and Ruth Love as secretary and treasurer. With these active officers and the cooperation on the part of each member we are going to try and make this club worth while. We will strive to uphold our Alma Mater as a group as well as individually. Our colors are red and white and our flower is the red ramble. Regular meetings will be held the first Saturday in every month.

Morris Is Tennis Champion

Mildred Morris is the 'champion'. She is the one that will be the owner of individual cup which the Athletic Association has offered to the tennis champion of S. T. C.

The final tennis game was staged Thursday at 4:30 and the contest was a hard fought battle between Vincent of '27 and Morris of '29. The game began with each girl losing her own serve. However, Vincent rallied and won three successive games making the score 3-1. After this both players tightened and tied the score many times until Morris won two successive games making the first set hers with a score of 8-6.

The second set was a game of endurance which finally ended in Morris' favor with a score of 6-3. Vincent's luck in "scooping" balls and her good placing, made her outmatch Morris many times, since Morris' placing proved to be her weak point. However, Morris' endurance and her accuracy in serving, as well as her good form, were points in her favor.

The game was won by "a green and white" from "a green and white". However, the victory could not be attributed, in the least, to the backing of the class for none of the four college classes showed enough interest to have more than half a dozen representatives present at the final tournament.

Basketball

Sophomores and Freshmen are starting out basketball season with a bang. The Freshmen are falling in line rapidly for a fine team and are determined to win the game for the green and white this year. The 'Sophs' are determined to "reclaim their cup" consequently all kinds of excitement is promised for Thanksgiving.

The Juniors and Seniors are also at work on their team. Everyone wonders which will win (?)

The varsity has been put through a course on fundamentals and technique. This year the school is trying to develop coaches and officials. Anyone who is interested in preparing for either is urged to report to the coach.

The schedule for class and varsity practice has been arranged as follows:
Freshmen: Monday and Wednesday.
Sophomores: Tuesday and Thursday.
Juniors: Wednesday.
Seniors: Tuesday.
Varsity: Saturday.

Hockey

Hockey practice has begun! It started off with plenty of pep last week. The girls were enthusiastic over the game and have a big game Thanksgiving as the hockey objective for this year. Thanksgiving day will be a big day this year. In the morning the basketball games will be played while hockey will be staged in the afternoon. It is necessary that all girls report on the Athletic Field Wednesday at 4:15 as groups will be assigned at that time.

Monogram Try-Outs

Monogram try-outs will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays at 3:15 on the Athletic Field. All interested must report at this time.

Recognition Service

Perhaps the most impressive service in our college, especially to the new girls, is the Recognition Service of the Y. W. C. A.

Last Tuesday night, amidst the solemn glow of candles and soft strains of music, the President and Y. W. C. A. Cabinet moved down the central aisle of the auditorium, followed by the new girls.

After the Vice-President presented the new members, the President welcomed them into the Association, and they went forward and lighted their candles from those of the Cabinet. Then each girl asked the Father of all Creation to keep the glow of Christian love and friendship forever burning in her heart.

The Recessional was led by the Cabinet, who were followed by the new members.

We are glad to welcome you, new members! May each of you "Follow the Gleam" as eagerly as you sang it!

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY SCHOOL FAIR

The Prince Edward County School Fair was held in the Armory October 22 and 23.

The exhibits showed the progress and consolidation of the schools. They were attractively displayed and many of the posters made by the pupils and teachers showed exceptional skill.

The Prince Edward County Federation allowed fifty dollars out of the budget for the County Educational Exhibit. Forty dollars was offered as prizes for the best community league in Prince Edward County, the best Junior League, the most attractive exhibit, and the best essay on "The Junior League." Prospect won five prizes, Farmville two and Rice and Bagby Chapel each one.

The fair was exceptionally good and gave a good representation of the work done in the schools of Prince Edward County.

STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE HONORED

One of Four in U. S. Chosen for Rural Research Work

In a letter to our Y. W. C. A. secretary, Miss Winnifred Wygal, National Secretary states the following:

"Under the Ford Fund, which is a special gift of Henry Ford to the National Board for research work in rural and community contacts, there has been employed Miss Galdys Taylor who is half student and half rural secretary, to do eighteen months of special study of the way college Y. W. C. A. girls who are preparing to be teachers, fit into their communities. After studying all of the colleges in the United States to decide which four are most ideal for this study, we have chosen these: Washington State College, Pullman, Washington; Illinois State Normal, Normal, Illinois; New Hampshire State College, Durham, New Hampshire; and State Teachers College at Farmville; the last, of course, provided you and your cabinet are willing. The reason we chose Farmville is because it has a good local student secretary, a strong, thriving Y. W. C. A., is a teachers college well recommended by Miss Karney and others of the Rural Education Department at Columbia with whom we are working, and because it fits small town and rural communities with teachers."

One of four! Are we just swelled with pride? I'll say we are!

club lobby lounge, with clerk's desk facing the entrance. The elevator, dining room, ladies room, check room, public telephone booths, managers office and suite of rooms opens into the lobby, and are arranged so that the maximum service can be accorded guests with minimum effort. The main stairway up and down from the ground floor is located in the elevator lobby, the freight elevator is located in the far end of the elevator lobby with entrances on the ground and basement floor, from store room. It is isolated from the bed rooms on the upper floors.

The main dining room opens into the right of the lobby, immediately behind which is one of the most modernly equipped kitchens in the state.

The ladies room, to the left of the lobby, is a special provision for the convenience of automobile tourists. It is attractively fitted with lounging space, beautiful draperies and carpets.

The ground floor, because of the grade, gives opportunity for a business store for rent and a barber shop which is operated by Mack and Owen. A dining room located under the kitchen, can be used for club banquets, or other purposes. This will not interfere with the main dining room business. In addition to this, there is sufficient room for several excellent sample rooms, as well as servants rooms and store rooms.

The second, third and fourth floors are arranged for bedrooms, so that every room has direct connection with a bath room, the bath being placed between the two rooms, making it possible to rent them with or without bath or ensuite with bath. Each bed room is entirely covered with carpets, and is fitted out with either single or twin beds, a table and chairs, bureau, spacious closets, and running water in every room.

The entire effect of the hotel, its fixtures and furnishings, gives a homey atmosphere, a plain and simple, but hospitable appearance.

FARMVILLE WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

Miss Leola Wheeler Gives Interesting Account of Period Furniture

On Wednesday afternoon at a meeting of the Farmville Women's Club, Miss Leola Wheeler read a very interesting and instructive account of "Early American Period Furniture." This account and the slides to illustrate it were sent to the club from national headquarters, Miss Ilma Von Schilling assisted Miss Wheeler by operating the machine by which the slides were shown.

Members of Miss Katharine Tupper's Home Making Class, who attended the meeting, gained very helpful information from the illustrated account of period furniture.

MISS GRENELS PRESENTED AS HONORARY MEMBER OF THE JUNIOR CLASS

Reception in Recreation Hall

Last Tuesday morning, the Juniors, with green and white colors streaming, formed a triumphal arch from the auditorium door to the stage. Miss Grenels, the honorary member of the class, was escorted by Virginia Vincent, through the arched hands,—hands raised in a pledge of loyalty to Miss Grenels and the Junior Class.

After their President presented the honorary member, the class sang with the enthusiasm of jolly Juniors; their voices swelling with pride as they looked at Miss Grenels and sang, "How we'll love you and to you be true." They meant that, too, did those eighty-four Juniors.

Tuesday evening at 10:15 the class entertained Miss Grenels and their Senior girls in the Recreation Hall. Miss Grenels was so rushed during the dancing that she could only smile that smile of hers and say, "Why—why girls, this is just wonderful."

An impromptu program was rendered. Virginia Potts sang the "Old Oaken Bucket," "Down by the Old Mill Stream"; Eleanor Bennett sang, "Lady, Be Good," and Virginia Vincent sang, "A Pal That I Love".

Oh yes, we had punch! We had yells and songs. We had a rip-roaring good time!

ALUMNAE TO HOLD A CARNIVAL SOON

All Organizations Are Invited to Take Part

The Farmville Chapter of the Alumnae Association is to give a carnival the first part of December in the gymnasium. Several years ago the Alumnae had a carnival in which all the organizations in school who wished, took part. It was a great success—in fact, such a success that they were requested to repeat it—well, they waited awhile to repeat it, but they are doing it this year and on a much larger scale.

At a meeting of representatives from all the organizations Miss Mary Clay Hiner invited each one to take part. There will be ring performances and side shows. For the best ring performance, the contest is open to all, a prize of five dollars ($5.00) will be given, and for the second best performance a prize of two dollars ($2.00). The organizations beside putting on ring performances may each have a side show of some kind.

Everyone has been very enthusiastic so far, and if the classes, clubs etc., want to have their choice of stunts, they had better say so at once, as everyone will have an equal chance.

This will be an opportunity for everyone to have a good time and for all of us to make some money, so let's all help the alumnae and ourselves by boosting the Carnival!

AMERICAN COLLEGES PROVE VITAL FACTOR IN RED CROSS DRIVE

First Aid Made Credit in Schools

Seventeen years ago the curtain of molten steel which had shut out nations from nations and people from people, was lifted to disclose a world made over. Spent and breathless, the peoples of the earth emerged from under this barrier to find themselves in a new era.

First to sense this change was the American Red Cross. From an organization braving every resource to meet war needs, it turned to a peace program which in itself, and in the manner in which it has been executed, is a monument to American vision.

Sharing in this achievement have been the college men and women of the United States. Wholeheartedly they have accepted the Red Cross program, and with the spirit characteristic of American youth, have made it their own. An important part of the Red Cross program has for its aim the elimination of useless deaths from accidents, whether in the water, or from every-day mishaps. The toll from this cause is just beginning to be realized, and it is to the credit of the country's universities, and colleges that they are meeting the situation in the way it demands. In the University of Kentucky, for example, First Aid has been made an accredited course; classified as Hygiene 2 under the Department of Hygiene and Public Health in the College of Arts and Sciences. While academically listed in this college as a subject, it is elective for students in all colleges of this university. As a credit it counts two for graduation; as a course it is given two hours a week each semester for 18 weeks; being thus repeated to reach two separate groups during the University session. The plan is not simply an experiment; it is generally believed that the course is vital, practical and necessary, worthy of consideration in comparison with other subjects. The worth of the course to the individual, and through him to any community where his career may take him after college, may be better estimated when it is realized that accidents in the United States during the World War period claimed one and one-half times as many persons as did the shells and machine guns faced by the American troops during the same interval.

President Frank L. McVey, of the Kentucky Institution, makes this observation: "Instruction in First Aid is a matter too long neglected in our colleges. Somewhere along the line of education such instruction should be given and if not in high schools certainly in the colleges. —Such a course comes to have standing in the department offering it and has real value as an educational factor."

Other faculty members speak in equally high terms of this work which is not new in this particular university, but is representative of their attitude.

S. T. C.'S PAINTINGS TO BE DISCUSSED BY THE STUDENTS OF ART

"Peace and Plenty" is Subject

Among the most beautiful paintings in our college, is that of "Peace and Plenty," a landscape by George Inness. This artist was born in Newburg, N. Y. in 1825 and died in 1894. He studied in France and England, but most of his famous pictures were painted around New York and New Jersey. "His was an original—a distinctly American mind in art." Among his most famous paintings are: "The Middle Meadows," "Grey Lowering Day," "Peace and Plenty," "Meadow," and "Delaware Water Gap." A number of his original paintings are in museums, but quite a few of them are in private homes.

"Peace and Plenty" is one of the most beautiful of the pictures in the Student Building Lounge. It will be found on the left of the fire place.

The painting is a landscape noted for its naturalness. After gazing at it but a moment we can easily imagine ourselves lying in the cool grass under the shadows of the great elms. Nearby are two harvesters engaged in conversation—probably resting before assuming their cutting of grain. In the distance we can hear the creaking of a wagon as it moves slowly down the road under its heavy load. And then, there is the lapping of the water, and an occasional "thump" as a big old frog falls in. It is late afternoon we know by the long shadows cast across the water. In our imagination we can hear the sweet notes of a bird as he calls to his mate. . . .

In conclusion as to the power of the picture, I shall quote De Garmo Winslow, "I am convinced that it should appeal to all who love nature, and nature is of course, universal in her appeal. The picture will always appeal to men the world over!"

The above article was written by a student of Miss Coulling's Freshman Drawing Class. In each issue of The Rotunda will appear a similar article on famous paintings in S. T. C. Miss Coulling is having this done in order that all students may know something of the famous paintings in our college.

HAVE YOU DONE YOUR PART TOWARD THE Y. W. C. A. BUDGET?

When the Y. W. C. A. membership campaign was put on, and resulted in nearly every new girl here joining, all the Cabinet was delighted. Of course the next thing on the program was the Finance Campaign. Perhaps the results of the membership drive had given the Cabinet too high hopes for the finance drive, anyway, they are greatly disappointed. The most disappointing thing was that the old girls didn't do any better than the new girls. Have you done your part?

The purpose of the Y. W. C. A. is to better the moral and social standing of the school and to promote good fellowship between the students, they can't carry on their work without funds. No one person is asked to give much. If only everyone would do her part we should have no trouble, we need not feel any extra strain on our finances at all. If we would each say I will give up going to the tea room, or some other place where we spend money foolishly, for one day each week and give that money to the Y. W. C. A.
they could easily carry on its work and we would hardly miss the money we had given. Perhaps, if we could feel it, it would do us more good. Have you ever noticed how much more pleasure we get out of giving a gift when we deny ourselves something in order to give it.

Think over the fact that the Y. W. C. A. does not make a demand for any certain amount, and only asks us to give what we can. The pledges have amounted to just about half of the budget. Do you know what that means? It means that a number of girls in school have not pledged at all and that those who have pledged, in many cases have given just a very small sum, perhaps what they happened to have on hand at the minute. Some girls have done their part and more than their part and they will probably feel that they will have to do more unless some of us who are slackers will come forward and help make up the deficiency.

It is embarrassing for the Y. W. to have to keep on asking for money just as it is embarrassing for us, but, unless we help them by doing our part without being constantly reminded, they have to be the reminders.

Let's surprise the Treasurer and the Finance chairman by making the Y. W. C. A. budget go over the mark this week.

HOW DO WE KEEP SUNDAY?

When we leave home and go off to school, most of us do not have any idea of what to expect. We have no idea that our ways of living, our atmosphere and our very ideals may be changed. Yet, this is true. In every phase of existence we find ourselves adrift, to settle down and to settle in a way which will not lower but raise our ideals is the hardest problem which we face.

One of the first questions we have to decide, and one which only we, as individuals can decide is, "How shall we spend Sunday?"
Perhaps, some of us do not go to church regularly at home but the majority of us go, not only to church but to Sunday School as well.
Why not continue the practice up here? The habit is so easily formed at first that it is hard to form here.

When we wake up on Sunday morning it is the easiest thing in the world to say, "Oh, I don't believe I'll go to Sunday School and church today, I'd love to finish that book I'm reading, and this will be a fine chance to finish my history notebook or to read my English assignment." Don't start this habit, because if we do eventually we will find ourselves all through the week putting things off until Sunday, this set of notes and that lesson can wait until Sunday. But it can't.

It doesn't very often occur to us that the spiritual side of our nature needs educating as well as the mental and physical side. Most of us glance up in horror when anyone says, "Get up fifteen minutes sooner and go to morning watch," but try it and see if you don't enjoy your Sundays more.

We are losing something vital out of our life if we spend Sunday doing work which we have put off, or if we spend it simply loafing around.

ESSAY CONTEST

Governor E. Lee Tinkle has requested Harris Hart, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; W. J.
Harahan, President of the Chesapeake
& Ohio Railway; and Eppa Hunton,
President of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad, to act as judges of the essays eligible for competition in the statewide essay on "Friendship, An Asset of Virginia," in the high schools of the state.

The governor was requested by the Hampton Roads Port Commission, created by the legislature in 1922, and which is sponsoring the essay contest.
In cooperation with the Hampton Roads Port Cooperative Association, composed of civic and commercial organizations of the port district, to name the board of judges, who will make a selection of the best essay from each school division in the state.
In announcing that he had requested
Messrs. Hart, Harahan, and Hunton to act, the governor said he considered the subject one of utmost importance to Virginia and since widespread interest was being taken by thousands of high school pupils, he desired to secure for the port commission the aid of three men of outstanding knowledge and ability in passing on the essays.

Essays submitted by high school pupils must be in the hands of their respective principals by Saturday, October 31st. The principals will send them to their respective division superintendents at once and a board of local judges in each school jurisdiction will select the best essay for a local prize of $10.00. The winning essay for the division prize will be entered in the statewide contest, from which the governor's board of judges will select the best for a prize of $50.00.

Division superintendents of schools have been requested to have their local judges make the award by November 10 and notify Hampton Roads Port Commission at Norfolk of the winner immediately thereafter; also sending the essays to the commission's office. It is hoped to have the governor's board of judges make selection of the winning essay for the state prize before December 1st. The best essays will be printed in the newspapers of

The State as a part of an educational campaign to acquaint the people of Virginia with the natural resources of the commonwealth.

Indications are that there will be more than 5,000 essays submitted by high school pupils in the various divisions, and that approximately one hundred will be entered in the statewide competition.

FRIENDSHIP

A ray of sunshine on a lonely road;
A star to light our way;
A helping hand to ease our weary load,
And guide us day by day.

O Friendship, you are found in every heart
That know true happiness.
If we will pierce it with the dart
Of perfect friendliness.

For, as the tender violet fears the tramp
Of unkind, shodden hoofs,
So, some hearts often feel the cruel stamp
Of innocent rebuffs.

Then let our smile be sunshine on a land
That once would lonesome be.
Our lives the star to guide a brother's hand
'Cross life's uncertain sea.

The Y. W. C. A. announces the result of its financial campaign to be about $350, for which it is truly thankful. Of course, pledges swell the amount to nearly $1000, but well, that hasn't been collected yet!

However, do YOU realize how little $350 means, when our budget calls for over $2,000? Think, girls, of the enormous part the Y. W. plays in the life of each girl in college, of its kindly intention, of its increasing pursues of friendship and love! Then think of the dollars that somehow slip through your hands and cannot be accounted for. Put that bit to a high purpose, you students, and help
a great organization in S. T. C.

Remember that "Freely ye have received, freely give."

CHAPEL TALK ON AMERICA'S WAR DEBT

Dr. Walmsley Gives Second Talk

During chapel Tuesday, Dr. Walmsley discussed one of the most interesting topics of the day—America's World War Debt. In the discussion of America's debt, Dr. Walmsley brought in the fact that twenty countries owe the United States, and only one of those countries has paid her debt—that being Cuba. America seems to have more trouble with the French debt. Dr. Walmsley stated that President Coolidge did not want that "talked up" for fear of agitation among the Americans citizens.

Dr. Walmsley stated also that the United States owes millions to foreign countries—her national debt being twenty-two millions. Dr. Walmsley said that the question being discussed at the present time was, when the United States should pay her World War debt. It has been suggested by prominent men of our country that we pay after a term of fifty or even sixty-two years, but if we are to wait that long the amount owed will doubtless be doubled. If the United States pays within the next few years, taxes will run up. Dr. Walmsley stated that the most vital question before the citizens of today is "Shall we wait?"

A MESSAGE OF APPRECIATION

"It's the little things that count." How very old is this saying and yet it still holds true. So often the little things which count must pass us by unnoticed and unappreciated. To the door they are a pleasure and not a duty—she performs through love those little services which mean so much to all the passers-by. There are little duties to perform everywhere and S. T. C. has its share of opportunities. I wonder how many students have noticed the plants in the Library? Perhaps you have noticed them, but have you ever stopped to consider that someone's thoughtfulness and care keeps them green and beautiful to brighten the room for us? Have you ever wondered who this someone is? She is no other than Miss M. K. Tallafiero and we wish to take this means of expressing to her our appreciation of her services to others.

HOME DEPARTMENT AND FACULTY NEWS

Misses Winnie and Mary Clay Hiner returned Tuesday, after spending a delightful visit of three days at their home in Staunton.

Miss Lessie Lea was recently in Richmond shopping.

Among the members of the faculty who attended the American Country Life Association held in Richmond this week were Misses Willie London, Lila London, Florence Stubbs, Pauline Camper, and Dr. J. L. Jernan, president.

Miss Ada Berbowser accompanied a group of S. T. C. students to the American Country Life Association in Richmond over the week-end.

DR. ALDERMAN'S ADVICE

President E. A. Alderman of the University of Virginia says, "Our colleges stand in need of having the most gifted high school instructors promoted for teaching courses where the aim is not purely graduate research work, but skillful and inspiring teaching."

He states, "There are many high school teachers of today of far greater didactic and pedagogical ability than very learned young Doctors of Philosophy functioning as assistant professors."

HEY DIDDLE DIDDLE

Mother Goose Rythmes, one of the greatest of American classics, are domed to the realm of the past. The modernists say she must go. They say that she is not only silly, ungrammatical and un-American, but is brutal and obscene. You who consider yourselves among the adult classes or approaching that age, will wonder, no doubt, what such an article is doing in a college publication. You, probably have forgotten the many times that your grandmother has brought cosmos out of chaos with a jingling doggerel such as "Polly put the kettle on" or "Ride a cockhorse to Banbury Cross." Thus, we think it only fitting that we take the part of old Mother Goose, pleaded the case of her, who was condemned to perdition by her son-in-law.

Howbeit, it has remained for the new school to psychoanalyze, and alas, they have found her to be responsible for most of the ills of our day. Why she condones slovenliness in the very lines,

"Deedle deedle dampling, my son, John

Went to bed with his stockings on.

Poor Simple Simon, I am told advocated unsound economics, in his pie story. Miss Muffet and her spider engender a fear complex. King Cole, that ribald soul, extols imperialism, while "Sing a song of sixpence" is un-American, since it deals with a monarchical monetary system.

It has been suggested that we exchange Mother Goose for such educational gems as this:

"What makes us stand so tall and straight?

Our bones, which number two hundred eight;"

or this one which tends to correct fear complexes by padding the strong arm of the law:

"Let Friend Policeman be your guide

When into the street you go.

Whether you walk or in autos ride,

You must mind the rules, you know."

After little Elizabeth has been read the weather forecast for tomorrow, when she is planning to go on a picnic she will merely respond;

"Pitter, patter rainy day,

Bringing summer showers

Though I can't go out to play,

I know 'twill help the flowers.

Having, bordered on the absurdity thus far, may it be added, that she gives sheer delight, no mean amount of intellectual exercise, she kindles imagination, develops a sense of rhythm, and a keen instinct for dramatization. Long live Mother Goose.

lege, State College, Pa., for the East; and Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colorado, for the West. Widely scattered instances, but these two examples are typical of the importance of the college in the new program; practical participation sums it up.

Not the less practical, and certainly the most general, however, has been the reception accorded in America's college, to the Red Cross Annual Roll Call, during which the strength to carry out this vast work is built up through membership. The Ninth Annual Roll Call will be held this year from Armistice Day, November 11, to Thanksgiving, November 26. President John Grier Hibben, of Princeton has accepted the Chairmanship of the College Roll Call in the Eastern area.

In a letter to the people of the United States this year, President Coolidge states that the worth of the American Red Cross has been proven not alone in war but in peace.

You in the colleges of the United States can make the Red Cross even more worthy of this indorsement for 1926.

AMERICAN COUNTRY LIFE ASSOCIATION MEETS IN RICHMOND

Last week, the Tea Room of the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond, was the scene of a most interesting and forward looking group of Americans. There were men and women—girls and boys from Maine, Arkansas, Michigan and many other far away states, who were gathered together to discuss the great problem of the American country life. These men and women felt that the hope of the future of our country depends on the home and community life of the people of today. In the United States the majority of people live in the city where they rush through their lives and finally die of a nervous breakdown.

Many suggestions for the solutions of the problems were made at the conference, which was attended Saturday by a group of S. T. C. girls. The morning was thrown open to discussion groups where different problems of particular interest to students were discussed. Campus activities, the curriculums and other such topics were taken up.

Dr. Isherall, the Editor of the A. C. L. A. magazine made a plea for more Rural Life Clubs to be established and extended an invitation for any material that would be of interest to the readers of the magazine.

The convention closed with a most inspiring talk by Miss Clerk, who has devoted her entire life to the cause of furthering country life in America. She challenged us to find life more perfectly portrayed than in the small town. There we find the drama of life. Plots, characters, settings with deaths, births, marriages; all are found there. It is only if we have eyes to see it?

The youth of the United States is leaving the country and going to the city and will continue to do so until the life is made more attractive in the country. This can only be done by diligent leaders. The question is are our colleges training these leaders?

HONORARY MEMBER SOPHOMORE CLASS

T. A. McCORKLE

M is for McCorkle, our Sophomore man.

C is for courage, the best in the land: C is for character, a fine one he's got.

O is for often he aids us a lot. R is for right—which he helps us to do.

K is for kindness—so constant and true!

L is for love—who couldn't love him? E is for every—why every Sophomore.

SOPHOMORES PRESENT

HONORARY MEMBER,

MR. T. A. McCORKLE

The Sophomores are holding to their Freshman reputation for pep. On Tuesday morning, November third the class presented their honorary member, Mr. T. A. McCorkle. The two upper classes had marched in and waited until after the president presented their honorary member, before they started singing, but not so the Sophomores, they were bubbling over with pep—so they marched in singing their peppy song, then they fooled us, they had even more pep than we thought, for after Mr. McCorkle had been presented, they sang two more songs to Mr. McCorkle, pledging to him love and loyalty. Each class has made its presentation just a little different from the one before it, the Freshmen have both an advantage and a disadvantage in being the last class to present their honorary member, every member of the student body and the faculty is waiting for the Freshmen to prove their reputation of being different. The Sophomores set them a mighty good example of whole hearted enthusiasm.

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA GLEE CLUB RENDERS CONCERT

On Wednesday evening, November 5, a most delightful concert was given by the University of Virginia Glee Club in the college auditorium. An unusually large crowd attended and showed keen enjoyment of the program by repeatedly encoring the singers and orchestra.

This entertainment was secured through the music group of the Farmville Woman's Club, of which Mrs. W. J. Gills is chairman. The Glee Club was directed by Prof. Arthur Fickenscher, who before coming to the University of Virginia, was well known in New York City.

Mr. Eugene Turner, of Richmond, Virginia, who rendered several solos, has a very fine tenor voice. The other soloist, Mr. Lyttleton Waddell, has an unusually good baritone voice. His solo, "Danny Deever", was excellent.

The Glee Club Orchestra, consisting of ten pieces is said to be one of the best of its kind for several years. Mr. R. A. Williamson, director of this orchestra, is a splendid and capable leader.

The first number on the program, "Virginia Alma Mater Song", was composed by Mr. Albert Morrow, an alumnus of the University.

The program was as follows:

PERCY A. SCHOLES GIVES FINE LECTURE, "MUSIC UNFETTERED"

Thursday, November 5th, Percy A. Scholes, a native of England and an "Eminent Critic", author, and educator, gave a lecture-recital on "Music Unfettered." As illustrations Mr. Scholes used typical types of composition of Bach, Hayden, Mozart, Beethoven, and the Scottish composer, MacDowell. Mr. Scholes had with him a famous Duo-Art piano, on which were rendered the compositions just as the world known artists play them today.

Mr. Scholes stated that there were two kinds of music—a good and bad—just as there were two types of anything that could be either good or bad. In substitution of the good and the bad music, there was the "simple" and the "complex". The simple could be understood by anyone, but complex was more difficult. More thought was required to listen and distinguish the various tones. Not only were we to distinguish the various tones, but to recognize the repeated themes. To illustrate this fact, Mr. Scholes played several well-known old airs to see if we might hear different tones at the same time.

From the simple selections he advanced his audience with the more complex compositions of Bach, and the sweeping composition of Beethoven. Probably the most enjoyable of the compositions on the Duo-Art piano, was Hayden's Sonata in D, which lasted for more than seven minutes.

Mr. Scholes said that anyone could love and appreciate music if they would only interpret its meaning as they did songs and poems. He stated that we alone should learn to love and appreciate it, so that as educators of the future generation we might instill in our students the love and appreciation of famous compositions.

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsigned correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism, and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of presenting and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

HOW EDITORIALS ACCOMPLISH THINGS AND WHY THEY SHOULD BE READ.

After the class presidents were appointed as the committee to carry out the plan of post office boxes suggested by The Rotunda a faculty advisor was in demand. Miss Maude K. Taliaferro kindly offered her services and she has already met the committee. All investigations as to the expense and regulations of the school system of boxes are being made. Dr. Jarman is in favor of the plan and he is doing what he can to help it.

This is just an example of what we can accomplish if we try.
At first all members of The Rotunda Staff said that an editorial on the subject would be useless, as it had been tried before and failed. However points were given in favor of it and plans brought out, so the article was written and read by the students. The class presidents upon being asked to carry out the plan agreed that it would be a fine gift to leave the school and were highly in favor of it.

This plan brings out the fact that the editorial of The Rotunda is generally on a subject that concerns the student body and it is the wish of the staff that they be read and given thought.

The Rotunda is glad to publish editorials written by the students upon matters which they think should reach the student body through The Rotunda. Our paper is given the name "Rotunda" because it is the point around which all activities of school life center. Its columns are open to any of our opinions on subjects we wish to discuss with the student body. The Rotunda is our paper and it is ready to publish what we want it to.

ON BORROWING

First of all—just what is borrowing? Until I entered S. T. C. I thought I knew the meaning of the word. To me—borrowing was receiving permission to use something belonging to someone else. That definition still holds good in some cases, but in other the first two words "receiving permission" become so very, very obvious Are you a borrower? If so,—in what class shall your name be written?
There are borrowers and borrowers—
o be one is no honor, nor is it a disgrace, and not to be one is probably below the power of students in this institution.

To become a borrower was not your intention when you started school.
You were told to refrain from this very thing by the folks at home and you knew you would never contract such a habit, but you did. You don't know why or how, but it just happened. Was it the morning you were in the tea room hungry, without any money and your classmate walked in with a five dollar bill from home, or was it the nite that first date with the Hampden-Sidney football player, when you just had to wear that adorable dress belonging to the girl in the next room? You didn't mean to borrow, you didn't want to borrow but you did.

Borrowing is a habit—the easiest to acquire and the hardest to break.
I have observed this dreaded disease in all its symptoms and its grip is probably stronger than the ravages of fever. The first symptom may be "a two cent stamp" or just a small piece of Ivory soap to wash out some hose, but the result may be complications of wearing dresses, hats, and fur coats.

As I have said there are borrowers and borrowers. I often wonder if all should be classed as borrowers. In my opinion they should be "borrowers" and "takers". Borrowing becomes such an easy task that permission of the owner soon fades in the background and the property of others is often utilized for the conveniences of certain bold parties. This was brought home to me the other day when walking down the street with several girls.
One girl remarked, "I told so and so she might carry my dress away this week-end. It was in so and so room.
I hope she got it all right. Going on our way we suddenly came upon a certain party arrayed in the very dress mentioned. The owner was of course rather astonished that this individual should have deliberately without permission, taken the dress promised to someone else. Naturally the owner became angry and perhaps lost a friend over this very incident.
Such problems are very common in school life. I have heard such remarks passed, "that dress is right cute but it's not hers" and that slicker doesn't belong to her either". Remarks of this kind are so common that I believe the guilty parties would far rather have the public know that they owned perhaps a few dresses than that they borrowed every dress they wore. And are the borrowers giving the owners a chance? Can an owner derive any amount of pleasure from a new dress which becomes old often before she has had a chance to wear it? The other nite I heard, "well I'll wear my pink dress to Hampden-Sidney tonight. It's the third time it's been there but not on me. I guess everyone is tired of it now and I haven't even worn it."

Borrowing is an evil which must be banished by certain brave individuals. It is hard to deny a friend the privilege of any small amount of pleasure we may give them, but why not become brave knights and say in

THE CORNFIELD

The Degree Class of 1925 has left as its parting gift to the school, one of John Constable's famous pictures,
"The Cornfield," which has been placed in the Lounge of the Student Building.

The painter of this picture was one of England's greatest artists during the early part of the nineteenth century. At an early age he started painting landscapes and was encouraged by Sir George Beaumont, who was also a painter. This nobleman gave Constable models for practice, which inspired him. Constable was awarded a gold medal for his painting, "The Hay Wain". It was in France that Constable had his first real success, and the French were the first to really appreciate his works. The true value of "The Cornfield" was not realized until after his death. But now it is considered one of our most beautiful landscape paintings. The fact is Con-stable's work did not sell until he had been painting forty-five years.

He did not paint as all the great painters had done before him. He went out into real life and painted the home life scenes as he saw them.
Constable was very fond of color and in all of his work he used the brightest of colors. Paintings with Constable was only another name for feeling.
His paintings were so homelike that others loved them and could get a companionship with every detail.
He learned to know hills, the winding of its streams, and the position and character of every tree and object.

Because Constable interpreted nature according to his own mood he was, in fact, the first of the temperamental landscape painters—Constable is called the father of modern landscape.

Of the sweetest tone possible, "I'd love to but, really, I am neither borrowing nor lending these days." No friend could forsake you because of such a remark. She might even thank you in later years and you would be furthering a worthy cause.

Let's make a resolution:
Neither a borrower nor a lender be,
We want it abolished at S. T. C.
—F. R. D.

ATHLETIC NEWS

Change in Constitution

The Athletic Association constitution will have to be changed slightly in order to meet the needs of the school and to provide for the requirements for the college monogram this year. This is something that every member of the Athletic Association should know about and vote on, therefore it is absolutely necessary that all are acquainted with the amendments that are to be made.

There are two events that have been added to the optional points for the monogram. The first is the javelin throw which can be tried in place of swinging the rings. Five points can be made on this event. The discus throw is the other for which five points can be made. This can be done in place of climbing the rope.

The Athletic Council, which meets every Thursday, has been working on a standard certificate to be given to certify that the individual has participated in any of the different phases of athletics. In other words, the same certificate will be given for all phases of activities, on which will be indicated the name of the particular phase participated in. The student body should be thinking of this plan.

Regulation of Sports

The section of the Athletic Association constitution which deals with the regulation of sports and the requirements for those who wish to participate in these is as follows:

Section I.

"Each sport shall be governed by its own rules and regulations and by such intersport legislation as shall be enacted by the Executive Board.

Section II.

Judgment in awarding positions on class teams shall be based on official record as follows:

- (1) Health.
- (2) Scholarship.
- (3) Sportsmanship.
- (4) Technical skill.
- (5) Scholastic ability.

No woman shall earn an award, or be a member of a team unless she has a passing grade for the preceding semester and unless she has no unsatisfied failure, condition, incomplete probation, or disciplinary penalty incurred either during the academic year or summer session.

School Songs

The last day for the submission of the school songs is drawing near. One can not only win a valuable prize but she can also contribute a great service to the school by writing a school song.

School Monogram

The Freshmen are walking away with the majority of the school monograms. The Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors will wake up too late if they don't "buckle down" and show the Freshmen that they aren't all talk. Two dozen monograms have been ordered. We wonder how they will be distributed among the classes.

School Cheer Leader

The student body will soon have to elect a school cheer leader. In order to give all a fair chance those who were interested were given an opportunity to try out Saturday night. The student body should be considering whom they think would be the best fitted for this position. A dead cheer leader means stunned pep. A wide-awake, efficient cheer leader is the very foundation of school enthusiasm and pep at games.

tion for the settlement of disputes on the basis of law.

Do you know that December 17th marks the opening of the debate in the Senate on America's entrance into the World Court? Do you know that the Senate is still uncertain?

Students of all colleges in the United States are asked to send letters and telegrams to their State Senators urging them to vote in favor of the Court, that God's law of love and international brotherhood may be brought about in the world.

JEFFERSON'S 'WHIRL' IS CHAIR

Thomas Jefferson, statesman and president of the United States, is credited with the invention of the swivel chair, which he originated in 1780, that he might look in all directions at once. Although the newspapers of the date made fun of Jefferson's "whirling chair" it has proved a valuable discovery, as a modern business office can hardly be imagined without an ample supply of such chairs. Jefferson supervised the building of his famous mansion at Monticello, Virginia, and personally taught his Negro helper, carpentry and cabinetmaking in order that his unique ideas in architecture and furniture might be carried out successfully.

THE WORLD COURT

Do You Know What It Is? Would You Vote For It?

The Permanent Court of International Justice usually referred to as the World Court is the first actual court set up by the nations of the world in an attempt to substitute law for war as the method of settling international disputes.

It is a court of justice, not a court of arbitration but it is in a direct sense an outcome of the two Hague Conferences which established and developed the old Hague Court of Arbitration. Indeed, the American delegates to the two Hague Conferences, urged the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice similar in most essential features to the Court of Justice that actually came into being in 1920. The World Court is therefore, in a significant sense, an American idea.

Do you know that in rejecting the World Court, America deliberately placed herself in company with Germany, Russia, Turkey, and Mexico? For a powerful nation like the United States to refuse to cooperate in creating effective international agencies, but to manifest downright antagonism to such efforts, would prove to be nothing less than a calamity to the cause of world peace. With vast economic and financial resources, with not traditional hatreds, with less reason to be afraid because of the protection afforded by an ocean on either side, with great reserves of moral enthusiasm—with all these advantages, the United States could easily turn the tide against international anarchy and in favor of international organiza-

LITERARY COLUMN

Feeling a need for work of real literary value in our school paper, the stag has decided to conduct a Literary Column in The Rotunda. Knowing that there is literary talent among such a large group of students, we hope that this column will be the means of introducing to S. T. C. much worthwhile, hidden talent. In order that this new idea may not only prove popular but also be successful, in that its subject matter be truly literary, we are asking the cooperation of every member of the student body. The Rotunda is your paper, the Literary Column is to be your column; therefore, throughout your English courses or during idle moments remember that the column is ready and waiting for contributions.

THE STADIUM IN CHICAGO

The new stadium in Chicago is one of the largest amphitheatres in the world. It occupies more than seven acres of land and is planned to seat 100,000 people. It is built in the shape of a U, so that parades and pageants may enter it with unbroken columns. The open-air arena is equipped so that it can be flooded with water during the winter for ice-skating.

THE ROTUNDA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1925

NO. 7

DR. J. L. JARMAN S. T. C. PRESIDENT

Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, fourth President of the State Teachers College, was born in Charlottesville, Virginia, on the 19th day of November, 1867. His father, William Dabney Jarman, served in the Confederate Army, and his mother was Catherine Goodale Lindsay, of the well-known Lindsay family of Albemarle County.

His early education was obtained in the public schools of Charlottesville, and at the age of fourteen (having been left an orphan) he was sent to the Miller Manual Training School, where he remained from 1881 to 1886. In the competitive examination, he won the Miller Scholarship at the University of Virginia, where he was a student from 1885 to 1889, devoting himself especially to the natural and physical sciences.

Upon completion of the course at the University, he returned to Miller School as a member of the faculty, but remained there only one year as, at the end of that time, he was called to the chair of Natural Science at Emory and Henry College. He filled this position for twelve years, and left it in 1902, to take up work at Farmville.

During his stay at Emory and Henry College the degree of A. B. was conferred upon him by that institution and since he has been in Farmville. Hampden-Sidney College has honored him with the LL. D. degree. Within the past year Dr. Jarman has been elected to Phi Beta Kappa by the University of Virginia chapter, an honor that comes to alumni only after a prolonged period of distinguished service.

Dr. Jarman has been a member of many state and national organizations. However, his greatest contribution has been made in connection with the State Teachers College at Farmville. The history of the educational renaissance in Virginia which has taken place in the last thirty years is the history of the work of wise and courageous leaders, among whom Dr. Jarman ranks near the top.

The State Teachers College at Farmville, which is both a result and a cause of the movement for better education in the state, has had a conspicuous part in the development of education in Virginia. A good foundation was laid when Dr. Jarman became president in 1902, but it was only a beginning. From a relatively small school, doing high grade secondary-school work in the main, it has become a modern teachers college, with strictly professional courses, covering four years' work, with diversified types of work fitting students for many types of service in the state, and enrollment of over 900 students. It has been ranked by competent judges among the best normal schools in the country. This growth in the large is due to the foresight, careful planning, and energy of Dr. Jarman.

But an institution is more than buildings, courses, faculty, and students. Mere numbers and comparative

Joseph Leonard Jarman,

This man we all love is a wonderful man!
Through the State and the Nation he's known.
But is that why we love him? Ah, no! 'tis because His heart is as young as our own!

ARMISTICE DAY CELEBRATION

At half past three Wednesday afternoon, November 11, an impressive parade passed along High Street. All stores had been closed, and classes were discontinued in recognition of the exercises. S. T. C. girls lined the street in front of the college, while citizens flocked all along the way. With the Farmville Band leading and playing the procession followed in review—the Home Guard, the captured German gun, presented to Farmville American Legion; members of that unit, pupils of the High School, and Training School, and finally many automobiles flying the red, white and blue.

Both the crowd and procession halted at the corner of High Street and Appomattox where the exercises were opened with a prayer, rendered by the American Legion Chaplain, Dr. J. H. Cocks. At its conclusion all bowed their heads in thirty seconds silent devotional thought of those who gave the Supreme Offering. Then with a very appropriate talk, Judge Crute introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Honorable Aubrey Strode, of Lynchburg. Hon. Strode, with his forceful delivery and well chosen words succeeded in enlightening our minds much upon that uppermost question "What Is Armistice Day?" a day of memories and earnest resolves for peace world wide. His entire address met with a cordial response.

The band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner" which was wholeheartedly sung by the assembly.

BANKERS FOUND SCHOLARSHIPS

One hundred scholarships in universities and colleges of the United States are to be founded by the bankers of this country. That was decided at the fiftieth yearly convention of the American Bankers' Association, held at Atlantic City, N. J. The winners of the scholarships will specialize in economics.

The convention voted to raise a fund of $500,000 to establish the scholarships. One-half of that amount was pledged at the convention and the total will be ready soon. The founding of the scholarships is part of a plan to teach the American people how to save and invest their money systematically. The United States, as a nation, is too extravagant.

HARGRAVE TO LEAD FRESHMAN CLASS

FRESHMAN CLASS ELECTS OFFICERS

On Tuesday night, November 10, the Freshman class was called together by Virginia Vincent, president of the Junior class, for the purpose of electing its officers. As the class was found to contain an unusual amount of ability, it was rather difficult to make a choice of the nominees. Much discussion was made of each one.

The president was elected first, and Elizabeth Hargrave showed her ability to fill this office by conducting the election of the other officers in a capable manner. The results of the election were as follows:

President	Elizabeth Hargrave
Vice-President	Mattie Rogers Smith
Secretary	Virginia Burkes
Treasurer	Maude Baptiste

FRESHMAN COMMISSION

The following girls have been elected for the Freshman Commission: Ann Irving, Margaret Johnson, Virginia Hudson, Elizabeth Hargrave, Margaret Graham, Helen Wilcox, Ann Chapin, Sarah Brewer, Rachael Patten, Maude Baptiste, Virginia Boxley, Ann Mae Ellis, Josephine Lyne, Peggy Walton, Marjorie Westbrook, Gwendlyn Hardy, Anna Jones, Kitty Hatch, Mattie Rogers Smith, and Frances Willis.

The Freshman Commission was organized for the first time last year and it proved so successful that it has been adopted as a custom. The girls serving last year were willing and capable, and rendered great service to the Y. W. C. A. and to the college.

Therefore, each fall, twenty girls are chosen by the Freshmen to serve as a connecting link between the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet and the Freshman Class. One member of the Cabinet is especially responsible for this organization. The President of the Commission sets in the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet as an ex-officio member.

We wish to extend to this new Commission our best wishes for their success during the coming year. With such a group of girls, and with the entire Freshman class backing them, they can be nothing but a credit to our Y. W. C. A. and college.

LISTEN, FRESHMEN!

We have chosen for our leaders some of the finest characters within the walls of S. T. C.

"Runt" Hargrave is our president; Mattie Rogers Smith, Virginia Burkes and Maude Baptiste are our Lieutenants.

But what are the leaders without the army? They are absolutely helpless. You and I are the small atoms of which this "Rat" army is composed. Each one of us must realize that we form a connecting link in our great

WHY WE ARE THE BEST TEACHERS COLLEGE IN VIRGINIA.

"They tell me Farmville S. T. C. is the best teachers college in the State,—is that so?" Indeed it is. Best-in-every sense of the word, in equipment, faculty, girls, personality, and spirit. "Why?", you ask. The why is Dr. J. L. Jarman.

It is Dr. Jarman with his magnetic personality, his wonderful executive ability, his sweet smile and his big heart who has made our school what it is today.

It's great to be a dreamer,—ah yes, but far greater to make the dreams come true. Who dreamed of the Student Building? Who dreamed of conferring degrees from our platform? Who dreamed of a Student Body one thousand strong? These dreams of Dr. Jarman's have already come true but time alone will tell us of the dreams that float down the hall with the smoke of a certain cigar we know.

Dr. Jarman, many happy returns of the day, we hope you'll have many more. Each one of your girls on this your birthday give you a heart full of love and the nicest of birthday wishes.

THE IMPORTANCE OF ATHLETIC ACTIVITIES IN OUR COLLEGE.

Athletic activities play a very important part in our college life. In the different games that we play such as tennis, hockey and basketball, our muscles are put in good tone and our bodies are made strong. If one has a good healthy body he can think and study better and we all know that if we have strong bodies we are more likely to have strong minds. Habits of logical thinking and rational action are promoted and the capacity for further growth insured.

Athletic activity is an educational factor because it is of such a character as to require and train power of voluntary attention, a sharpened kinesthetic sense and the habit of quick and active response to motor stimuli. It demands motor control, speed, and quick thinking.

All colleges have athletic activities, and want to be on the same standard, if not a higher standard than other colleges. Be a good sport, and show your school spirit. Such a spirit will always be appreciated by a class and insure the hearty support and willing cooperation of all its members.

THE WRITER

There is something very important in the expressing of yourself upon paper. In the first place, you think more carefully, and you learn to express exactly what you think.

Writers, as a rule, are not so careless in their talking as those who never commit their thoughts to paper.

He who writes his thoughts out is all the time training his mind to see with his eyes. He is always looking for something more.

Thus the writer lives a much fuller life than the one who does not write. This does not mean that everyone should become a writer for pay, but a writer for improvement.

These daily talks are not written by one who claims to be any writer of note. He is just an everyday business man who began several years ago to write that he might improve his own thinking, and thereby express his thoughts in such a manner as to help others as he himself would like to be helped.

So that these Talks became a sort of daily diary in a way.

Since I have been writing I find myself watching people more closely, studying everything in nature with greater zest and taking greater pleasure in the written expressions of others.

Then, again, what is written becomes the best of a man's expression.

What a loss to life and literature had Joseph Conrad chosen to live out his life as a man of the sea and not committed to paper his powerful matchless thoughts. We have learned from his great books, what a great character he had. And now that he is gone we finger his books and look into the strong lined face and mustel courage for our daily tasks.

Only those attain eminence in writing who have something helpful to say. A message that is needed in this sick world.—G. M. Adams—Roanoke Times.

Mr. Frank Hoffman, a student of Hampden-Sidney college will speak on international affairs at Prayers Wednesday.

Miss Willie London was in Lynchburg last Friday to attend the installation of Dr. Meta Glass as President of Sweet Briar college.

RESEARCH WORK SUCCESSFUL

A few weeks ago Miss Gladys Taylor from New York, came to our college in order that our Alumni might help here in rural research work in Virginia communities in which they were teaching. A gratifying number indicated their willingness to do so.

The purpose of this work is to analyze communities into which our graduates go, with the idea of making definite recommendations to the college Y. W. C. A. that they may help students to fit themselves for communities into which they go to teach, and may afford an opportunity for self development.

We again take this opportunity to say how delighted we are that our college was one of the four in the United States to be chosen for such work.

"THE SWISS VILLAGE OF LAUFENBERG."

How many of us have noticed the beautiful picture in the lounge, entitled "The Swiss Village of Laufenberg"? I doubt if many of us have stopped and looked at it long enough to appreciate its real beauty. This picture is one of the gifts of the Degree Class of 1925.

This picture was painted by Colin Campbell Cooper, one of the greatest architectural painters of America. He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., 1856. He studied at the Philadelphia Academy of the Fine Arts, and the Julien and other academies of Paris. He was one of the first to give expression to the distinctive beauty of American cities, with their skyscrapers and manifold activities. A close observer, he reminds one, in his color and atmospheric effects of the impressionists. He also paints cathedrals and views of quaint German cities with feeling and charm.

"The Swiss Village of Laufenberg" represents Cooper's unique way of painting. His colors are rich, warm and glowing, which bring out the full effect of his pictures. I am sure we would appreciate the works of Cooper more if we would stop for only a moment and study one of his many works which we are fortunate in having. Audrine Lare

On Wednesday, November 12 the American Legion had a most enjoyable and attractive banquet in the college tea room. Autumn leaves and flags formed a beautiful background for the gala occasion. Places were laid for a hundred guests, who were all present. Favors and souvenirs were presented, and over the din of tiny horns the banquet came to a close.

"I HAVE A LITTLE ROOMMATE."

I had a little roommate
And she was wondrous wise,
My bed she stacks with brooms and tacks
And implements all size—

I had a little roommate
And she was tender, sweet,
My boxes flew, I never knew
A fairy so could eat!

I had a little roommate
Ye Gods,—she was in love—
She'd sigh, she'd pout—write verse about
Her "twin soul from above."

I had a little roommate
She could divinely snore,
This morn at three, I smothered she Now I can sing no more
"I HAVE A LITTLE ROOMMATE!"

BATH TUBS

There are tubs, tubs, and more tubs. There are large tubs, small tubs and medium sized tubs, but the tubs we see most often are bath tubs!

When we go into the bath rooms, how often do we hear this? "I wish someone would think to wash her tub after it has been used." A clean shining tub is most inviting and a bath in one is surely to be enjoyed, but the bath room is just like many other places in this little world of ours, someone has been thoughtless. It isn't the Home Department, because they have supplied brushes, brooms, washing powder, and, in fact everything; except that slightly dark rim around the inside of the tub!

Just remember that you are not the only one who uses bath tubs!

After my bath I dreamed last night
Something which gave me such a fright.

I thought that thru the bath room door,
I heard the unwashed bath tub roar.
"Hi you! Come here! What do you mean?"

I helped you wash all nice and clean,
And now you coolly turn your back:
And leave me here all streaked and black.

Whoever wants to use me next
Will, I am sure, be sorely vexed
At seeing this dark, dirty rim
That you have left behind for him.
Play fair, my son! Come give a rub
I'm your o'd friend, the faithful tub.

SILENCE IN THE LIBRARY

It is the little courtesies that make life sweet, after all is said and done. Nowhere may one find more opportunities for showing them in the library.

The town girl must do all her library work during the day. On "hard" days she has, perhaps, two hours to spend there. She rushes from class, fortunately finds her reference work still on the shelf, and settles down to work. A few minutes later two girls enter arm in arm and take their places at her table. Immediately an animated conversation begins. The town girl then pushes the little printed sign, "Consideration for others demands silence in the library" right between the two friends; the conversation is continued uninterruptedly right across it. The town girl looks about and selects another table.

Again deeply absorbed in her book, a steady popping and cracking persistently enforces itself upon her attention. Bewildered, she returns to full consciousness, to find at the end of her table two chewing gum fiends, well supplied with wads of gum and complacently cracking the same. She looks reproachfully at them; they return the gaze with a few extra pops. She gathers up her materials and looks about. On her right a steady humming like that of a thousand bees assails her. That is the table on which are two dictionaries, and over which swarm about twenty girls. The steady hum is broken occasionally by a shrill question with its accompanying answer, while chairs are excitedly pushed about and small sharp heels (Continued on last page)

LITERARY SOCIETIES

An open meeting of the literary societies was held Friday night when a final decision was made as to the position to be held by these organizations at S. T. C., feeling that the interest among the members of the various societies was not what it should be it was at first thought that the societies should disband to form two more active societies, or that a change of some kind should be made. The final decision is to continue along the same lines having a standard of excellence and a standard attendance in each society.

Why should there be the feeling that there has been at S. T. C. in regards to literary societies? They are worth-while organizations. They raise the standards of our school; why should we not interest ourselves in their growth? Literary societies play an important part in the life of other colleges—why should not we make them a part of our life at S. T. C.

This year will probably decide the future position of literary societies in our school, and it is up to every member to raise the standard of her society. Are you willing to do your part?

No upper classman can say that we haven't the pep, the ability and the determination to win.

Then, there is our sportsmanship. Who can deny the fact that we were good sports when the "Sophs" challenged us to the gauntlet?

Keep up that good spirit, classmates. Don't crawl up in the wagon and ride while "Runt" pulls, but give her your support while carrying the load.

Let's make this the greatest Freshman class whose voices ever echoed through the halls of S. T. C.

Come on; "Runt", the Freshmen are betting on you, and are eager to fight with you, and for you, in our army of "Rats."

statistics do not begin to describe the State Teachers College, or the work of Dr. Jarman in developing the Teachers College. The biggest thing in S. T. C., after all is its peculiar and distinctive spirit. It cannot be described in words. It can be felt only. Students here gain more than a knowledge of the textbooks and training in teaching. There is an indefinable atmosphere about the school that affects in a marked way the character and personality of Farmville folks. This intangible, stimulating, and character-forming force is probably the greatest thing about the school. This force, emanating from and passing to faculty and students alike, finds its source in the spirit and attitude of Dr. Jarman.

In spite of his constructive educational work, his contribution to the educational development of the state, honors received at home and in various parts of the country, the greatest thing about Dr. Jarman is his loving, sympathetic personality.

One example of eternal love is the Irishman who wrote home from Scotland to his sweetheart: "Yours 'till I get a raise."

THE ROTUNDA, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1925

NO. 8

FAMOUS OXFORD SPEAKER AT STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

John Cowper Powys, N. A. a brilliant English novelist, poet and essayist, former staff lecturer of the Extension Societies by Oxford and Cambridge Universities and author of Suspended Judgment, Visions, and Revisions, Wood and St., Rodmone, Wolf's Bane, Mandragora, The Complex Vision, Sapphire, One Hundred Best Books, and Psychoanalysis and Morality, lectured at S. T. C. Nov. 19, on The Study of Poetry.

In the course of this lecture, Mr. Powys brought out the idea that poetry is something belonging to private life—more like a love affair than like a study; and it is unfair to this great and beautiful goddess to treat it in any other way than as something secret, belonging to our inmost selves—a thing from which we may get in any mood, comfort, and consolation.

The Oxford Blood of English Verse, contains the quintessence of English poetry and Mr. Powys urged us to become familiar with it and change it into a Farmville Book of Verse.

In life we have moments of happiness then come moments when nature gives us a thrill; moments we are indescribably happy. Poetry does at least two things for us, it reconciles us to life, and helps us escape from life. Poetry is a mysterious, divine power and spirit.

He also urged us to make the old poets a part of our life. To Mr. Powys, Shakespeare is decidedly the greatest English poet. He has many weaknesses, but we find him most apt in portraying events and occurrences of daily life. He has written poetry to suit every mood.

According to Mr. Powys the second greatest English poet is John Milton. He is peculiarly masculine and expresses the masculine desire to escape from women. Mr. Powys preferred more single thoughts and verses in Paradise Lost, Paradise Regained, and Lucids than in any of his poetry as a whole.

In his classification J. W. P. placed third. We read Keats' passionate beauty. Keats' "Ode on a Grecian Urn" "Beauty is truth, truth beauty, That is all we know and all we need to know."

Mr. Powys said, "Keats had believed that flowers could feel and that trees could feel, and I more than half believe it myself."

Concerning Shelley Mr. Powys said that no poet is so beautiful nor so staid. His description of white violets, white narcissus, and white death are so beautiful yet so delicate.

The fifth great English poet is Alfred Lord Tennyson. Mr. Powys spoke of Tennyson as his boyhood favorite. Among his poems, The Lady of Shalott, Loxly Hall, and others had a strong appeal to him in his youth.

William Blake, the mystic; the greatest of all mysteries in English poetry is one of the speaker's peculiar favorites.

Leaving the old English Poets, Mr. Powys then classified modern poets and quoted from many of them. He told of two modern English poets, Walter De La Mare who has written Peacock's Pie, and the novel, The Memiors of a Midget, and William Butler Yeats, an Irishman, who wrote among other things, The Hour Glass and The Land of Heart's Desire.

Edgar Lee Masters was classified first among the modern American poets. His works are found in Spoon River Anthology. This unique book is sardonic, it has dry humor, it is unhappy and tragic, yet it has a kind of hope. He is like Walt Whitman in that he has no meter and no rhyme

MR. FRANK HOFFMAN SPEAKS AT PRAYERS WEDNESDAY

Mr. Frank Hoffman, a student at Hampden-Sidney College, spoke to us at Prayers last Wednesday evening. His subject was "International Friendship."

He showed how years ago each plantation in America was a neighborhood in itself, raising all necessary goods doing its own repair work, and conducting its own affairs in general. However, during and after the Civil War, inventions and discoveries brought the North and South of our own country into closer communication, and finally joined the United States with great, foreign world powers. "Today," stated Mr. Hoffman, "the world is our neighborhood. We can no longer be citizens of a State or country but of the world." Foreign countries are calling for our aid to help establish international friendship in the world. What are we present students and future citizens, going to do about it? Let us take Christ as our example of brotherly love and friendship, and do our part to establish the Kingdom of God on earth and to carry out God's law of love."

Forewarned

"If I had known what a fool you were I would never have married you," stormed Mrs. Knaggs.
"You might have guessed it, my dear, when I proposed to you," protested her spouse mildly.

MUSICAL MUSINGS

What does music mean to most of us? No question could be harder to answer, for music, like Nature, speaks a "various language." Music is as much of an outlet as literature, according to Dr. C. Alphonso Smith. Composers have poured forth their deep and powerful emotions in the measured bars of the world's great musical compositions. Musicians have put their hearts in to the execution of these masterpieces, selecting their programs to suit their moods. Audiences have listened to the masterpieces of the composers, as interpreted by musicians, and have been swayed by the same emotions, seeing their thoughts and sentiments translated into melody.

Music stands for the best to most of us. We often liken the finest things to it. How often have we compared a dear voice to music! How often have we said, "That news is music to my ears!" How often have we referred to a beautiful life as a song! Harmony, a musical term, is synonymous with peace and used only in a complimentary sense.

As music stands for something good to us, we expect those whom we deem noble, good and worth while, to love it. We, like Shakespeare, distrust the "man who has no music in his soul." Every truly great person loves or has loved some particular bit of music, whether it be an old song, a pleasant air, or a more intricate composition. How many "favorite hymns" of the great have been handed down to us!

We seize upon music to do many things for us. There is some tune or melody for every emotion or mood that comes our way. The great operas are a proof of this for they express whole stories, involved plots in song; the air in every case giving the first clue to what is happening or being felt. One of the best examples of this is the quartet from "Rigoletto." We hear the father pleading with his daughter, her protesting replies, trying to tell the best of her lover, under this we hear the voice of that lover as he responds to the call of the woman who is enchanting him. All these forces expressed in one bit of harmony! That is grand opera, with which all of us are not on familiar terms, so let us think of simpler airs. Who could not become pleasantly reminiscent over "Souvenir"? Is there anyone who has something sadly sweet to remember, who does not feel memories come softly back at the call of "Love's Old Sweet Song"? Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" puts us all in a festive mood, while "Glory and Love to the Men of Old" makes shoulders straighten and the feet quicken in martial tread. And so on through hundreds of songs. Music, when we try to analyze ourselves, is a vital and integral part of our beings. We cannot imagine ourselves without music, because we cannot be without it. It is universal and eternal. It will be with us as long as a cricket chirps, or a bee hums, as long as the wind stirs Aeolian melodies in the trees, or a bird carols on a limb, as long as the voices of children chatter or a mother croons over her young one, as long as the mighty spheres revolve in perfect union, and harmony, and as long as the human heart strings are touched by any emotion.

THE BEGINNING OF OUR MUSIC

When we go to operas or hear music of any kind, I wonder how many of us stop to think how it began and how it has been handed down to us? Yet it is very important that we should know what other nations and people have done so we can appreciate the music we have today.

Music is a part of man's nature. It is a way by which he can express his feelings which he cannot express in other ways. Even the savages have some sort of music.

The Chinese claim that music began in their country 3000 years before the birth of Christ. They had a scale and gave each note an odd name. They believed in eight sounding bodies and made their instruments out of these. Some of the instruments are k'in, the flute, harp, king, shing, drum and others. They were satisfied with their music and did not try to improve it.

It was from the Greeks, who lived before Christ, that modern Europe got its foundation of music. The people got familiar with it at the open performances where they had music. The music was as important to them as art, poetry and culture. They had the chromatic scale, which is very much like our minor scale of today. They had seven scales and gave each a queer name. Their instruments were the lyre, their standard instrument, flute, harp, and others.

The next step in the development of music is what the church workers did. The church was trying to bring the nations of Europe from Pagan beliefs to Christian, so they built schools and cathedrals. The head of the church was at Rome and that accounts for so many of the musical teams being in the Italian language. They also saved the best in the Greek learning. Their scales were simpler than the Greek. The music they used was the Gregorian style which we use today. We get our syllables: do, re, mi, etc., from an old Latin hymn. The first syllable was taken from each line.

The next period of music is very interesting. Instead of religious music there were love songs and tales of bravery. The Troubadours and Trouveres, which mean discoverers of new poems or melodies, came from southern and northern France. They wrote love songs and about brave deeds and played them under their ladies' windows. It is said that the folk songs came from them.

Now let us see how music was written. The oldest way was the letters of the alphabet were placed in different positions to represent different sounds.

Then the neumes, which were signs placed above the syllables to tell how low or high pitch was, were used. Later the pitch was shown by placing the words on parallel lines and by colored lines. Then they placed the notes far apart or close together to tell the length of the sound of the note.

The treble and bass clefs come from two old Latin letters, G and F.

John Dunstable was the first one to write polyphonic music and Dufay was the first one to use the canon. Lasso wrote over twenty-five hundred compositions. All of these were great musicians, but the greatest of them in

MEMORIES OF BLUE RIDGE

May I tell you something about Blue Ridge? Blue Ridge is the official conference grounds for the southern colleges. This past summer it held its fourteenth conference. To tell you how beautiful it is I cannot, but this is just a hazy picture which I hope will give you an idea of how Blue Ridge looks. There are fifty white buildings scattered here and there nestling up in the mountains. From the porch of the main building, Robert E. Lee Hall, we look out over the spacious grounds sloping toward the entrance. Glancing around we see the mountains rising above us and way into the distance; before us is Mt. Mitchell. Over us hang the clouds so near that we want to reach up and touch them. Everything about us is beautiful and awe-inspiring.

Then it came to me that if S. T. C.'s soul for music should be inspired more and more here was my chance to find a newer, broader, and more beautiful way in which our Glee Club might begin. Someone must have known what was on my mind, for the choral club was suggested. I thought, "that is just what we want. Our Glee Club can't possibly take in all the girls who have good voices." Then the suggestion of singing in chapel was offered. Another report, thinking of the social life, suggested entertaining. To my great delight we have accepted the suggestions of having a choral club and to sing in chapel. Will we entertain? Well, I think most of our Glee Club girls are looking forward to this.

When I think of Blue Ridge and what it means to me, I wish that every girl at the college might go, for here one sees, feels, and hears the beautiful.

"Music is love, seeking a way of life." May our Glee Club, through its efforts, find the way of life and love for music; and inspire and lead S. T. C. forward with a broader, deeper, richer appreciation and love for music.

that age was Palestrina.

Palestrina was born in 1526, some say 1514, in Palestrina, near Rome. That is how he got his name. At fourteen he went to Rome to study music. In 1544 he returned home as organist in his church. Four years later he was called as choirmaster to St. Peter's in Rome. In 1565 he supplied music for the Papal Chapel.

While he was at Rome he tried to found a music school, which never produced an great musicians, because it was at this time when the Reformation began and carried the music into other channels.

Palestrina is called the "Savior of Church Music", for in the sixteenth century, when the church music had deteriorated, he composed a mass called Pope Marcellus, which was of high order. He also placed the music of the Latin church on so high a plane that no composers, until the time of Bach, equalled him.

Palestrina wrote all his work in the polyphonic mode. There are about 33 large volumes of his works and they must be heard by a good choir to be appreciated. He did not go by the music law which so many did, but the beauty of the composition was his first thought.

A WORLD WITHOUT MUSIC

Have you ever stopped to consider the real importance of music? Perhaps you would if, through experience, you could live for awhile at least in a world without music. In such a world a commonplace day would pass as follows: You gaze out of your window one bright morning to see approaching an organ grinder smiling and bowing. Upon his shoulder perches the red-coated monkey, joyfully awaiting the turn of the heavy melodious organ. The foreigner sees you, bows and scrapes, and immediately halts beneath your window. The stage is set; the monkey is ready, the grinder is ready, but the organ is not ready at all. Not even a single note breaks the stillness—disappointment reigns. That afternoon you attend a dancette, thrilled with the expectation of dancing to the well known foreign orchestra. The stage is set; beautiful ball-room, shiny floors, wonderful dancers, but your heart sinks—a telegram is read by the hostess, "Arrival impossible—storm prevents landing." Again your craving for music has been denied. You leave and wander aimlessly along yearning for music until you pass a church brightly illuminated with many candles—a wedding will soon take place. You enter; here at least you will hear music—but what happens? The organist is ill—he cannot play—there is no music. You sink limply into your seat and then you once more find yourself in the street with a look of grim determination on your face. On to a moving picture theatre you go—perhaps the inner player might drive away the blues. You enter. Upon the screen as you walk down the aisle is flashed the following notice: "Piano out of order. No music tonight." Turning a right about face you soon find yourself in the street. The silence is unbearable. Can there be no music anywhere? Listlessly you trudge home, and crawling into bed you pray that a bird might awaken you with his song in the morning. What would life be without music?

HARMONY IN DISCORD

One thing I cannot understand
No matter how I try and puzzle
My mind gets more into a muddle
Because I see on every hand
The artists who o'er flow our land
(They say they don't come "for mere money")
And tho' they live not in harmony
With one another, all the time
Their names consistently do rhyme.
For there's Madeline Keltie and Juliette Velty,
And Michel Plastro & Oscar Nicastro
And Greta Torpadie and Rosza Varady
Arturo Bonucci and Gino Nastrocci,
Sergei Pavloska, Lydia Lipowska,
Giamomo Riminali, Pietro Cimmi,
Margaret Selinsky, Vladimir Dubinsky,
Enrichetta Onelli and Richard Bonelli,
Charles Wakefield Cadman, also Royal Dadmun,
And Geraldine Farrar, Marguerite Namara,
Marie Jeritza, also Germaine Schnitz,
August Lincka and Zabetta Brensku,
And G. Martinelli and Rosa Ponselle.
Oh! their name is legion, but what would know
The question that vexes and puzzles me so
When they live in disharmony most of the time
Why in the dickens do most of their names rhyme?

CHAPEL ON SATURDAYS

The chapel committee has made chapel on Saturday mornings so interesting that the auditorium is crowded to overflowing. The music department has charge and the students, as well as the faculty, are anxious for each Saturday to come to hear the good music.

The first Saturday Dr. Jarman sang two beautiful numbers. They were "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "Duna". There is no need to say how much they were enjoyed. The applause did that.

The next Saturday, Mrs. King sang for us. Could anything have been nicer? She sang "Loita", "Deep River", "Animal Crackers", "The Singer", and "Little Woman O' Mine."

The Choral Club made its first appearance last Saturday at the chapel hour. Girls, can't they sing?

Oh, Promise Me

(As it might be sung today)

Oh, promise me that some day you will try

To make, as mother did, an apple pie
That I can eat and not bid life adieu
Because the crust required an ax to hew!

The first green apples, dear of early spring,
With longing in my heart to you I bring;
And voice my earnest wish on bended knee
Oh, promise me; oh, promise me!

Oh promise me that you will turn your hand
To gaining renown in this busy land,
That your fair name be lauded to the skies
As mistress in the Art of Baking Pies.
Hearing your praises as they onward roll!
'Twill sound as music to my very soul
Ah love! how perfect will be life with thee!
Oh, promise me; oh, promise me!

to his poetry.

Vachel Lindsey was second among the modern American poets. He gets much of his mythopoeic imagination from the colored race.

Edna St. Vincent Millay, a Vassar student, ranks third, in Mr. Powys estimation. He said that she is sad but honest and writes from her heart, whether good, bad, or indifferent. She has a real genius for lyrical poetry.

Fourth among the modern American poets is Edward Arlington Robinson. His little poems are complicated and very reserved. He has made his living entirely by his poetry and is recognized as the most polished of American poets.

And last in this classification Mr. Powys places one who writes very fantastically and sophisticatedly, Mr. Wallace Stephens, Esquire, a lawyer and poet. He has written, A Cortege for Rosenbloom and Peter Quince at the Claytor. His poems are collected in a volume called Harmonia.

Mr. Powys ended his most entertaining and helpful lecture by urging us not to neglect poetry; but to read and study it—not for the sake of our studies, a certificate or a degree, nor even for life, but for the poetry itself.

The stingiest man in the world is the one who brought his bride nickel's worth of peppermint candy and took her on a trolley ride honeymoon. When they got off the car he said: "Honey, suppose we save the rest of this candy for the children?" Ex.

HOW MEAL-TIME MUSIC GREW INTO THE SYMPHONY

"No music during meals!"

That is the legend that hangs above the doorway of a certain restaurant. It is a rule you think. Suppose that had always been the rule, what effect would it have had on our music today? One thing is fairly certain. We should never have had the symphony or the sonata—and perhaps we should never even have heard of Haydn.

When Joseph Haydn was born in the little Austrian village of Rohran in 1732, the country was divided into small states governed by princes and dukes who had their own courts and a permanent band of musicians besides. Joseph was the son of poor peasants, the eldest of eleven brothers and sisters, so that although he showed his talents very early there was too little money to spare any for his education. When his mother and father, who were both musical, played and sang the folk songs, Joseph would pretend he was playing a fiddle, and his mother would say, "See, the boy is musical. Perhaps some day he will become great and go to court."

When Joseph was only a small boy, a cousin visited his home and offered to take him home to Hainburg and train him for a musician. Two years later, he was heard singing by an organist. He was "tried out," and was selected to sing in the choir at St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna.

Nine years later, having proved a failure in the choir, he was in a bare attic, playing on a very small harpsichord. He was playing some music of Emmanuel Bach, the great Bach's son. Outside, the rain beat on the roof; inside, it dripped through the ceiling and ran down the walls, forming pools on the floor. Did Joseph Haydn realize this? No, for he had just made a wonderful discovery!

"Mighty music for mighty men!" This had been the message of John Sebastian Bach to his generation. Times have changed. "Lighter music for lighter times," was the present cry. Emmanuel Bach spoke to the people of his time through tunes of this sort. His music had definite tunes, a definite form and definite contrasts of key, which gave it variety and made it easy to follow. This was the discovery Haydn had made.

When, at last he arose, he was conscious of having moved one step farther on toward his career. For here was the form which he was in after years to expand in those works which have made him known as the father of the symphony.

Haydn was nearly thirty when he became concert director to Prince Anton Esterhazy, and shortly afterwards he took a similar position with Prince Nicholas, his brother. This prince was very fond of music, so Haydn took this opportunity to compose some pieces and experiment with the orchestra.

Audiences came not to listen to music, but to other things, to which music made an attractive background. One of the most popular of these was eating! It was the custom to have meals at mealtime in all the grand houses, and the symphonies of Haydn were first heard to the accompaniment of a buzz of conversation and the cheerful clatter of knives, forks and plates! Haydn had to adopt a clear, definite form for these works, with very obvious divisions between the different sections, or his music would never have been followed by an unheeding audience of dinner-party guests.

"The party waxed merry."

"Must have been tough on poor Mary."

The guests this past week-end were as follows:

Dodie Shoffner
Luch Barnett
Kitty Carroll
Nancy Huit
Rene Luck
Mary Spiggle
Julia Clarke Saunders

ORATORIO

An oratorio form embodies the same mode of construction as an opera—it is built of recitatives and arias for solo voices (singly and concerted) as of choral and instrumental numbers. In oratorios the text is taken from scriptural or sacred sources—one treat event or series of consequent incidents and lines of thought are followed out as consistently as possible. Idealism rather than realism is aimed at.

The oratorio is not without dramatic and personal tendencies. It is referred to as "the highest form of musical dramatic art, in the sense that it possesses as foundation and contents the deepest and loftiest ideas of Christian religious and moral life. Its heroes and heroines are the ideal instruments and messengers of divinity. Their struggles, their triumphs are those of high and noble souls."

The oratorio has been compared to a cathedral. Its foundation and paving is the orchestra; its masonry, pillars, and lofty roof, the chorus work; while the "storied windows richly light," the marble pulpit, altar and front, represent the solo, or solo-concerted numbers, each a gem of tone-constructive art. Just as the cathedral is one of the biggest triumphs of the designer's and builder's art so the oratorio is in the front rank of all that is noble and exalted in the output of the creative musician. The stability of first-class oratorio music is proved in the most conclusive way by the familiarity of all classes of hearers with such works as Handel's "Messiah" and Mendelssohn's "Elijah."

A WISH

When day is over and evening
Comes with her calm peaceful rest,
Mine be some sweet tender music
To lighten the cares of my breast.

When death comes at life's weary evening
And earth takes me back to her sway,
Mine be a grave where some river
Will murmur sweet music for aye.

The choir was rehearsing a new setting of "Onward Christian Soldiers," for the Sunday School anniversary. At verse three the choir master said:

"Now remember, only the trebles sing down to the 'gates of hell,' and then you all come in."

First: "I've just been reading some statistics here—every time I breathe a man dies."

THE STADIUM IN CHICAGO

The new stadium in Chicago is one of the largest amphitheatres in the world. It occupies more than seven acres of land and is planned to seat 100,000 people. It is built in the shape of a U, so that parades and pageants may enter it with unbroken columns. The open-air arena is equipped so that it can be flooded with water during the winter for ice-skating.

State Teachers College, Farmville, was represented at the Virginia State Teachers Association, Norfolk, by the following faculty members:

Dr. J. L. Jarman, president, addressed the conference on "Extra-Curricular Activities"; Dr. J. E. Walmsley, head of the department of history, addressed the Department of History on "The History Teacher's Declaration of rights"; Miss Sarah B. Tucker, associate professor of history, also gave a report to the history section on "Vital Points to History Teachers," gleaned from the meeting of the American Historical Association which met in Richmond last year; Miss Ilma Von Schilling addressed the rural section on "Project Method of Teaching Geography in Rural Schools."

Other members of the faculty who attended were Misses Pauline Camper, Katharine Tupper, Estelle Smith, Olive Iler, Grace Mix, Mary P. Jones, Ada Bierbower, and Martha W. Coulting.

FACULTY ATTEND CONFERENCE AT COLUMBIA

Miss Lila London, of the department of mathematics; Miss Mary Clay Hiner, of the department of English; and Miss Myrtle Genaels, of the department of Geography, are attending a conference at Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, regarding work on courses of study for normal schools.

FARMVILLE SPIRIT

I wonder if there was a single girl in school this week who did not feel what might be called the "Farmville spirit." At no other time during the year is our spirit shown more plainly than now. The excitement, pep, enthusiasm or whatever you choose to call it, started bubbling over Tuesday. At every meal in the dining room we heard an announcement something like this, "there will be a joint 'pep' meeting of the Freshman-Junior classes in the auditorium after breakfast, dinner or supper"—while immediately after it followed an announcement that the Sophomores and Seniors would do their yelling in the Recreation Hall.

Ah! then came Wednesday. Long before the rising bell, in fact it was hardly light, when from every direction across the campus came hurrying figures. Down every pair of steps you could hear someone running for fear she would be late—but why? Thanksgiving wasn't until Thursday and we couldn't hang colors before hand. Here's the answer. The Freshmen enthusiasm was about to bubble over and they wanted to all be together for the grand bubbling.

HONORARY MEMBER OF FRESHMAN CLASS

MISS OLIVE ILER

MISS OLIVE ILER

Miss Olive T. Iler was presented by the Freshmen on Thursday, November 19th, as their class member.

Miss Iler is the Physical Education teacher for the Freshman Class. She was a member of the class of 1919 of Sargent's School for Physical Education in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

For one year she was the physical instructor at Chevy Chase School for Girls. She comes to S. T. C. from Baltimore, where she was supervisor of the Play-ground Athletic League for girls during school and after school.

As Miss Iler's work has been with girls, the Freshman Class feels that in selecting her for class member, they have a sympathetic as well as wise advisor.

SYMPATHY TO MISS BARLOW

The student body is grieved to learn of the death of Miss Barlow's mother. It extends its deepest sympathy.

NOTICE

The faculty is complaining of not receiving The Rotunda. A paper is put in each box every week and evidently thoughtless girls are taking them out. Please do not take Rotundas from the faculty post office. The faculty pays $1.50 for a subscription just as you do.

MISS ILER PRESENTED AS FRESHMAN MAN

Freshman Presentation Furnishes a Unique and Attractive Chapel Program

On Thursday morning, November 19, the Freshman Class conducted their class day and presentation exercises in a peppy and unusual manner.

The Pied Piper was present, not Browning's Piper, but the Piper of the Freshman Class, Miss Phyllis Pedigo, and at the sound of a few notes on her pipe, the Rats came tumbling: "Great rats, small rats, lean rats, brawny rats."

All of them dressed in white and crowned with their dignified rat-caps, and each one singing lustily, "We're Senior Bound."

After all the Rats were settled and quiet, the Freshman President, Miss Elizabeth Hargrave, escorted Miss Iler, the honorary member up to her white and green decorated chair. After which Mebane Hinn led the class in "So Give Us Miss Iler," and "Let Us Tell Miss Iler."

The day being Dr. Jarman's birthday the entire student body arose and greeted him with "Happy Birthday to You," and "What's the matter with Jarman?"

Then regular devotional exercises were conducted, immediately following which a cord was struck, and the Freshmen arose and sang, "We'll Take Miss Iler."

SOPHOMORES AND JUNIORS WIN THANKSGIVING DAY GAMES

Freshmen Bow to Sophomores 36-19

Thursday, in a fast, clean game the Sophomores won the first basketball game of the season from the Freshmen with a score of 36-19.

The first half gave promise to neither side for victory as the first quarter ended with a score of 5-4 in favor of the Freshmen and the second quarter closed with the Sophomores two points in the lead with 14-12 as the score. Although the teams were evenly matched during the first half the Sophomores outplayed the "rats" during the entire second quarter pulling the score to 22-14 at the end of the third quarter and 36-19 as the final score. No one Sophomore could be picked as the best player because the team's strongest point was the way they succeeded in carrying out signals and passing the ball down the floor to the forwards who always did their part to "pile up the score."

The same could be said of the Freshmen who fought to the end and made the Sophomores work for every point they gained.

The line-up:

Freshmen	Position	Sophomores
Bryant	F	Perkins
Orgain	F	Hall
Hardy	J. C.	Mitchell
Hargrave	S. C.	Woodson
Whitehurst	G	Smith
Jones, D.	G	Jones, P.

Substitutions—Sophomores: Taylor for Woodson, Crowder for Smith. Freshmen: Burch for Bryant, Bryant for Orgain, Jarman for Hardy.

Referee: Miss Branche E. O. Gram.

RED AND WHITE DEFEAT ALUM. NAE 22-19

Friday night the old girls who were mostly girls of a green and white class played the Seniors in a close, interesting, but loosely played basketball game. Although the alumnae put up a hard fight they were defeated by the Senior Class with a score of 22-19.

On the Alumnae team McKenney proved to be the outstanding player. She made several goals some distance from the center of the forward territory.

Fowlkes, a Sophomore borrowed by the seniors, also played a good game.

The line-up was as follows.

Alumnae	Position	Seniors
Shotwell, E.	F	Gibson
McKenney, E.	F	Fowlkes
Hall, C.	J. C.	Wright
Morgan, K.	R. C.	Woodson
Parson, G.	G	Boyd
Cox, D.	G	Crowder

Substitutions — Seniors: Woodson for Fowlkes, Fowlkes for Woodson, Wright for Boyd, Boyd for Wright.

Referee: Virginia Perkins; Umpire, Eleanor Zacharias.

Juniors Walk Over Seniors 16-2

The Juniors won from the Seniors in a loose, amusing game with a score of 16-2. With White and Gary as the Junior guards the Seniors were seldom given a chance to make a goal. However, Wright and Bowman upheld the red and white by intercepting many Junior passes and by checking numerous attempts for goals. The guards proved to be the strongest positions on the team and were responsible to a large extent for the score being held 16-2.

The line-up was as follows:

Juniors	Position	Seniors
Vincent	F	Boyd
Crite	F	Bugg
Lohr	J. C.	Whaley
Brower	S. C.	Smith, A.
White	G	Wright
Gary	G	Bowman

Substitutions—Juniors: Rucker for Vincent.

The total score for the Red and White or "even" classes was 38, while the Green and White or "odd" classes made a total score of 35. This victory for Red and White gave the Sophomore and Senior classes the privilege of decorating the Rotunda with their colors.

FRESHMEN ELECT REPRESENTATIVES TO STUDENT COMMITTEE

At a very short but important meeting of the Freshman Class Friday, November 27th, the following girls were chosen to represent the Freshman Class on the Student Committee:

Mattie Rodgers Smith
Joe Lyon
Maude Baptiste
Margaret Johnston
Gladys Huban
Rachael Patton

An announcement was made of the Alumni Carnival in which the Freshmen are to participate. Suggestions were asked for plans of presentation. The President then extended to the Freshmen, on behalf of the Junior Class, an invitation to a party given Saturday, November 28th.

On motion the meeting was adjourned.

There are numbers of offices left out which take considerable time and ability to carry out which are not listed. Among them are the following: Offices in Kindergarten Union Club, Offices of County Clubs, Representatives of Student Government, Committee members of Y. W. C. A., The Rotunda Reporters, Typists, Assistant editors, and Proof Reader. The Virginian: Circulation manager, Photographic manager, Advertising manager, and the Typists. Vice-presidents of classes, The Dramatic Club president, Vice-president, Business manager, Property manager, and Costume mistress. Membership in any organization should be credited.

From a study of a point system can be seen many weaknesses.
For example one girl could be president of the Athletic Association (Whose membership is nine hundred) and assistant editor of The Rotunda. A student could be secretary of the Y. W. C. A., secretary of the Degree class, and president of a literary society.
This sounds insane, but such conditions exist here. There are numbers of girls who have several points over the supposed limit.

In any college the members of the Dramatic Club are also members of other organizations in the school. This stands to reason, when the qualities of a member of the Dramatic Club are pointed out, for they are in many cases the same abilities needed in a girl to hold other offices in the school. In a few cases the Dramatic Club is the organization that developed the girl for other offices. Is it fair, or logical, that a girl who holds an eight or ten point office in the school, should resign from the Dramatic Club?
It must be remembered that when the points are given it is for the time served, and during play rehearsals is the time the Dramatic Club points are guessed at. Some of the same points can apply to the Glee Club.

The question is how can anyone determine the number of points to be given to an office? With the greatest effort a girl could hardly keep an accurate account of all the time she gave to an office. From the point system's view there are only three major offices in the school. A casual observer could see this condition not to be true.
The point system is full of errors from beginning to end. The only way for an accurate system of points to be listed would be for each officer in the school to give an account of all the time spent in filling an office, which would be almost impossible. The question of how the office was filled would also have to enter into the matter. From every point of view the point system seems to be a failure. Careful study of it will convince anyone.

A college girl can judge the amount of outside work she can carry. Do the students impose upon one girl and give her more than she can do. In many cases they do. There is a tendency to pile work on the workers. The new student writes as follows: "Behind the multiplicity of college activities stand two or three generals, issuing orders and pulling strings. At the expense of their studies they carry the burden of directing the extra curricula uproar." This is so often true, a student often neglects her studies for outside activity. Every girl should take part in school activities for the good of the school, and for the development of citizenship that does not come out in any other way at school.
Service to others is the greatest work one can render in life. To lead others, one must first serve. It is not the list of offices we hold that show our loyalty, but the every day services we render to our school and to each other.

In a student body of nine hundred there is a girl for every office and an office for every girl, so let us try to remember, when at meetings, to think over what the girl who is nominated, already has to do, and not embarrass her by urging her to accept another office. A girl should have the courage to stand up and tell what she already does and ask to be excused. However, this has never been practiced here, and girls go on and accept more than they can do for fear some will say she just does not want to serve. The whole situation is due, largely to thoughtlessness, and the old tendency to give the work to the same group of girls. We do not need any point system to guide us, but just a little more thought on the part of the group and the individual. In a short while, it will be just conventional for a student not to be involved in more outside work than she can do and for an organization to carefully consider the appointments to offices. Organizations will not deteriorate and students will accomplish more in all their work.

JOAN SAYS—

I am afraid Prince Charming would have been mightily disappointed had he come to S. T. C. Wednesday night, for the sleeping Beauties were very scarce—not that there weren't Beauties galore, but none of them were sleeping. Who could sleep the night before the biggest game of the year was to be played. When the green and the red would vie for supremacy. Throughout the whole night could be heard suppressed giggles and whispers and the atmosphere which prevailed the whole school was one of mystery and suspense. The Rotunda had been decorated for my benefit—on one side was the green and white, while on the other the red and white and above me uniting the red and green was the True Blue of S. T. C. At the first clap of the six o'clock bell Thursday morning the day began and a happy one it was too. But what put more color into this Red letter day for me was the number of old girls back. As a mother longs for her children, so I long for my girls who have gone out into the world. These girls came back and displayed a spirit that made the bearers of their colors hold them higher and fight for them with more vim. Girls it is you who make the spirit of Farmville but old girls, it's you who makes Farmville live. Alumnae, it is your spirit, your loyalty, that has given us a standard to live up to. The gift for which I was most thankful on this Thanksgiving Day was the return of so many old girls, who still held in their hearts the love of the Blue and White—
May we carry on that love.

Farmville Spirit

So all over school from Infirmary to White House and from the first floor S. B. to the top went the long line of Freshman, singing and dancing as they went. Such spirit, first cheering themselves and then the Sophs, they showed they too had caught not only class spirit but the spirit of S. T. C.

All day long Wednesday excited little groups could be seen, whispering together, someone all the while keeping a sharp lookout to be sure no enemy was in the territory. Conferences were held in front of the building while everyone stood and gazed soulfully at the roof, the flag pole and each entrance. If you chanced to go by you might have heard a remark such as this, "Don't keep on looking at it, you know people around here have some sense. Sh! someone's looking out the window. Turn around quick, here they come!"

At 5:30 the campus was a lovely spot, for all the Seniors and Sophomores dressed in red and white gathered on the campus and did some cheering. They started with the bugle blowing taps. They, too snake dancel and found a bridge of red and white under which everyone walked into the dining room.

Wednesday night! Shall we ever forget it? Footsteps on the roof, running and whispering down the hall, ropes swinging from mysterious places! Every girl had a secret, which she hugged her heart. The class representatives were almost overwhelmed at the offers of help while they decorated the Rotunda. The spirit held in!

The 5:45, 11 o'clock and 1 o'clock trains brought back alumnae, everyone of them were made to feel before they were inside the door, the school had missed them and that we couldn't do without them another day. They, too, had the spirit and they showed it!!

The tap of the six o'clock bell, Thursday morning, which generally finds the hall as still as churches, brought forth someone from every door and window in school. Screams could be heard and the colors could be seen flying in every direction. Even if we hadn't slept all night, or if we had spent the better part of the time on the roof and in class room our pep was still with us. Which color predominated would be almost impossible to say. The red and white was highest until some brave Freshman succeeded in going an inch higher on the flag pole. This we can truly say, not one spot that could possibly be hung with color was missed.

I doubt, very seriously, if anyone ate any breakfast. At least, 20 minutes before the games were called, both sides were in their section of the Gymn, cheering as hard as they could. The cheer leader in clown suit and the team in their original costume offered another unexpected surprise. Then the whistle blew! The games were the best ever seen in S. T. C. and the green and white took their defeat with the same spirit they had displayed! The red and white were ideal winners, they neither gloriied or gloated. They were justly proud!

With a stiff upper lip the green and white colors were removed from the Rotunda, and with broadly smiling faces the red and white was put up all the way round. It was lovely, the Rotunda has never looked prettier, and the blue and white at the top made it perfect.

The whole week-end the spirit kept up. The alumnae gave some of the best cheering and turned out to be one of the best we have ever had. Weren't we proud of our alumnae to

JOAN OF ARC

Living in the little out of the way village of Domremy, Joan of Arc had for years feasted on the tales of passing soldiers and had watched playmates go off to war. She prayed so fervently, and thought so often about her country's danger, that she seemed to hear the saints giving her, a poor illiterate girl, the courage and inspiration to lead France's armies to victory.

From then on painters and sculptors tried for a reproduction of the girl who had won widespread recognition in so short a time. The majority of the pictures of Joan had the girl warrior in armor with gleaming shield and banner. Then, in the latter part of the 18th century, Bastein Lepage and Henri Chapu, the first in his painting and the latter in his statue, shows her as the simple, peasant girl that she was. Both picture her looking very young and serious. With rapt gaze she is trying to see into the future as her spirit responds to the vows that beseech her to "Save France."

Both pieces of art were influenced by the classical school, but these men, had sufficient originality to go beyond and strike a deep chord in all hearts.

When one stops and considers her wonderful ideals and what she did for her country, how could one help but love these portrayals of Joan of Arc?

We, in this school, are fortunate enough to have both these pieces of art. Chapu's statue is in our Reception Hall and Bastein Lepage's "Listening to the Voices" can be found in the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet room. Why not avail ourselves of this splendid opportunity of studying these productions?

PIERROT

Pierrot stands in the garden
Beneath a waning moon,
And in his lute he fashions
A fragile silver tune.

Pierrot plays in the garden.
He thinks he plays for me,
But I am quite forgotten
Under the cherry tree.

Pierrot plays in the garden,
And all the roses know
That Pierrot loves his music,—
But I love Pierrot.

—Sara Teasdale.

come back with such spirit?

The Junior—Freshman—Alumnae dance Saturday night was the grand finale, but let's hope not the spirit. We've caught it so let's hold on to it. The next class game is Wednesday afternoon, when the Freshmen will play the Sophomores. Can't we make our spirit hold out? The spirit of S. T. C. is an intangible thing, and we have it in our grasp. We love it! We stand for it, and we are going to make it the predominating feature of our school life.

ON HAVING ONE'S PICTURE MADE FOR THE COLLEGE ANNUAL

With fear and trembling I stepped behind the screen into the circle of bluish-white light, and stood face to face with the man! I use the article wisely, I believe, for to me, just at that moment, he could either make my perfectly ordinary face a thing of beauty, or reproduce it with always (except in the case of the chosen few) disappointing accuracy. I was having my picture taken for the college annual, and I had, even then, lovely, clouded visions of the countless hundreds stopping aghast in the half-careless, half-interested turning of the pages of the annual, at the radiance of my pictured beauty! O, joyous dream! And here was the man who was to make it true!

I gave him a hazy imploring smile, and with a flattering docility turned myself over to his alchemical talents. He ordered me to a round stool in the center of the rays from the lights, and weak with the strain, I slid onto it.

Very confidently I informed him of my desire to have a profile picture. Heaven knows I deserved one, after spending two weeks deciding which side of my face was the more symmetrical, and half of another arranging my hair becomingly on the favored side! I hopefully tilted my nose in the air, and painfully tried to give each of my well regulated curls the advantage of the camera. The man, however, wanted a slight adjustment, and he actually touched one hitherto obedient curl. I trembled—and as he turned back to prepare the camera, one hand slipped surreptitiously to my head to give it a reassuring pat. I heard a click—my fate was decided. "Is it er—over?" I gasped. "Did you er take it?" My words were an uncomprehending choke. I did manage, however, to judge by his disgusted air of finality that it was "over". With another choke, I was outside of the screen, blinking at the sudden transition from light to darkness. A second later I stood before my mirror, and my face relaxed. The most critical of inspections showed that every curl lay, with the highest degree of mathematical accuracy, at the specified angle, and that my nose was behaving with true breeding. For the first time since I had dressed for the momentous occasion, I dared to bend my head—I was uttering a prayer of thankfulness, and a blessing—on the man!

THE JUNIORS ENTERTAIN THEIR 'LITTLE SISTERS'

On Saturday, the twenty-eighth of November, the Freshman thoroughly enjoyed a party given them by the Juniors. Dancing was begun with a vim. Games were played by those who were not dancing. Very unique stunts were put on by various groups. The one given by the alumnae was especially good. Later in the evening delicious punch and cake were served. Just how much we Freshmen appreciate the whole thing cannot be put into words.

Mrs. D. E. Davidson gave a dinner party in honor of Peggy Moore on Saturday evening. Those invited were Frances Sale, Audrey Chewing, and Lucy Hadle Overbey.

ALUMNAE PARTY

That the spirit of Alma Mater does not cease with graduating was shown during the Thanksgiving recess. Alumnae of the class of '25 had a supper in the Tea Room, a real turkey supper! They displayed their old time pep by singing and giving yells for their class, their colors, green and white, and for their beloved Alma Mater. Those present were: Peggy Moore, Erna Shotwell, Kathleen Morgan, Eula Harris, Mary Rives Richardson, and Louise Parsons.

ZETA TAU ENTERTAINS

Saturday, afternoon, November 21st. Zeta Tau gave a spread in honor of its pledges. The color scheme of orchid and silver was effectively carried out. After the delicious salad course, cake, cocoa, and candy were served. Then, for the rest of the afternoon, dancing held sway.

CHECK!

Oh, Percival has gold to spare
A car and lots of swank
Head waiters know him everywhere;
He almost owns the Central Bank.

But very little does he know
Of how to turn a pretty phrase—
His mind is rather dull and slow,
And he fatigues me with his praise.

Now Pat, the dear, has not enough;
I love to hear him batter me
He writes the most delightful stuff,
But not a single cent has he.

Oh, Percival would you pay my bills,
And Pat would pay me compliments,
I might prefer receipts to thrills,
If I were blessed with business sense.

I may as well confess I'm not
And so my heart is Pat's alone,
Well, anyway, thank goodness, I've got
An ample income of my own,

This concluded the exercises and the President escorted Miss Her, whom the Freshmen, as well as the entire student body, knows will be a wise advisor and leader, out of the auditorium followed by the Piper and her army of Rats.

OUR GUESTS OVER WEEK-END

There were quite a number of visitors at S. T. C. for Thanksgiving Day, and the week-end, most of whom were alumnae.

We were all so glad to have them with us, and it's good to know that the alumnae still have the interest of S. T. C. at heart. Their love for it can never die.

More than four hundred persons representing the public, the manufacturers, the broadcasters, and the distributors, met at Washington last week for the fourth annual National Radio Conference. Secretary Hoover reported the problems that confront him and voted to recommend that no new broadcasting stations be licensed until present number of stations shall have been reduced. Although at present the air is overcrowded with 578 stations in the United States, nearly 200 applications for new stations are pending.

During the last "travel year", which ended on the last day of September, 2,073,684 tourists visited the national parks and monuments, according to a report from the Department of the Interior. This is a gain of more than 3 per cent in two years. Hot Springs, Ark., heads the park list with a total of 265,500 visitors.

Men were said to be "dizzy" in 1895 as well as in 1925? Such was the name bestowed upon Benjamin Disraeli, late Earl of Beaconsfield, by the London Punch.

The English, say things, and mean them when they aren't what they say and they're not what they say? "When Dover and Callias meet" means never. And if at tea you say, "I expect to dine with Duke Humphrey," just means that you aren't going to dine at all. The latter expression, by authorities is said to have arisen from the fact that Duke Humphrey, the ill-fated son of Henry IV (1399-1413), starved to death.

At Scandinavian weddings the bridegroom usually drew on the finger-nail a knot? Thus originates the expression, "Marriage Knot."

The real meaning of the phrase, "Mad as a Hatter," means as venomous as an adder? Attu means an adder or viper, but later years in a slang expression, the word is being pronounced at hatter. This word does not mean to cast any reflection at hat makers however, Java, a Malay word means "Land of the Nutmegs?"

DR JARMAN DUG THE FIRST SHOVEL OF DIRT FOR THE STUDENT BUILDING

We Build
We build for the past,
Our school-girl past
With its memories tender and sweet;
There is never a doubt
That, this past left out
Our life would be incomplete.

We build for the present:
The splendid today
With its April smiles and tears;
For the lessons of truth
Instilled in our youth
Will last through the coming years.

We build for the future
And all it may hold;
For the girls of the years to come;
To give us a share
In the pleasures rare
That will grace their dear school-home.

For the College we build.
Alma Mater so fair,
Thy daughters are loyal and true;
With zeal in each heart
They are doing their part
To prove their devotion to you.

And so we build on
Just a brick at a time
Until our fair building fair shall rise
A monument sweet
To our love, and replete
With the spirit of sacrifice;

For as we build on
We are doing our best
To give of ourselves as we can;
By earnest endeavor
(Our faith flagging never) Completing our beautiful plan!

—Jennie Masters Tabb

THE STUDENT BUILDING

What does the Student Building mean to you? Are you proud of it—proud that it is yours? Do you consider it a building or a home? The Student Building is a home. A home is made up of comforts. The same can be said of the Student Building. It is furnished throughout in the most home-like way. One notices an atmosphere of peace and contentment upon entering the Lounge. The comfortable chairs invite you and the beautiful, restful paintings capture your eye. The draperies, rugs and fixtures all tend to make of this room an informal, cozy, chatting place. Then there are the students' rooms with their attractive furnishings so dear to the hearts of the owners. They prize their room with the beautiful new furniture and go to no end of but—should the Student Building belong to just those who claim one room within its walls? No—it belongs to the Student Body. It is ours to love and enjoy. The Student Building is a dream fulfilled. Can we say we do not love a beautiful dream come true.

ALUMNAE BASKETBALL GAME

At the State Teachers College Convention held in Norfolk last week the Harrisonburg Alumnae played the Farmville Alumnae. The score was 35 to 29 in favor of Farmville.

The Farmville line-up: Center, Nell McArdle; Forwards, Henny Hall, Catherine Kemp; Guards, Jean West, Emily Calcott.

FRESHMEN HOLD SOPHOMORES IN TIGHT GAME 31-26

Wednesday afternoon the Freshmen "came back on the Sophomores" in a game of basket ball that kept the spectators and both teams uncertain of the winning side until the final whistle blew and the score was announced. With only two more minutes to play the score was tied with twenty-six points or each side. Everyone stood almost breathless while forwards of both sides shot for goals that would decide, within two minutes, which team was the better,—the Sophs or Freshies. The upholders of the Red and White won by making five additional points and, thus making the final score 31—26.

Epperson played an unusually good game and blocked many balls that would have meant a goal if it had gotten into Perkins' or Hall's hands. Orgain also played a good game. However, it would be hard to mention one player without telling of the entire teams for all played a hard game from beginning to end.

The line-up:

Freshmen	Position	Sophomores
Hardy	F	Hall
Orgain	F	Perkins
Jarman	J. C.	Mitchell
Burch	S. C.	Ponton
Epperson	G	Crowder
Whitehurst	G	Volk

Substitutions — Freshmen: Yancy for Orgain, Bryant for Yancy, Orgain for Hardy, Hargrave for Burch.

OUR STUDENT BUILDING

Years ago (in fact, as far back as the early days of the present century) our president dreamed of a building on the campus that would be like our government "for the people and by the people." His idea was to make it large enough to house all of the student activities and to be a place belonging to the students for their own work and pleasure. As early as 1911 the subject was brought to the attention of the student body, numbering at that time only three hundred and fifty-seven in the college department, and the first pledges were made by the class of 1911 and amounted to $964.50.

From this small beginning the funds have grown until nearly fifty-two thousand dollars have been paid in; the Alumnae Association pledged fifty thousand; the State of Virginia appropriated fifty thousand and there was sent another fifty thousand lacking since the building cost a hundred and fifty thousand. This amount will have to be raised by the students and friends of the college and they are earnest indeed in their efforts to reduce the debt each year just as much as possible; a little over forty-five thousand is yet to be paid.

The Student Building is the handsomest of the whole plant; standing at the east corner of the front campus it commands a broad view and is visible from a great distance. The first floor is given over to the Department of Physical Education and contains an unusually fine gymnasium. The fourth floor is made up of dormitories while the two floors between are for the students and their various activities: the Student Government Association, the Y. W. C. A., the Rotunda and the Virginian, the Dramatic Club, the Literary and Debating societies, the Pi Kappa Omega Society, and the Sororities; there are also six guest rooms for visiting alumnae.

Across the entire front of the building runs The Lounge; a beautiful room, tastefully and expensively furnished, containing a large open fire place and many other things to add to the comfort and pleasure of the girls. The graduating classes of 1925 presented three beautiful pictures to be hung in The Lounge and more will be added from time to time.

At the rear of the second floor is a small auditorium, seating about two hundred—complete with stage, curtain, and opera chairs upholstered in blue leather.

The entire building is one of which the college may be justly proud; the students enjoy it the whole year round and their interest in helping the President to lighten the load of the debt is just as keen right now, if not keener than it was in the early days of the project.

This building is a part of every alumna and student who has taken her proper share of interest in making it possible; those who had gone out before it was realized feel that they have a vital share in what is going on at their Alma Mater; those who are here now have not only the joy

Miss Ada Bierbower, Alumnae Editor;

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsigned correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism, and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of presenting and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

STUDENT BUILDING SPIRIT.

We may at times disagree on this and that and agree till we are weak but on one thing we all agree and that is that our Student Building and our highest ambition in connection with our school is to see it paid for and full of girls, who enjoy and love it.

You, Freshmen, will catch the spirit of the Student Building because it is in the air at S. T. C. and you have shown yourselves the class to catch the right kind of spirit. The raising of funds for the Student Building is the thing that brings us closer together than any other activity at S. T. C. To hear the sums given by the different organizations and our alumnae chapters called out on Founder's Day by Dr Jarman is one of the greatest thrills we have while here. Everybody is happy and the spirit is kindled more and more.

At times we may grow tired of hearing the cry of this and that for benefit of the Student Building, but once out of that stage we are out of it forever, for not until we have gone through a period of 'not knowing what it is all about' do we see the clear plan and then we catch what is known as the spirit of the Student Building! What is it? No one can tell you, you have to get it yourself.

DO YOU OBSERVE "BUSY SIGNS"?

"Busy Signs" have a meaning; they are put up for a purpose, not a decoration. Have you ever thought of this? Generally upon walking down the hall and seeing a "Busy Sign" upon your friends door, you say to yourself, "I wonder what Mary is doing with a "Busy" on her door, I guess I'll go in and see." Then you go gently and call, "Mary, it's only Louise; may I come in?" What can the girl say but "yes"? Do you realize that you have been impolite, to say the least, and that you are probably making a nuisance of yourself and have lowered your friend's opinion of you? You have!! We have no way here of having one minute in our rooms without disturbance unless we signify in this way that we wish to remain undisturbed, and there are times when even one's best friend is not wanted. Have you ever tried to take a nap? Or maybe, I should say, have you ever succeeded in taking one? The "Busy" should be your protection against intruders, but not so, that sign seems to attract everyone who passes. Then, although we often fail to realize it, people at times cannot study with a room full of girls. Can you concentrate with three or four people talking around you? These are at least two of the purposes of "Busy Signs" and they surely deserve your consideration. Stay out of the place in which you are not wanted. If you "walk in" on girls when they have a "Busy" on their door, they are perfectly justified in resenting it. Think this over and remember that if each one of us will bear this in mind we may each succeed in having often needed moments alone.

As the situation is now, "Busy Signs" mean nothing. Let us try a new plan of "Busy Signs". Put them up only when you want no one, not even your best friend, to enter your room. Do not put them up when room inspection hour is on. Only a phone call or telegram should necessitate a "Busy Sign" being disregarded. If the "Busy Signs" here are made to mean what they mean in other colleges they will be worth while, if not, they should be disregarded by every one.

It has reached the point that some think of a "Busy Sign" as a guard against any government girl's coming in as something might be going on that should not be. This is not true. "A locked door is a confession." "Busy Signs" are not always put up in these cases for the very fact that it will give the occupants of the room away. Student government girls complain of their signs being disregarded. Is it another case of the innocent suffering for the guilty?

A uniform "Busy Sign" can be bought at a very small cost. Buy one, use it when you have a need for it and observe it when you see it hanging on a door.

ENJOYABLE PROGRAMS RENDERED IN CHAPEL LAST WEEK

Saturday, November 29, in chapel, Mrs. Clive Smith Bowman played several violin solos, which were thoroughly enjoyed by the student body, as was shown by the responsive applause. Mrs. Bowman first played "Souvenir." Her second selection was "At Dawning", which in return for the vigorous applause she played an encore.

Tuesday, Dr. Walmsley gave his usual weekly and interesting current event talk. He discussed some very interesting topics of the day, such as the Mitchell trial, and whether or not submarines should be abolished.

Saturday, the fifth, a very interesting and enjoyable program was given by Miss Mebane Hunt and the Sensational Syncopated Orchestra. The program was divided into two parts. Miss Hunt sang in her usual charming manner "Melisande in the Wood" by Gotez, "Sweetheart" by Stewart, and as an encore Bach's "Granada."

The second part of the program the Sensational Syncopated Orchestra played "If I Had a Girl Like You", "Marguerite Waltz" and encored with "I Can't Realize You Love Me" and "Sailor Boy."

These delightful programs make our chapel period most enjoyable, and we hope that through the coming months many more will follow.

Y. W. C. A. NEWS

Miss Lillian Lenhoff of the Southern Methodist Mission Board visited our college last week. She spoke at Prayers Wednesday and Thursday, and afterwards to the Methodist girls. She was here primarily in the interest of the Methodist girls, but is interested in students of all denominations.

She pointed out the great opportunity college girls have for serving the different communities into which they go after leaving college. She showed how the ideals of the Y. W. C. A. and of the college might be carried on in communities, especially in forwarding the recreational and spiritual life of the young people. To all of us there comes the great challenge—What can we do to make our lives most profitable and serviceable to all mankind?

Miss Harriet Hitchcock, secretary for Student's Interests of Financial Division of National Board of Y. W. C. A. was also a visitor in our college last week. She spoke to the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet and Financial Advisors, and also at Prayers. Miss Hitchcock is visiting local Y. W. C. A.'s in order that she may study local problems of Finance. She offered to our Y. W. C. A. several suggestions as to raising our budget by means of pledges.

YES, WE HAVE NO BANANAS

Only since I have walked back and forth from the Training School upon so many occasions has the thought struck home, and yet I wonder that I have noticed nothing else of more importance upon my systematic wanderings. But I haven't. That thing and that alone has caught the glance from my theme eye, until I find myself faithfully, if unconsciously gazing in the self-same direction many, many times a day.

Kind friends, do not think me foolish when I admit that the charming spot which holds me captive is no other than the window of the little store across the way, so dear to each one of our hearts. But why, why you ask me, should a widow hold such fascination? It is simply this. In that window hangs a peg, placed there for the benefit of bunches of luscious bananas, which appear and disappear so very, very often, that I began to wonder and marvel at the fact. Had we a banana fiend at S. T. C., did the owner remove the bunches from the peg at stated intervals; just what magic impulse caused the disappearance of such a great many beautiful, tempting yellow objects upon such short notice? Why, one morning I saw placed upon the peg the loveliest and fullest bunch of bananas I had ever seen and when I visited the store that night the answer to my order was, "but we have no bananas". To my disappointment and surprise I saw hanging there the mere skeleton of what had been, a few hours earlier, a mass of yellow beauty.

It seems incredible and yet the plain facts are before you. Bananas are a drawing card. The ripe ones sell, the green ones go, and even those in the last stages with pitiful black dots upon their bright yellow coats pass on to the highest bidder. Their popularity can be judged by the pitiful sighs uttered and the longing eyes cast at the empty peg when disappointed purchasers leave the store with empty hands.

When the familiar sight of my favorite fruit is not there to greet me as I pass the window of the store across the way, I am sad; sad for the friends who love and want them. So here's to the bananas—may they ever hang in glorious bunches upon the peg, to delight my theme eye as I pass.

ON HAVING TO WEAR HATS

Oh, why were hats ever invented? Who was the fiend that inflicted this form of torture on suffering humanity? Of course, there are many advantages in a hat when one has a bald head, and sometimes possibly to keep the sun out of one's eyes; but are not these advantages greatly overbalanced by the agonizing moments as to whether it becomes us or whether it is the latest style; and the knowledge that we must wear it, because convention demands it.

Certainly they give no pleasure to the wearer, and it generally irritates us to see them on some one else. Have you never sat behind a hat in the theatre? I say a hat because the person under it fades into insignificance beside the breadth, length, and depth of some hats.

MRS. BOWMAN ENTERTAINS PI KAPPA OMEGA

A. McCorkle, advisory members.

On sunny days hats are a nuisance because they give us a headache, on rainy days they are an anxiety because we do not want to get them wet, and on windy days, what is more embarrassing than to have your hat snatched from your head by a gust of wind and to chase it for several blocks amid the laughter of unsympathetic spectators.

If I had my way with hats I would see everyone destroyed, except a few which could be saved as relics; so that future generations might be warned against this comfort-stealing evil.

THE MADONNA OF THE CHAIR.

Among all the painters of the Madonna, Raphael Santi holds first place; and among all the Madonna pictures he produced, the Madonna of the Chair holds that place in the hearts of the lovers of beauty. Undoubtedly the supreme achievement of the master is the Sistine Madonna of Dresden. It is in a class by itself, apart, exalted, superhuman; it appeals to the elect. The Madonna of the Chair is in a room with many other pictures, in the Pitti Palace, Florence. It appeals to the crowds that flow and ebb around it year after year. Everybody has a smile and a word of appreciation for this most home-like rendering of the Mother and her holy child.

The picture was painted about 1516, when Raphael was in full possession of all his powers. No picture within a circle was ever more skillfully composed. One's eye is passed gracefully along from one lovely contour to another, happily entertained with soft curves, rich colors, sufficiently harmonious to give perpetual delight. Within this charming circle one finds all one can desire of loveliness and peace.

The traditional colors of the Virgin Mary are white, blue and red. White is a symbol of purity, blue of constancy, and red of love. Nearly all of the Madonnas have had robes of these colors. Raphael has given this Madonna the red and the blue; but for the white he has substituted green, the symbol of fruitfulness. White does not appear, however, on her head-dress and in the pattern over the shoulder. The child's robe is yellow, symbol of wisdom, for his is a revelation of the power and wisdom of God. The robe of little John Baptist is orange, the symbol of benevolence and good will. The rich purple quality of the shadows and of the background, completes the entire spectrum of color. To see such a picture is like listening to a chord of music, it is sweet and human, like the rich music of a choir. This picture can be seen in Miss Coulling's room during the next week.

CHEER LEADERS

What part did the following girls play in the Thanksgiving games—Claire Black, "Izzy" Payne, Mebane Hunt, Phyllis Pedigo and Edith Asher? Did they shoot goals, guard, play center, or root? Yes, they are the only ones that did have a part in all four things. Why? Because they were the ones that led the cheers and songs for the four classes. They are the class cheer leaders that were responsible for the cooperation the school furnished through pep and enthusiasm during the entire basket ball games.

What does a team feel like if the players make a good play and receive no recognition of their efforts? Naturally the team wouldn't play as well because the members would realize

Teacher: (showing small boy a picture of a hypopotamus-) "What is this Johnny?"

A Matter of Taste

"Waiter, this beer is muddy."
"Oh, sir, you are mistaken! The glass is dirty."

The saddest words of tongue or pen may be perhaps, "It might have been." The sweetest words we know, by heck, are only these, "Enclosed find check!"

"Jack and I have parted forever."
"Good gracious! What does that mean?"

"Means that I'll get a five-pound box of candy in about an hour."

"What's this," asked the Prof. in zoology, pointing to the picture of a zebra.

Enterprising Frosh "A horse in a bathing suit."

"Jack's a good fellow, but rather loquacious, don't you think?"
"Yeah, and besides, he talks too much."

I asked her shyly for a kiss
And she who I hoped said, "Thur!"
Now what has had me guessing is,
Did she say "sure" or "sir!"

As a man thinks, so is he.
Some people are never.

DR. WALMSLEY'S ADDRESS AT TEACHERS MEETING

"The History Teachers Declaration of Right" was the subject of the address delivered to the Virginia Society of History Teachers by Dr. James E. Walmsley, head of the department of history and social science at State Teachers College, Farmville. The meeting was held in the ball room of the Southland Hotel, Norfolk, on November 26.

In brief, Dr. Walmsley's list of "right" are as follows:

First, that the course of study in every school should recognize as of first importance the study of social subjects, past, present, and future.

Second, that no teaching of history be recognized which does not show familiarity with more than one text and with standard sources.

ENGLISH 36

English 36, offered in the winter quarter, is not primarily a course in versification, though some elementary instruction in versification will be given, and some practice will be afforded in verse-making.

Students who can never write poetry can learn to write creditable verse. Such accomplishment is worth cultivating. The chief aim of the course, however, is to develop a clearer understanding of poetry, with a corresponding delight in the art. The course will consist mainly in the actual study of poetry. This course is for students only who have at natural love for poetry, and who wish to improve their taste. If you are at all interested, do not hesitate to ask your English teacher if you could take this course to an advantage. The course is open to all upper classmen who have ability in the creation or interpretation of poetry, or who may wish to acquire such ability.

that their efforts were not appreciated. However, the opposite occurred here. The cheer leaders were a large link that connected the players efforts with the school's cooperation. Every effort was recognized by the classes with peppy songs and yells.

The cheer leaders deserve a large share of credit for their services. None could be better so—three cheers for the cheer leaders!

ALUMNAE NEWS

On Saturday, November 21, Ford Eubank of Keyesville was married to Dr. Robert Whitehead. The young couple will make their home in Victoria.

Lucille South, of Prince Edward county, was married to Mr. Merriweather Godman, of Richmond at Sandy River Church on November 28. The wedding music was furnished by Mrs. Celeste Richardson Blanton. Janie Gilliam and Addie Noel were bridesmaids.

Marie Sheppard Jones, of Sheppards, Buckingham county, was married to Mr. Marcus Cleveland Elean, of Kansas City, Missouri, on November 28.

Mr. Elean is a brother of Mrs. Grace Elean Garnett.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnett have recently purchased a house in Farmville, where they are now making their home.

One of the most pleasant features of the recent Teachers Conference, held in Norfolk, last week was the annual luncheon of the Alumnae held at Thanksgiving time.

Promptly at one o'clock there assembled at Gainer's on Granby Street, about one hundred and fifteen enthusiastic daughters of Farmville S. T. C. Although the dates of graduation ranged from 1900 to 1926 not a single trace of lagging enthusiasm or Alma Mater could be found. Christine Mackan was toastmistress and presided in a charming manner. Anyone, who has ever attended one of these affairs on previous occasions knows how much interest and life are put in college songs when led by Elizabeth Ewald. No one was disappointed this time. There were songs to the school, to Dr. Jarman and to various members of the faculty who were present. An orchestra composed of Maury High School students furnished splendid music between toasts.

As president of the Norfolk Chapter, Roberta Hodgkin gave the visitors a cordial greeting and welcome to the city. Ada Bierbower brought greetings from the General Association of the Alumnae. Christine Armstrong gave a toast to Farmville, Evelyn Brooks to Dr. Jarman. Our beloved president, in his usual fatherly manner, talked to his girls and invited them to visit the school. He said he was proud of the alumnae and was doing everything in his power to make the school worthy of their pride. Dr. W. H. T. Squires, an alumnus of Hampden-Sidney, was the principal speaker at the luncheon and kept his audience in continual laughter by his jovial spirit and his witty jokes.

The following is part of a beautiful toast given by Mrs. Lucy Wright James: "Here's to the woman who has a smile for every joy, a tear for every sorrow, a consolation for every grief, an excuse for every fault, a prayer for every misfortune, an encouragement for every hope,—The Teacher."

Our final song was "All Hail, Alma Mater." After this there was a little time to shake hands and speak our regrets at not having the opportunity to remain longer together.

Many thanks are due the Norfolk Chapter for having arranged such a pleasant affair.

At Eaco Theatre This Week

MON.—MARY PICKFORD in her big special production ROSITA. In this picture "The World's Sweetheart" plays a lullaby of love—an overture of passion—a symphony of hate—a jazz tune of laughter—and a song of romance. It is a most stirring melodrama filled with scenes of intense, gripping emotionalism. Pathe News will be shown and Hampden-Sidney Orchestra will play during the night. Matinee a 4 o'clock.

TUES.—Buster Keaton in THREE AGES. This picture is a real bombshell of mirth. It is built on a monumental scale, showing the grandeur of an ancient Rome, the life of prehistoric man and the luxury of the modern world. Three times as big and three times as funny as any Keaton picture yet. Also 6th episode of "Perils of the Wild."

WED., THURS., & FRI.—THE TEN COMMANDMENTS. The greatest, most magnificent production yet screened. There is hardly a man, woman or child who hasn't heard of this picture, so it is needless to say much about it here. It will carry you from the splendors and orgies of the Pharaohs to the humor and tragedy of this jazzed age. When you see the waters of the Red Sea swallow up the army of Pharaoh, it will live in your memory forever. Ministers from their pulpits have urged their congregations to see this magnificent spectacle. Matinee at 3:30 Wednesday and Friday. Adult admissions at night 50c, children 25c. At matinee adults 35c and children 15c.

SAT.—Bette Daniels in THE MANICURE GIRL. A Paramount picture. Bette as the manicure girl manures the blues. It is a bright and breezy comedy of he-nails and females in the manicure shops of New York. "She held their hands and rolled her eyes; They thought they were in paradise." On this night we will show the first episode of THE ACE OF SPADES, a thrilling, gripping serial. Two shows this night at 7:15 and 9 o'clock.

CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS AT STATE T. C.

As Christmas draws near, old girls gather in crowds and such fragments of speech as these may be heard: "Wasn't she wonderful last year?" or "Hanging of the green—" or "Yes, sing, sing!" All of these are merely references to some time-honored customs at our college.

Each year for—oh, ever so long,—Miss Rice has been telling the story of "The Other Wise Man" at prayers we always look forward with a great deal of pleasure to this story, for each year Miss Rice's sweet voice, some times low and vibrant, sometimes chanting, sometimes rising in an ecstasy of joy, carries us floating, drifting, back to the time of our Saviour's birth. We hear the Herald, Angel, King. We see the Wise Men of the East. For a certain period of time, we are living almost two thousand years ago. Ah, Freshmen! We envy you the pleasure of hearing Miss Rice tell the story for the first time, and yet, no for all our worldly possessions, would we part with one word, one thrill of ecstasy we have experienced in the past years.

Another custom of our college without which Christmas would be incomplete, is the "Hanging of the Green" about our college. This is done one evening after prayers, a short time before Christmas. Every girl here is invited to participate in hanging the beautiful running cedar moss about the college. With the hanging of each bit of clinging green moss, the spirit of Christmas is entwined about a girl's heart.

And then, there can't be a Christmas without singing. Already in chapel and prayers we are singing Christmas carols! But in addition to that on a clear, cold night just before Christmas, when the stars are shining so brightly that one can almost see to be able to reach up and touch them, the student body is divided into groups, and away they go to sing Christmas carols before the homes of the beloved faculty. Our hearts are outpoured in these songs, and when one group is silent and away from afar the faint sounds of "Hail, Hail, drifting on the wind in the intense stillness, a there any wonder that our very hearts throb in exaltation?

The spirit of our college and the spirit of Christmas are intertwined. When the last lesson is done, and the last "Merry Christmas!" is shouted, Joan smiles her wise smile as if to say, "Beautiful college and customs, beautiful girls, beautiful spirit!" And Dr. Jarman smiles and says, "Merry Christmas girls!"

RESULT OF THE STRAW VOTE

The result of the straw vote as to whether or not the United States should enter the World Court was as follows:

Affirmative, 284.
Negative, 23.

TO DR. JARMAN
A MERRY CHRISTMAS

Dear Dr. Jarman, deep in our hearts,
As the Yuletide season draws near,
There's a feeling of Faith, and Hope,
and Love,
O' great, unbounded good cheer.

A kind and noble man you are,
We love you all the while,
You, with your great and generous heart
And smile—your radiant smile!

To us you are all that is good and true,
Sacred to us, and dear;
So we're wishing you a Merry Christmas,
And a happy, glad New Year.

BIG STEP TAKEN IN DEVELOPMENT OF DEMOCRACY AT S. T. C.

The Student Body wishes to thank Dr. Jarman and the committee on investigating the courses given in school, for the very kind opportunity we had of expressing our liberal opinions of the different courses of the school. We feel that this is one of the fairest and most democratic things we have ever been allowed to do.

Some few through fear may not have written their honest opinions but we think the majority did write exactly what they believed to be true.

We appreciate it more than we know how to say, for this thing of going around the school knocking doors and their courses is not what we want at S. T. C. We feel that the great expression is just exactly what the students wanted and what some have been waiting for, for some time.

When Dr. Jarman announced we did not have to sign our names everyone felt that the highest trust was being laid on it and we know that the most of us treated it accordingly.

This is one of the best plans ever worked in any college, for after all, even the poorest students recognize a good subject and a good teacher and it is only fair that our voices should be heard.

And, we thank you!

SOPHOMORES WIN BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeat Juniors 27-11

Tuesday afternoon the Sophomores defeated the Juniors in the final inter class game of the season.

Although the Sophomores were in the lead during the entire game the Juniors were only a few points behind until the end of the third quarter. The third quarter was the best for the Juniors for their blocking held the Sophomores to one goal while they made one to balance that. However, the upholders of the red and white "rallied up" the score 11 points during the last quarter. During this time Woodson was the outstanding player.

Line-up:
Sophomores Position Juniors
Hall F. Crute
Perkins F. Vincent
Crowder J. C. Brewer
Woodson R. C. Lohr
Jones C. Gary
Smith C. White

Substitutions: Sophomores—Volk for Crowder, Fomen for Woodson, Woodson for Penton, Crowder for Smith.
Referee: Mr. S. B. O. Graham

THE GAME OF THE SEASON

Who said the faculty of S. T. C. wasn't full of pep, interest and enthusiasm? They showed what kind of sports they were Thursday when they played a game of basketball against the seniors. The game ended 22-12 in favor of the Seniors! The Seniors out-did the faculty! That is a recognized happening that occurs only once in a lifetime so it should certainly be recorded:

The line-up:
Faculty Position Seniors

Her Anderson
Graham C. Whaley
Barrow C. Smith
Browning C. Wright
Marshall G. Bowman
Substitutions: Faculty—Graham for Frazier, Her for Browning, Browning for Graham, Her for Graham, Browning for Her, Graham for Graham.

THE NIGHT BEFORE HOLIDAY

'Twas the night before holidays—all through the hall,

Was noise such as we were not used to at all,

Could study hour mean anything that night here,

With Christmas and home going time drawing near

We jabbered and yacked and then jabbered some more.

Bout holidays, presents and wishes galore—

Bout trains going this way and trains going that.

The trifles and hours passed and still we could chat;

We thought of the morrow—what lay in sight,

For the girls who were leaving here after tonight.

No one had a worry—no one could know about this court were he said.

Nothin' is practiced, for this was the time to be glad.

Our studies were over all for the packed away.

No more classes or tests for many a day.

We'd go to bed, but no, we didn't sleep,

Our brains were a-whirling before us would creep

Did Santa, the reindeer, the park on the fringe

With things we had asked for just coming our way.

We nibbled and tossed until we were sore.

And then when too tired to go over once more,

From exhaustion we slept 'til night passed us by.

And a beautiful blueness illumined the sky—

Then up and away like a flash we were gone,

MR. ALLEY SPEAKS ON WORLD COURT

Last Saturday morning, the student body of our college heard an intensely interesting and powerful lecture on the World Court by Mr. Alden Alley, who was a non-partisan representative to the League of Nations. Personally, he advocated the joining of the League, thinking it best for the United States. He spoke a few words concerning its organization and great power of bringing about international peace.

But, as he said, he was traveling through America lecturing, not on the League of Nations, but on the World Court and on the effect of America's entrance into such a court. He pointed out very cleverly that the World Court was not a legislative body, that it could not make laws nor amend old ones; that it was not an executive body to carry out laws; that it would not handle illegal disputes. Its function, however, in handle legal disputes, disputes (1) as to what the law is, (2) as to what it means, (3) as to whether a certain act was committed or not, and (4) as to the damages that should be paid. The Court, stated Mr. Alley, has been in existence only three years and has settled eighteen disputes successfully. It is indispensable and invaluable to the peace and justice of the nations of the world.

There are two ways in which America may join this court:

By promising always to go before the Court with legal disputes.

By reserving the right to refuse to go before the court if the disputes before the court, if it should wish. Mr. Coolidge has a court into which "we cannot be brought," and strongly urges America's entrance.

All of our Presidents who have ever known about this court were in favor of it. And since Mr. Coolidge has reserved for the U. S. the right to enter the Court only, and not the League of Nations, there seems to be no "strings" tied to it.

The record of the Court, the fine character and ability of the judges, and the spirit in which they have done their work, seemed to Mr. Alley proof in itself of the greatness of the Court.

He reminded us, however, that such a great undertaking needed not only skilled workmen, but a great faith in these workmen. He stated that the first step in universal wisdom—and one which each American might do well to say—is: "There may be something wrong with me!"

Last of all, Mr. Alley said that we as citizens of the world must be willing to "pay the price" of peace, that those who made the great sacrifice in the late war may not have died in vain.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT AND NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS

Have you felt it? That wonderful spirit that is felt at no other time, except the Christmas season. It is indelible and yet it is undoubtedly felt. Christmas in our bones! Christmas in the air! Cheer and good will on all sides! But what does it mean this wonderful spirit?

The true spirit of Christmas is that of unselfishness of giving for the pleasure of giving, and for the joy we may accord others. Over two thousand years ago the greatest gift that mankind has ever received was given to the world in that sublime gift "the Christ Child," from the very beginning this set a precedent and we found the wise men bringing their gifts to lay at his feet. Gifts which stood for gratitude and for love.

The modern spirit of giving has been experienced in the phantom Santa Claus; and although we no longer believe in that wonderful man of olden times, unless we can keep that spirit in our hearts we cannot get the joy out of Christmas which is ours by rights.

How many times do we hear on every side the remark: "Well, Christmas is such a hard time for me, because I can't afford to give presents such as I'd like to." What a shame that a time which is meant for rejoicing and thankfulness shall be passed in such a spirit. For

"Not what we give but what we share
The gift without the giver is bare."

I wonder if we would look at things more in this spirit, if all of us wouldn't feel better and happier. If we can give nothing but justice where it is due, and if we can do no more than see the good in people rather than bad and if we will only feel a spirit of fellowship and just commendation toward our fellow men--then we will give happiness and joy rather than pain and sorrow to some heart, and I'm sure we will find an answering fire kindled in our own hearts.

While we think of the Christmas spirit we find following close on top of it the New Year's resolutions. So can't we combine the two in one and make our New Year's resolutions and our Christmas spirit be to give a word of help and good cheer to our friends, and classmates as well as to our leaders?

DO YOU ANTICIPATE SENDING A TELEGRAM TO YOUR SENATOR ON DECEMBER 17?

December 17 marks the opening of the debate in the United States Senate on America's entrance into the World Court. What will be the result? America, so far, has deliberately placed herself in company with Germany, Russia, Turkey, and Mexico, in rejecting this plan. For a peaceful nation to congregate in creating effecting international relations is almost a calamity to world peace.

Students in all colleges of our country on that eventful day, are sent their letters of cheer and hope, and of faith to their senators in Congress. We want our representatives to know that we, as American students and future citizens, are looking to them in their affirmative decisions concerning the World Court. Whether we live in or out of the Old Dominion, surely our senators would appreciate letters and telegrams expressing our opinions.

LETTERS TOLD THE TRUTH

"I see any kind of stationery when I receive it."

"I don't have to bother about stationery when I write to Mother."

Such expressions as these are heard on the hall, and on the campus every day, indeed, many times a day. I wonder why some of us are careless in writing to the ones most dear to us? Very few letters ought to be prevented from being sent, and I have written letters. Who is most interested in our success as a school? You say, "I never thought of that, but since you mentioned it, I believe my parents are watching my success more closely and with more interest than anyone else." Well, then, if that be true, do you believe that your mother is pleased with the success you are making? This question gives us food for thought. What kind of a letter do you write home? Is your letter written on stationery that is in good taste? Is it written correctly, as to sentence structure, punctuation, margins, or is it a "slip-shod," poorly expressed and poorly written letter? Imagine the joy that comes to your mother when she receives the letter of the former type. How delighted she is to know that you are improving and that all her efforts to train you have not been in vain!

Then, I wonder just what is the content of the letter written by the majority of S. T. C. students. Do we bemoan our condition and wish that we were in any other place but at Farmville? If we do, (and I hope that none of us do) why cause others sadness by telling them so. The happiness of our loved ones is largely dependent upon the happiness of us, and our happiness should be largely dependent upon theirs. Don't make your mother unhappy for several days when your unhappiness may have vanished by the time it was mailed! How many of us no longer mail a "letter of stationery" then we would give world to get it out of the post office? But last Miss Taliaferro's letter and one goes on a way to the editor's desk to be printed.

I feel resolve, as if that from now on the letters we write home will be such in nature that our parents will be assured of our improvement, and that they will be happy in the belief that we are happy. Betty Edwards.

STUDENT BUILDING

You have all heard it said, "Well, it cannot be done."

But one man I know said "I'll do it!" So he thought and he planned--bricks were piled way up high.

Until one day a snail said "I know it!" 'Twas a building he wanted--the best at all.

And he said he'd have none but the best.

So he worked and he planned and he worked and he planned.

Till I wonder he ever could rest.

'Tis said that the building's foundation was laid.

And now I believe it is true.

That most anything can be done if your faith is such that it will put it through.

Our dear Student Building's a wonderful dream.

The greatest dream ever came true.

Dr. Jaeman, we love it and want you to know.

That our hearts full of thanks are for you!

The gift inner coffin of the ancient, upon built to the shade of the young Egyptian ruler has been unveiled by Howard Carter who resumed work at the Tomb last month.

LETTERS TOLD THE TRUTH

Your letter, love, received today.
With sentiments strong and true--

But a bigger thrill was a wee while ago,
"Call for package please at two!"

Your words can sway my list'ning heart
With magic as no other pen.

(Except the magic in Dad's note, "Inclosed you'll find a ten!")

I'm lifted to another world
By the haunting mem'ry of your eyes--

But from Ma's box I get a lift
To a substantial paradise!

Time is a tyrant--my soul would fain
Have utterance with you night and day--

(Oh, Caesar's Ghost? How can I write
With not a dog-gone thing to say?)

Dear, I see your dream-white vision
Of a cozy land for two--

How 'bout a land where Tuesdays never come,
And white slips are taboo?)

Oh, why must I say good-nite so soon
Why live our lives by a bell--?

(That excuse has sufficed for letters live--
I'll say it's an art for a snappy farewell!)

THE DECLINE OF HOME LIFE

As styles change, as customs change, and as the world progresses in its varied and sundry stages of development; just as rapidly as upward strides are made some things, so are downward strides made in others.

I speak in condemnation of the rapid decline of home life; the home life of livable, living rooms--open fire places, big easy chairs, and, best of all the assembly of large congenial, family groups for nightly discussions of the days, trials and tribulations.

The days of family home life has passed, but the vivid picture is with us yet. Mother in the easy rocker with her knitting--the youngest girl on a stool at her feet. In the morris chair father smokes his pipe between accounts of interesting events read aloud from the paper, to the enjoyment of the family. At the piano sits the young lady of the house, radiant in her effort to accompany older brother, whose happiest evenings are spent rendering the old songs loved best of all by his proud parents. As the tall clock ticks away the hours, each member of the family is drawn in closer communion, and love is kept alive by heart felt smiles and sighs before the glowing coals.

What of the family life today? Is there a time of the day in the modern American home when mother and father, sons and daughters form congenial, lovable groups, before glowing embers, for heart to heart talks with each other?

Gone are the days of such family intimacy. In this modern age, when night approaches, the young daughter is off to a dance, the son, recklessly speeding along the highway of life, the mother at some fashionable card party, and the father at the club for billiards or a chat with a business associate, while at home in the wide open spaces of the bare drawing room resounds no happy echoes of loving voices.

And then, too, the old order of family morning prayers has long since ceased to exist. The days when father read from the worn family Bible to the silent kneeling group before him. Such morning devotion plays no part in the average home today. Early hours bring no assembly of the modern family. Breakfast hour finds the young heir and heiress asleep, the mother with her tray and mail beside her bed, while father snatches a bit of food alone at the big vacant table.

And so, time has wrought its changes, but even time cannot efface the picturesqueness of the home life of long ago, and perhaps once more it may occupy its place of honor in the world, different in form, but equal in beauty and significance.

A SUBSCRIPTION DANCE

A subscription dance was held under the auspices of young men of Farmville, who are upon the receiving list of the college, on Friday evening, from 9 p. m. until 1:30 a. m. for the benefit of the Student Building. Approximately fifty couples attended, thirty-three of the young ladies being students of the college. Hampden-Sidney College was well represented. Patronesses included Miss Mary White Cox, head of the home department; Mrs. James K. Laing and Mrs. Eva H. Warren of the home department; and Miss Winnie Hiner, treasurer.

Excellent music was furnished by the orchestra from Washington and Lee University. Refreshments were sold during intermission by the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority of the college.

Y. W. C. A.

Miss Winnifred Wygal, National Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., visited our college last week. She spoke at Prayers Wednesday night, bringing to us a true, sweet message of "Beauty." She showed how God in His goodness and infinite love created a world of hues for man's enjoyment. Her one outstanding thought was that all of us might, with keen, alert senses, see and feel the beauties of this grand old world.

She also spoke to the Cabinet at the morning watch Thursday morning.

LETTERS NEVER RECEIVED AT S. T. C.

Dearest Daughter:

So you are all settled at school once more after those enjoyable weeks vacation for Thanksgiving. Dear child, it makes your father so happy to get your letters. You seem so satisfied with everything—the food you say is beyond reproach, you do not want any boxes from home—how I have longed to send you sweets each week, but you write me that with dessert twice a day it is entirely unnecessary. I am so glad you have waffles for breakfast each morning—how you have loved them since you were a wee child.

Why did you say you didn't want a fur coat? I want you to have one and by today's mail I am sending you a seal, a mink and a squirrel—make your selection and don't think of the price when choosing.

I am so glad you have no studying to do—I do not want you to work. I sent you there to enjoy yourself. Don't bother about your classes. I only want you to go to classes occasionally, because I never want the afternoons to find you buried in books. Think more of pleasure and less of work.

You will find enclosed a check for $100. Do not use a cent of this for board, dues or pledges—simply enjoy it. Remember when it is gone another will be sent immediately.

How would you like for Santa to bring you a roadster? A little bird told me he had already found a platinum watch studded with diamonds, which he thought you'd like.

Lovingly

DAD

P. S. I am sorry you have only three weeks vacation for Christmas but remember school closes May 1st, so you won't mind much, will you?

TEMPLE GARLANDS

There is a temple in my heart
Where moth or rust can never come,
A temple swept and set apart

To make my soul a home.
And round about the doors of it
Hang garlands that forever last,
That gathered once are always sweet;
The roses of the Past!

LETTERS TO SANTA FROM THE FACULTY

Dear Mr. Santa—
I'm just a little boy and I have been awful good all year. Will you bring me a new garage to go with my new house, a "sh"er, to keep girls quiet and just lots and lots of mental tests.
Hurry to see me,

A CONFESSION

Squares, triangles, futuristic outlines, all decorate my margins, fly leaves, and the pages of my notebook. Patiently I wait till my name is called by the teacher and my question answered—then my mind is free and I may unburden my weary brain and give free play to my pencil. Frantically I turn pages in my notebook. Ah,—there is a blank page, at last.

My mind works with freedom and spontaneity. There is no need for an incentive. Always there is more material. I am never at a loss.

If it is not circles and triangles, it is my A, B, C's. There is no capital in any handwriting that I have not mastered. I can draw faces from the outline of a circle, parenthesis, or a bracket. Rabbits with backs turned toward you; pussy cats with long tails; bottles, vases, mazes—all adorn my margins, fly leaves, and notebooks.

If I only had talent—who knows—but, oh well, I haven't —Sara Spiers

Christmas presents may be divided roughly into two classes those we don't like and those we didn't get.

I had a silver dime all shiny bright and new
And everybody wanted it, but I kept it just for you.
Mr. Gilliam said I was his—the Tea Room claimed it too
But neither one could take from me the dime I'd saved for you

The business office claimed it,
Fees and dues said "it's for me"
But I only clutched it tighter
The dime was yours you see
So I thought and thought and thought
Till I knew what I would do
So I gave away that dime to send this card to you.
Merry Xmas.

NUMBER 12

DRAMATIC CLUB TO PRESENT "PRUNELLA"

In the College Auditorium on January 22 at eight o'clock the Dramatic Club of the State Teachers College will present "Prunella" as their first play this year.

"Prunella" is a delightful three-act play, telling the story of how a young girl, Prunella, ignorant of the world and living in seclusion with her three aunts: Prim, Pidge and Privacy, glimpses over the garden wall the Pierrot of a band of traveling Mummets, is serenaded by him and runs away with him to become his Fierette. It is a very lovely tale which works slowly to a climax of great and touching beauty, when he realizes his fascination for her has turned to love.

This play is staged against a background of unusual beauty, which, with the quaint costumes and tuneful music with its plaintive note of love will charm you and carry you to a realm of dreams.

FRESHMAN COMMISSION ORGANIZES HIGH SCHOOL CLUB

A new and interesting project has been undertaken by the twenty girls who make up the Freshman Commission and who serve as the vital connecting link between their large class and the Y. W. C. A. It is the organizing and leading of a high school club in the Training School. Both the Freshman Commission and the Training School club are relatively new ideas—both having been introduced last year for the first time.

The Commission first unified itself by electing officers. Lorah Brewer was elected president; Anna Mae Ellis, vice-president; and Frances Willis, secretary. After a few meetings of planning and discussions, several of the Commission talked before the high school girls about the idea of starting a peppy service and play High School Club to be indirectly affiliated with the Y. W. of the college. An invitation was given to all interested to meet in the Lounge a day later. The response was enthusiastic. Over 20 girls met with the Commission group, and formed the nucleus of a High School Club. Elizabeth Mann was chosen president of the new club, and some peppy wide-awake beginning plans made. Business was then discarded, and each commission girl took a "little sister" under wing down town to get happily acquainted over a chocolate soda.

That was the beginning! The next meeting found the membership doubled and even greater interest manifested by the high school girls. A Christmas program featuring ole Santa and his laughable gifts, topped off the meeting after plans had been made for a New Year's party.

All in all, the club is just a beginning of what it may become. A definitely planned year's program, original and snappy committee work, socials that will lead to a closer friendship between the Freshman and the high school girls—these are the goals of present plans. Under the auspices of the college Y. W. C. A., and under the leadership and whole-hearted "buddy" spirit of the twenty Freshman girls, it hopes to eventually mean to the Training School all that the Y. W. C. A. means to S. T. C.—service, friendliness, and play, plus a development of future leaders.

THE NEW YEAR

I see not a step before me,
As I tread on another year,
But the past is still in God's keeping,
The future His mercy shall clear,
And what looks dark in the distance
May brighten as I draw near.
—Brainard.

GREETINGS TO THE NEW GIRLS

The old students of S. T. C. wish to extend a hearty welcome to the new girls who have entered with the New Year. There are some who have before been students here, they are returning home and we are glad there are some who are probably leaving home for the first time and we want them to feel that they are now one of us. We want S. T. C. to be a home to them as it is to every old student. Not only does each individual girl welcome the newcomers but each organization hopes that it may benefit as well as be benefited by these girls. The Y. W. thanks them for their hearty support and hopes that it may be the connecting link that will draw them closer to the spiritual life of the college. Again we extend our hand in welcome and wish that every girl might feel that we, the old girls are here to serve, so do not hesitate to call upon us.

The following new girls are with us:

CHANGES IN THE SUNDAY SCHEDULE

At a call meeting of the Student Body, Miss Mary White Cox, announced the changes which would take place in the Sunday schedules. Breakfast will be at 8:30 and dinner at 2:00. This change enables the maids of the dining room to attend church on Sunday nights.

This seems to be a change for the best. We like changes! We want more of them.

For what I will, I will, and there an end.—Shakespeare.

FARMVILLE TO HAVE NEW HOSPITAL

Due to the work which Farmville has accomplished, along the line of health and sanitation and of the interest of her people in this work, Farmville was chosen as the site for a hospital, part of the money for which is to be given by the Commonwealth Fund of New York City.

Farmville must earn part of the money herself, and for every dollar which she earns the Commonwealth Fund will add two more dollars. Her quota at present is $60,000, and a campaign to raise this money is now going on.

People for thirty-five miles are expected to contribute as well as the residents of Farmville, because the hospital will be for their use and protection. Everyone is showing an active interest in the campaign, and it is the hope of the manager that their quota will be reached.

Sunday the cause was presented to the people of the town by the ministers of the various churches, the subject of the Sunday sermons was the necessity and help of a hospital. Other organizations have been most enthusiastic and extensive advertising has been carried on as a part of the campaign.

Farmville is very lucky to have a chance to get so splendid a hospital—and it will be a great aid to her.

This school will undoubtedly be helped, and since the town always backs us in whatever we do, we want them to know that we are back of them and it is our earnest hope that they will succeed in getting one of the best hospitals in the State.

CLASS ISSUES OF ROTUNDA TO APPEAR SOON

Every year it is the custom for each class to elect a newspaper staff and edit The Rotunda. A faculty committee is elected to judge which issue is the best.

The class issues will begin with the first issue in February and the Seniors will edit the first paper. A complete staff will be elected from each class, electing no member of the regular Rotunda Staff. All extra cuts, colors, and extra features are to be paid for by the classes.

If there are other organizations of the school who wish to edit a paper, The Rotunda Staff will be glad to assist them.

NOTICE

It is necessary that all annuals be sold before January 26th. After that date no student can buy an annual as the order will be placed on that day.

A good resolve will make any port.

FORGET, FORGIVE, LOVE AND BE CONTENT.

The old year is over and with it go all our failures so let us forget them and try to be more of a success at the close of 1925 than we were in 1925. We have a wonderful chance to improve over our mistakes of the past. Let us take it.

If we have done wrong let us begin to do the right things now.
We have all had trials and hardships and we will cross more hard bridges in 1926 which are now unseen but let us begin with a good spirit so that we can bear them when they come.

We have held many things against our friends let us forgive all and start the year with an open heart and forgiving spirit. If we can not forgive people we are not worth the space we take up in this world. "To err is human, to forgive divine."
forgive it is hard, it is divine and so divine.

Let us try to be more considerate of others and take more interest in others and do more for them than we have in the past.
The spirit of unselfishness is of the highest virtue and nobles-praise. Let us love one another more than we have. Love, after all, is the greatest thing that exists among man, we should pratice it more. One of our greatest sins in this day of rush and hurry is that we do not love each other more.

Contentment cannot be bought but it can be gotten through the determination of making ourselves satisfied with what we have. To be content does not mean to be content with what we are but with what we have. Let us try to say with Paul, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content." We will be happy then for we are happy when we are satisfied.
Our lot in life is not so bad after all. There are always those around us who are not worse off. We all you be anybody but the person you are? No, you would not.

And now let us start the New Year with the lesson of the disciple,

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are o-good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

JOAN SAYS--

Happy New Year to you each and everyone--both old girls and the very new ones. May this truly be your happiest and most successful year. You know any one can wish you a happy New Year but it is only you yourself who can make it one. Your success and happiness depends on how you spend your time how you look upon life. It is always you.

I know of some girls whose lives seem to me to have been nothing but a series of disappointments and yet they are very happy, while girls who have all their hearts could desire and always are pouting and miserable. So we realize its not circumstance that makes a person happy but--shall we say love or faith a person has in God. If we know we have faith in God and He is for us who can be against us? Let us put our trust in Him and rejoice and be glad. And may 1926 be the happiest year for each girl in S. T. C.

A NEW LEAF.

To the desk of his teacher a little lad came
With his eyes downcast and his cheeks aflame,
And he said in trembling and hesitant tone,
"I've spoiled this leaf; may I have a new one?"
In place of the sheet so stained and blotted
She gave him a new one, clean unspotted;
His tear-stained face she lifted, they smiled,
And said, "Try to do better now, my child."

To my teacher I went on my knees, alone;
The days had passed by, and another year flown;
"Dear Father, hast Thou not a new leaf for me?
I've blotted so badly this other, I see."
God took the old leaf, so soiled and blotted,
And gave me a new one, clean, unspotted,
And into my sorrowing heart he smiled
Saying, "Try to do better now, my child."

MILITARY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

It is a surprising thing that military training is becoming a prominent part of the education offered by our civilian schools and colleges. During the school year of 1924-25 military instruction was given in more than 226 educational institutions of the United States. And on this list are many famous colleges such as Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Johns Hopkins.

Military training of the students is carried on under the encouragement of the War Department which supplies uniforms, necessary equipment and the men who teach these youths.
Apparently the purpose of the War Department is to go on, furthering military training, until all boys over fourteen years of age enrolled in the schools of the United States are beginning to take part in war.

Have we changed our opinion? Before the World War, we believed that no nation could have all its young men take training as soldiers could be truly devoted to peace. Even though military training is sold to the student and his father are mother very much talk about its being training for citizenship, army officers are in their manual that "they, (the young men) are being trained to be soldiers."

In an enlightening pamphlet on this subject Mr. Winthrop D. Lane urges that we "take action to secure to American youth such educational influences as will make unequivocally for peace."

AN OPEN AIR FREE LIBRARY

In a municipal park in Spain a small open-air free library has been established. A policeman has charge of it. Every morning he opens it, and at night he closes it up. Any one may take a book from the shelves without giving a receipt for it, may sit down and read under the shade of the trees, returning the book to the shelves when he is ready to leave.
No books have ever been stolen there.
For Spain and for Spanish boys and girls.

MR. R. C. BRISTOW, THE SUPER-VISOR OF BUILDING & GROUNDS
AT S. T. C.

"Has any body seen Mr. Bristow?"
"Mr. Bristow will fix it for you." "Ask Mr. Bristow, he'll do it." and remarks are often heard, in fact they are quite familiar to any girl at S.
T. C. What would we or what could we do without Mr. Bristow. He is the friend in need and the friend in deed of everybody from Dr. Jarman to the finest kindergartener. If its book cases we want, windows to be fixed, boxes we need--call on Mr. Bristow and he'll find you just what you want or can help you get it.

What would the teaching seniors do without him? I'm sure all A's would fall to Z's if we didn't have
Mr. Bristow to help us out.

Mr. R. C. Bristow, of Farmville, has been connected with the school for a number of years, having contracts for various jobs, but last summer Dr. Jarman made him Supervisor of Building and Grounds. This is no easy position as it covers all the hall dormitories, training school, Student and Men's buildings, and all of the building being done on the campus as well.

We look upon Farmville as one large family and we are mighty glad to add Mr. Bristow and to love him and thank him for all he has done for us in the past and in advance for all he is going to do for us in the future--'cause he's our friend.

THE SALT IN THE SEA

The sea is salty because during millions of years the rains have been wearing down the land and carrying the dust and sand from it into the sea. Enough of this has accumulated and there is enough salt in the material to make the sea salty.

THE DRAWING ROOM

In early days the entire household lived in the "great hall." Then the need of more privacy was felt and the withdrawing-room was introduced for the women of the house. From this term the modern word "drawing-room" is derived.

COMING THROUGH THE HALLS

A girl, who has a test for tomorrow, must go to her room, shut the world out, and begin concentrating on her work. Soon after she has comfortably settled herself for an hour's hard study, she is disturbed by a noise in the hall. The noise is a girl singing on her way to the library. The girl reviews what she was studying before the disturbance and tries to concentrate again.

In a few minutes she is annoyed again. This time a girl has stopped just outside her door and is telling her roommate about the wonderful time she had over the week-end.

After several such occurrences the poor student loses all her inclination to study and resorts to the writing of poetry.

(With apologies to Robert Burns)
If a body meet a body coming through the hall
If a body greet a body need a body bawl
Every girlie has a chumie she may want to call Yet all the girls must not disturb
When coming through the hall.

—Mary C. Royall

ON BEING CALLED "MISS"

Long ago when I was very young the title, "Miss" had a sort of radiant fascination for me. There seemed to be a sort of delightful thrill in the word. It implied dignity, power, command. With childish disregard I used to happily muse upon the time in the remote, very remote, future when I should be a "grown lady", tall and dignified with an abundance of light hair piled high upon my head.

The years slowly and imperceptibly slipped by. I passed several impatiently awaited birthdays, but I seemed to grow no older. I had not yet reached that enviable state of dignity. Soon I had attained the age of "almost eighteen". I had, somehow, unconsciously relinquished that former childish forecast of my "grown up" self. It had slowly slipped from my consciousness. I ceased to conjecture upon the matter at all.

At this time I came to S. T. C. My notions concerning college were the rather vague, alluring impressions gained from stories. I had never given the question of what I should be called a thought. Quite unexpectedly I was assailed on all sides by the long-awaited title, "Miss". Where was its radiance, its charm, its allurements; all the dignity, power and command which should naturally have accompanied it? Gone! In their place was left the cold, impersonal, business-like little word, "Miss", followed by my last name. This was very disappointing but there was at least the fascination of novelty in the situation.

Empty, hollow, inconstant quality! It, too, soon fled and I am left with two cherished dreams shattered. Although I do not consider myself quite "grown up", I know that they can't be realized. I am short, my hair is dark; and I almost detest the once radiant title, "Miss".

ATHLETICS

VARSITY GAME NEXT FRIDAY

On Friday, January 15, the varsity will play its first intercollegiate basketball game against Lynchburg College. This game will be played on the home floor and naturally the entire student body is expected to be present at the game;—that is, all who are worthy of being called a student of S. T. C. This game is really a new challenge to the college because this is the first time Lynchburg College will have been here and whatever the student body does about this game will be the impression that college gets of our school.

New songs are also going to be sung. This means that we must attend the pep meetings and learn the songs we're going to sing. We have our cheer leaders and we have our songs. The rest is left up to us.

There is no need to comment on the varsity. It is enough to say that they are doing their best to put S. T. C. where it belongs in athletics.

Although some will be added and some eliminated the varsity squad at present is composed of the following girls:

Mitchell, Vincent, Perkins, Hall (manager), Gary, White, Crute, Wells Wright, Woodson, Brewer, Lohr, Greggs, D. Jones, Poe, Burch, M. Holmes, G. Jarman, Whitehurst, R. Ponten, Hargrave, Volk.

CLASS VOLLEY BALL TO START

Do you remember all the fun and excitement we had last year at the volley ball games? Sometimes the games were regular comedies as well as "nip and tuck" games.

In about a week volley ball practice will begin. Every class has a chance to win ten points toward the cup in this sport. The Sophomores won the basketball points, and the Freshmen are ahead on the monogram. Who'll win the volley ball? Well, that all depends on the class that puts out the most work, "Who?" Time Will Tell.

CURRENT TOPICS

Three states, Virginia, Maryland, and West Virginia have agreed to enact unified fish protection laws for the Potomac river. Game commissions of the three states will make a tour of the river in January to plan for ridding it of pollution.

Mrs. Perngini remembers all the great contemporaries of her father, Thackeray, George Eliott, and other early Victorians. She resembles her father more than any other member of the family.

The Palestine expedition of the museum of the University of Pennsylvania has unearthed the forts used by Saul and David in their battles against the Philistines, according to an announcement received last week. The forts were found on a strategically located hill at Beth Sham, overlooking the Jordan valley. The explorers have unearthed relics of Arab culture, Crusaders, Romans, Greeks, Philistines and Egyptians.

Chicago: No, sir. Where I came from doesn't bother me. Its where I'm going.

THE SISTINE MADONNA

There hangs in Miss Coulking's class room this week, a copy of the greatest of all pictures—The Sistine Madonna, by Raphael Sanzio. It is the apex of all religious art, rising out of the domain of the particular and temporal into the realm of the universal and eternal.

At the first glance the picture appears small—the forms are less than life size—and to the eyes educated by the Gran' Duca and the Madonna of the chair, it appears rather dull in color. The larger areas of green, blue and gray, seem to give a dominance to the cooler colors; but presently one discovers that the colors are more subdued and the contrasts softer than usual, and that the whole canvas is suffused with the dim green—golden light of a forest glade in September.

Mary is faith incarnate. What a face she has! How beautiful! A blind, unintelligent faith fears nothing, because it knows nothing; an informed faith may have the assurance of certainty, but then it ceases to be faith, having passed over into knowledge. In true faith there lurks forever the question, the uncertainty, the possibilities of doubt. That is the secret of the look in Mary's face.

JAMESTOWN

We left the quaint old city of Williamsburg with a last lingering look back at its beautiful old college, and our car plunged down a red clay hill to what I thought must be a silver terror. Instead it was a calm placid pool of water spread out between banks of beautiful trees that dipped their leaves and vines into its brim and sent tiny ripples out from the shore. A lazy turtle sunned itself on a half sunken log, and around a distant curve glided a swift canoe with its musical paddle.

What a setting for Pocahontas, I thought, as we climbed a steep bank and moved on thru the glory of woods in spring. Vistas thru the trees gave us, at times, glimpses of hill sides, dogwood blossoms, and little white bridges across streams. Beautiful and prosperous farms came in sight and were left behind, and then, sharp against the blue of the sky, we saw the obelisk of the Jamestown monument. We thundered across the long bridge that spans the creek leading to the island, and then we were there!

This is Jamestown, a clear, sparkling emerald, set in the platinum stream of the James. Surely a jewel that Virginia is proud to wear upon her breast! Ancient trees with long festooning grape vines cover one end of the sacred enclosure, a memorial of that far away time where the first Virginians tied their boats to the trees and praised the "goodly vines". Here is a grass covered slope shaped like a triangle, and we read that it is all that remains of the old colony fort that protected our forefathers. We step silently into the old church, and stand looking up thru

Johnny: "No, I'd sell it to the museum, that chick is a rooster."

She: "What do you boys talk about at the fraternity houses?"

He: "The same things you girls do."

She: "Why, you terrible boys."

Y. W. C. A. CABINET ENTERTAINS NEW GIRLS

Friday afternoon, the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet entertained the new comers to our college at a tea, given in the Tea Room.

Miss London, with her sweet smile and charming, lovable manner, poured tea. The "old" girls met the "new" ones, and compared acquaintances and friends. A dolly in pink (Gertrude Quinn) and a Buster Brown (Jo Culin) performed their little "Doll Love Dance" to the great delight of all the girls. Afterwards, they teased to be dummies and became real people, who also enjoyed a chat over tea cups.

The Y. W. C. A. wishes to take this opportunity of publicly welcoming the new girls, and telling them how delighted we were to meet them at tea and talk with them. We are so glad to have new friends, to have you in our college, and we wish you all success and happiness in the coming year.

APS AND GOWNS BECOME MORE PROMINENT

What does a cap and gown signify? To an underclass man it may mean little, but to a Senior it means a great deal. It is to her the great reward, for which she has gradually climbed during four years college work; it is to her the appreciation for all of the phil drawbacks and struggles.

What should the cap and gown mean to underclassmen? First of all they should realize the position of a Senior, and show them the deference that befits their station. In other colleges Seniors are respected because of their position. This respect is shown in such common situations as holding a door for her to pass, offering her a seat in a car, and recognizing her importance through other small courtesies.

Shall S. T. C. be different from the rest? I heard a Freshman remark, the other day, that she could not distinguish a Senior from anyone else. Don't you think we should at least know our Senior class?

Hereafter, at regular Student Body and Student Committee meetings Seniors will appear in cap and gown that the underclassmen may know and respect the degree class of 1926.

MY SCHEDULE (With suitable apologies)

I have a little schedule that goes in and out with me,
And what can be the use of it is more than I can see.

It is very, very contrary from beginning to the end,
And I'm really sure and certain that I'll never call it "friend".

The funniest thing about it is the way it likes to act,
Not at all like proper schedules,—which are always full of tact;
For sometimes it's so full of life,—has seventeen full hours,
And then again it must be changed 'tis dead and calls for flowers.

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD THAT—

A dog turns around several times before lying down? Naturally you have—but have you ever heard why? Naturalists tell us that the dog in his wild state inhabited the jungles, and that it was necessary that he turn around several times before lying down in order that he might bend the leaves away from his body. This instinct still survives with the dog—although it is not at all necessary in his present domesticated state(?)

The first cannon ever used was in 1327, during the reign of Edward III at Cressy? At that time they were called "crakys of war". Shakespeare spoke of cannons and "bullets wrapped in fire" in "King John"

Bread Street was once a famous street in London? In 1302 the bakers of bread in London were forbidden to sell bread anywhere else save on Bread Street.

This one?
"Brandy Nan. Brandy Nan, left in the lurch,

Her fact to the gin-shop, her back to the church."

These lines were written by a wit on the statue of Queen Anne in front of St. Paul's Cathedral. Queen Ann of England was nicknamed "Brandy Nan" by the London populace because of her fondness for ardent spirits.

THE PATH TO THE MOUNTAINS

Gold and rose and blue at the end of a winter's day—

A golden path on the drifted snow where fairy feet may stray.

Way out there in the distance, the mountains high and blue

In all their magic splendor call and call to you.

Back of the great blue mountains the golden sun on high

Gathers the clouds about him—the rose-white clouds of the sky.

I hear the call of the mountains, blue with a rosy crown,

And wish that I could follow where the golden sun sinks down.

And now from the foot of the mountain the sunset's trail is spread—

A golden path on the white, white snow from the great sun overhead

And my feet would like to follow the golden trail, on to the mountains high.

Where the sun behind those walls of blue sinks in a rose-white sky.

he open roof of the tower from which stern eyes pointed along the barrels of guns, while faithful hearts rose to God in prayer below. The old churchyard, so bright with sunlight, holds men and women and little children that lived and labored, and died at Jamestown. The old college as passed so lately is a part of their work; the memorial to the first legislative body in America commemorates a part of their work; and now they sleep here in simple faith to that resurrection morn.

There is a garden, too, in Jamestown sweet with roses, violets, and old lavender. An old gray sun dial watches the shadows of the hours creep away, and birds, in the warmth of spring, sing among the flowers or perch upon the bird bath with a knowing cock of the head in our direction.

We sat on the banks of the broad, and lovely James to watch this perfect day die in a glory that is not on land or sea, but is found only in the sunsets at Jamestown.

NUMBER 13

"PRUNELLA" TO BE PRESENTED FRIDAY NIGHT

"Prunella", or "Love in A Dutch Garden" will be presented by the Dramatic Club on Friday night, January 22 at 8 p. m.

Miss Conling, Miss Tupper and the Home Economics Department painted the scenery, designed and made the costumes. Miss Barlowe supervised the dances. The music will be furnished by Virginia Potts, Virginia Woodward, and Mrs. W. D. Bowman.

The Dramatic Club has put much time and work on the production of this play and it promises to be a successful one.

Tickets are on sale by members of the Dramatic Club. Seats may be reserved at White Drug Store beginning Tuesday January, 19.

Reserve your seat early!

BOXLEY AND HODGSON NEW MEMBERS OF ROTUNDA STAFF

Virginia Boxley and Virginia Hodgson have been elected to the staff of the Rotunda, filling the vacancies occasioned by the failure of two of the members to return for this quarter. Boxley as assistant business manager, and Hodgson as assistant circulation manager measure up to the qualifications of such an office. Their literary ability, as well as their dependability was taken into consideration in this election.

The Rotunda needs new ideas, and the staff is expecting a great many novelties from these recently appointed members.

NEW PRESIDENT OF COLLEGE ORCHESTRA

At a recent meeting of the college orchestra, Josephine Peters was elected president for the coming year. The orchestra, under leadership of Mrs. King as director and "Joe" Peters as president, is expecting to carry out a number of musical programs during the remainder of the college year.

LYNCHBURG VARSITY ENTER-TAINED BY SENIOR CLASS

After the Lynchburg College-Farmville game Friday night, the Senior class entertained the two teams and officials. The guests were entertained very informally in the Lounge of the Student Building. Refreshments in the form of sandwiches and hot chocolate were served, after which songs and yells were given for the Lynchburg team. At 10:30 to the tune of "Good Night Lynchburg" the jollity of the evening ended.

RESULTS OF RECENT Y. W. C. A. DRIVES

The grand total of the last Y. W. C. A. drive was one hundred and fifty dollars ($150.00). This sum, of course, helps considerably on the Y. W. budget, but it isn't a beginning of what the Association needs and expects from the Student Body. The chairman of the Finance Committee has an interesting and novel plan which she hopes to put into practice in the near future. So have your money ready!

The newly created Bookroom in the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet room has proved very successful both last term and this term. Twenty dollars ($20) was the Y. W. C. A.'s reward this term for managing such a helpful sale shop. The purpose of such a "store" is three-fold:

1. To aid the Y. W. C. A.
2. To help girls sell used books.
3. To help in the reduction of book prices for those who buy.

THE CLUB OPERA

Under the direction of Mrs. King the Glee Club expects to present an opera sometime in February. The opera is a lovely one, and the rehearsals are being carried on with a great deal of enthusiasm. The entire club is working on the opera—and we can all look forward to its final presentation as one of the best amateur operas which we have ever seen presented here.

LITERARY SOCIETIES

ATTENTION FRESHMEN

For the benefit of the Freshmen a word should be said about literary societies. There are six literary societies in school, all of which are active and they are all striving toward satisfying their standards.

Any Freshman has a chance to become a member, providing she has shown some ability along a literary line, and that her English grade is average or above. This is the standard which the literary societies require. The council, composed of all the presidents and faculty committee on literary societies have set this standard and by it we hope that the status of the societies may be raised.

The purpose of the literary societies may be said to be threefold. First they wish to bring out and to discover new talent and abilities, second they wish to improve what talent they already have and to have the whole group concentrate on some one line of study which will mutually benefit it, and third they wish to bring the whole group together in a social way, and to create a social feeling between the groups.

When you consider these purposes, it is not hard to see what value a literary society may have for you, and if you receive an invitation to become a member of a society, do not just take it as a matter of course, but go into it with the feeling that you are going to help raise the standard, help carry out the purpose, and that you are going to be one more factor that will put life into the literary societies.

To those who may not receive an invitation stop and think! If your English grades aren't what they should be try and raise them, if you have hidden literary talent try and show it, so it will be found out. In other words, make yourself reach the required standard.

The names of the six literary societies are: Argus, Cunningham, Pierian, Athenian, Ruffin and Jefferson. The literary society bulletin board is in the hall under the library, right in the midst of the English class room. On this bulletin board is a space for every society. The names of the members and other information is placed here. To read the bulletin board and see by the girls, who are members, just what the literary societies could and should stand for.

If there is any information which you would like to have, go to any member of any society, or to any member of the faculty. You should be interested in these societies—for they are your organization and are interested in you.

VARSITY DEFEATS LYNCHBURG COLLEGE IN CLEAN GAME

Score is 41-21

Friday night the varsity defeated Lynchburg College in the first game of the year with a score that lacked only a point of doubling that of the opposing team.

The first three points were won by the home team by making three foul goals good. The forwards were accurate and steady in shooting. Practically every goal tried from the foul line went into the basket and thus steadily added to S. T. C.'s score.

The outstanding characteristic of both teams was the clean game they played. The opposing team as well as the S. T. C. varsity never once faltered in playing the game in the highest and finest way.

Of our team one member of the faculty summed up the outstanding points in the following words. "I have never seen a team play together as well. The teamwork was beautiful. No one person could be picked out as the best player for the whole team played as one."

At the end of the first half the score was 9-23 in S. T. C.'s favor. Although the score was doubled, the Lynchburg girls fought and proved that they were sports in losing.

The enthusiasm shown by the students proved that the school is behind the team.

The students may be interested to know that the office had a letter recently from Assint, Egypt, asking that Dr. Jarman send pictures floor plans, etc., of our dormitories as they were ready to build a girls' dormitory for the school there and a gentleman in New York has referred them to ours as unusually good as well as attractive.

NOTEBOOKS

Perhaps nothing holds quite such a prominent place as the notebook at S. T. C. There are notebooks and notebooks of various sizes and descriptions thrust upon us during our life as students here. As freshmen, we hear the cry as we fill in our class cards, "Now I want you to keep a notebook"—as Sophomores, we know the cry, as Juniors, we expect the cry and as Seniors, we hate it—because we understand the meaning of a notebook. Of course, some good comes from everything worthwhile; but often I have wondered if the notebook is really worthwhile. As I have said, there are types of notebooks. One is the type which recalls identically every word spoken by the teacher, another records word for word noteworthy passages from library books, and still another is composed of any material seen fit to be thus recorded by a student. The latter type hold for me first place, for in it is placed individual thoughts and compositions peculiarly adapted to the mind of each student. As for the other types—what mean they to us? We complete our notebooks straight from the shoulder as directions demand—but what of the outcome? We, carefully and diligently, arrange out a table of contents, number each page, become weary-eyed with copying upon unruled paper carefully selected subject matter and our notebook is given in at the end of the term to the teacher. We get a grade on the work—but what have we gained—not individuality, not literary taste, for all love and interest has been thwarted by matter of fact directions. What of the notebook which is kept through the spontaneity of our own mind? We place in it thoughts, savings, directions perhaps which are to us worthwhile; we grasp a thought and in our own words record it for future use. This notebook is to us our own, not the words of the teacher, not the words of an author, but the words of an individual for individual reference. The required notebook is distastful; the informal notebook is appreciated. Is not this notebook best after all? Surely, teachers appreciate initiative and individuality; surely, ability can be best judged by spontaneous effort, and so we hope that S. T. C. may soon graduate from the formal, required notebook.—F. R. B.

START WHERE YOU STAND.

I.

Start where you stand and never mind the past,
The past won't help you in beginning new,
If you have left it all behind at last
Why, that's enough, you're done with it, you're through;
This is another chapter in the book,
This is another race that you have planned,
Don't give the vanished days a backward look,
Start where you stand.

II.

The world won't care about your old defeats
If you can start anew and win success,
The future is your time, the time is fleet
And there is much of work and strain and stress;
Forget the buried woes and dread despairs,
Here is a brand new trial right at hand,
The future is for him, who does and dares,
Start where you stand.

III.

Old failures will not halt, old triumphs aid,
Today's the thing, tomorrow soon will be;
Get in the fight and face it unafraid,
And leave the past to ancient history;
What has been, has been; yesterday is dead
And by it you are neither blessed nor banned,
Take courage, man, be brave and drive ahead,
Start where you stand.

"GOING TO PRAYERS?"

"Going to prayers, Peg?"

"Nope, don't think I will. Too much to do tonight."

And thus the numberless Pegs, as they nightly make such remarks, cause the Goddess of Irony to smile—and smile. "Too much to do"—such a trite, overly used excuse! You and I and all the Pegs and Janes and Marys—we find time to study, time for hours of confidences, time for the movies, time to write endless epistles, time to play, and laugh, and work; yet when the time comes for the fifteen minutes that we set aside for the lovely little service known as "Prayers" each night we hesitate and ask, "Too much to do?"

We pride ourselves on being well rounded, fair minded, sportsmanlike. Yet—even though we be letter perfect in recitations, noticeably punctual at every type of meeting—are we being the square sport when we forget the little tryst we might spend face to face with our real selves each day? It isn't necessary to be painfully serious or the proverbial star gazer in order to have one daily Christian habit in our lives, is it? Religion should be a happy, lifting, singing thing; it should be the personification of all that is unselfish and lovely. A gentle, considerate act is religion. A master of painting, in its exquisite coloring and thought, is religion. Laughter, sheer, bubbling joy is religion, for the first step in being pious is being happy!" said one of our friends! A poem is nearer religion than a stilted sermon. Friendship, when it forgets self, reaches a place of sacrifice and depth that makes it in itself religion. In all probability, you and I and the Pegs and Janes and Marys are unconsciously having the things that are sincere and jolly and worthwhile. But wouldn't it be "dandy" to see every girl go to "Prayers" as regularly and naturally as she goes to Chapel? The "new today" wouldn't be a time of rushing, hurrying, mustn't-stop-to-think moods, but one may do quite a bit of thinking and be unexplainably rested in fifteen minutes, don't you think? Most of us love the little service "Prayers" and have found it just an excuse in itself for being its a worthy custom of our S. T. C.!

"Going to Prayers, Peg?"

"Wouldn't miss for worlds. Wait for me, Jo!"

—L. H. B.

JOAN SPEAKS...

Last spring, at the close of school, I sent twenty of my girls to the Y. W. C. A. conference held at Blue Ridge North Carolina.

I have felt and noticed an underlying current of peculiar attachment which has bound these fortunate ones of my number, who attended this conference. Recently at an hour when there was tranquil peace in my Hall, one of these girls crept to my side and said that she wanted to have a confidential talk with me about her visit to Blue Ridge.

How eager I was to hear it! I had waited three months for some outward expression, which I knew would be obliged to come forth eventually. "Joan," she said, "Have you ever seen so much that was beautiful, have you ever heard so many things which were true, uplifting and inspiring, have you ever felt so deeply moved within, that your very soul seemed to be swelling with love and praise for the Maker of all which is Good? If you have sensed any of these feelings, dear Joan, then you have a clear conception of the spirit of Blue Ridge."

Yes, I recognize this beautiful spirit and it is for this reason that I urge all of you in this large Student Body, who possibly can, to begin now, to plan to attend the next Conference.

What's become lately of the fellow whose standard telephone gag was, "Central, are all the wrong numbers busy?"

There is a grand opportunity for one of our youthful novelists to make a sensation by writing a clean, healthful story of American life.

The wealth of the United States has increased 72.2 per cent since 1912. Now if we could only figure out how to get hold of our share of this gain!

The old-time barefoot boy with cheeks of tan now has a daughter who goes barefoot at the lake and thinks nothing of being tanned almost everywhere.

Charity should begin at home, and it shouldn't end there.

No one ever strikes because the wages of sin are not higher.

ON DIETING

To some, such a subject is vague, to others, it is non-resistant, but to me it is all important, for I am now at battle with the greatest forces in the world, the army of calories, and an attempt to defeat such a battalion is no easy task.

You, who have never undergone the torture of such a process will little realize the true meaning of the word diet, but I can truthfully say that no other word in the English language involves such exhibition of determination, will-power and imagination.

First of all I name determination in connection with dieting, but really deciding is the first step to take. Of course, anyone can decide to do anything. It is altogether a cheap amusement and one which requires not effort whatever; consequently I decided to diet. How simple it all seemed to me then. Well do I remember the occasion. It was after a dinner of roast chicken with all my favorite vegetables and hot rolls, topped with strawberry cream and chocolate cake. Naturally I did feel a bit uncomfortable as I arose from the table, and imaginatively viewing quite a few excessive pounds as I gazed into my mirror. I then and there decided to diet. Oh! it was so easy at eight p. m. that night, as, happy and proud of my decision, I traveled to slumberland not with visions of creamed potatoes, hot chocolate and nut sundaes, but with dry toast, fish and tea with lemon. But at eight a. m., what a different story. I was hungry—and there were waffles for breakfast!

Then came the next step; determination. Having determined to do a thing the ordeal of doing it is no easier. Perhaps you never set before alluring, starchy foods, hungry and yet determined not to eat them. And the most fattening of them are without a doubt always your favorites. There are the pastries covered with chocolate or heaped high with whipped cream, but no matter what charms they hold for the starving dieter they must be passed up by sheer determination to overcome a craving for such fattening delicacies. I guess determination is the greatest force in this mighty trial for none but a person with the strongest will in the world could call for a cocoa with a heaving countenance when his little inner consciousness whispers, "get a chocolate stir." But the waitress has gone with the order. You are glad she didn't linger, perhaps you might have weakened and broken the diet. And then she returns with most inviting cream, fruit and nut combinations in the world prominently arranged upon the waiter, and one wee glass in the middle for yourself. Then and there, I consider the dieter at the climax of his career, for will-power has won the day, and as you sign away with that delightful expression, which is the dieter's greatest attribute, your friends linger over enticing spoonfuls of chocolate sauce and torture you with a "mm—hm—, this is so good," as they devour the "best till last" cherry.

At this point I bring forth imagination, for without imagination dieting

ATHLETICS

PEP MEETINGS

Prior to the Friday night basketball game the girls of S. T. C., realizing the necessity of their part in the contest, attended various pep meetings which were held in order to learn the new original songs and also the yells of the school.

Three organized songs were written this year by S. T. C. girls. All of these have expressed S. T. C.'s attitude toward the "sportsmanship and grit" desired at all games. Virginia Potts, Virginia Vincent, and Mary Booker are the three composers of the songs, which we claim as our own.

The pep meetings did much toward Friday nights victory because the team realized that the entire school was back of them in every way. They showed it in their pep, their enthusiasm and their "Graham spirit." Who could instill a cleaner sportsmanlike spirit in the minds of each girl in school better than Miss Graham? To measure up to Miss Graham's expectation in sportsmanship is the school's highest goal.

WHITE ELECTED CAPTAIN OF VARSITY

Online White, '27 has been elected captain of the varsity for this year. White has always been noted for her true sportsmanship as well as for the way in which she co-operates with every member of the varsity in every thing attempted. She played on the 'arsity last year and has not only won her varsity "F" but is also the wearer of her class numerals and the S. T. C. monogram. In spite of her athletic ability she also knows how to effectively transact business affairs. With this rare combination everyone knows that the right captain was selected.

WOODSON AND MITCHELL RE-EIVE MONOGRAMS

"Jackie" Woodson and Jean Mitchell are the first two girls to receive the S. T. C. monogram this year. This means that they are the only two up to the present date who have measured up to the all-round athletic requirement which is necessary for contestants of this award.

To win a monogram is an honor. Every girl in all four classes has a chance to share this honor. Why not try it?

Many persons who pass for optimists are merely too lazy to kick.

Even when a man wants the earth he doesn't want it thrown at him in the form of mud.

Still bobbed hair is much more fair to the sutor. He knows all of it is fastened to one end.

"The easiest thing for an auto to run into is debt"— Toledo Blade. Ask any pedestrian what he thinks.

Any man who is forced to pay alimony can sympathize with Germany in her unwillingness to pay reparations.

WHAT IS THE MONOGRAM CLUB?

Who were those ten girls dressed in white last Friday? Surely you know they were the Monogram Club girls. Did you say, what is the Monogram Club? It represents first of all 100 per cent sportsmanship; and to become a member one must win a varsity letter or a college monogram and be voted unanimously into the club, by its members. The letter "F" may be won by playing in 40 per cent of the quarters of the varsity games.

To make an "S. T. C." one must be an all-around athlete accomplishing such feats as climbing the rope in form, throwing the javelin, hiking ten miles, and passing the standard high jump. From this short list one can see that the Monogram Club girls have worked. Can you get a monogram? Of course you can, if you are willing to work and sacrifice your Monday afternoon for practice and tests.

Come on out, join the merry group and wear a monogram with these 100 per cent sportsmen.

The Monogram Club takes great pleasure in announcing "Jackie" Woodson as a new member. They are also proud that one old member, Jean Mitchell received her S. T. C.

DR. WALMSLEY DISCUSSES INTERESTING TOPICS

Tuesday, Dr. Walmsley discussed in his current event talk some of the most interesting topics of the day. His first topic was that of the annual coal strike. The strike still continues with the operators growing desire for control. An agreement between the miners and operators can be reached, but how soon in the future can not yet be determined.

The second topic discussed was our American forestry—today one of the greatest problems of the West. The question to be agreed is whether the millions of acres of great Redwood trees—the oldest living thing in North America—be allowed to stand, or shall all this space be thrown open for agriculture.

The next topic discussed by Dr. Walmsley was that of Mr. Hoover and our present radio condition. Today there are eight hundred radio broadcasting stations in the United States on eighty wave length, and two hundred and fifty new ones waiting to be opened. Dr. Walmsley stated that Mr. Hoover thought the two most vital questions in the radio world were: How much air do we own? Can we prevent foreign messages from coming thru our air? Mr. Hoover thinks that of the latter question is possible, we should not try to prevent foreign messages from coming through our air as it draws other countries into closer organization with the U. S.

Irene Agce, daughter of Mrs. M. E. K. Agce, and Mr. William Bennett Harg were married on December 29. Irene formerly lived in Farmville. The groom is a graduate of the West Virginia University and a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. They will live in Williamson, West Virginia, where Mr. Harg is engaged in the practice of law.

At the Presbyterian Church in Collegestown on December 31 occurred the marriage of Virginia Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Wallace Morrison to Mr. Curtis P. Harper of Danville. Mr. Harper is engaged in business in Lynchburg where the couple will live in the future.

The wedding of Miss Frances Tull, who attended S. T. C. last quarter, to Mr. Henry L. Harrison, son of Senator Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md., has recently been announced. Wedding bells are said to prefer to toll in the Springtime, but they seem to be busy the whole year round if announcements at S. T. C. are to be depended upon.

And I wondered if darkness was immortal rest—
Then I turned to the bright wondrous glow of the East—
Then I knew, I knew God, that I was not a beast.

CURRENT TOPICS

The Bookmen's Choice.—In answer to a questionnaire, "What Magazines Do You Read Most Carefully?" sent to 450 leading booksellers in the United States by Doubleday, Page and Company, the International Book Review tells us that it received the most votes.

The ten most popular magazines and the number of votes they received are given as follows:

International Book Review	115
Literary Digest	111
Saturday Evening Post	91
Atlantic Monthly	91
Saturday Review	78
Scribner's	71
World's Work	64
Harper's	54
Century	36
Time	33

Twenty-eight other magazines received less than twenty votes each—Literary Digest.

If you can't sleep at night and your heart seems bad,

And one minute you're happy and the next you're sad,

And you feel sort of glum, then want to prance;

If you keep counting your money and gaze into space

And see when you do just a certain face,

If your mind seems dull, then goes in a whirl,

For the love of Mike,—go marry the girl!

GALOSHES

The snow has brought them forth—these numerous pairs of galoshes. Just as the slickers have replaced the once stylish umbrella, so have galoshes usurped the throne once occupied by the low, rubber overshoe. Flippity-flop they come; sides hitting and buckles jangling—what of the snow drifts when one is installed in a pair of galoshes? There is probably no article of clothing quite so popular at S. T. C. as these would-be boats. There is no doubt as to their popularity. Owners of galoshes are many and their owners love them. But do the owners love them? No—they also hold a place in the borrower's heart for such remarks as, "May I wear your galoshes?"—"May I have them when she returns them?" or "Can't I use them for an hour?" are familiar cries at S. T. C. Galoshes are here—are they here to stay? What will be the outcome? Will they remain forever as lovable, black galoshes or will fashion soon change them into particles of even greater worth—galoshes of various shades and hues; beautiful greens, reds, blues, and yellows to match the well-beloved slickers? The evolution of the world goes on and on—and so perhaps we may live to see the evolution of our dear friends—the galoshes!

THE TALLEST AND THE SHORTEST

The tallest race of people in the world are the Patagonians who inhabit the horn of South America. They average five feet ten and one-third inches. The shortest people are the Laplenders.

is a total failure. You must be the proud possessor of the most wonderful imagination in the world to become a true blue dieter. You must imagine that limeades are better than pineapple sundaes until you convince yourself that they are; you must deny yourself hot, buttered rolls until you can say with a peaceful countenance, "you know, I really don't care for rolls at all." You must imagine that your dry toast is short cake, and then the crowning achievement you have to imagine you are winning the battle, for without faith all is lost. Ah! the process of dieting is truly a long drawn out fight, but by playing the game you will, from a fairly tale point of view, at any rate, emerge victorious and with flying colors.

HIGHWAY SAFETY CONTEST GIVES $6,500 TO PUPILS AND TEACHERS IN U. S. A.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Planning the solution of the traffic problem a generation ahead is the policy of the Highway Education Board, according to a statement here announcing the fifth national safety campaign, open to all elementary schools of the country.

The campaign includes an essay contest for pupils and a lesson contest, in which teachers in elementary schools are to compete. In these contests $6,500 is given for the best essays and the best lessons, the prizes the gifts of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which co-operates with the board in its safety enterprises. The contests close February 24, of this year.

In addition, engraved certificates of merit will be given those schools in each State which comply with certain requirements of the highway organization. These certificates bear the signature of Dr. J. J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, Department of the Interior, and of the State Superintendent of Schools, or the principal school official. Dr. Tigert also is chairman of the Highway Education Board.

Announced in Schools

The contest is being announced now to the schools of the country. Pupils are requested to write essays of 500 words in length on the subject "My School's Share in Highway Safety." Four hundred and thirty-eight medals and as many cash prizes will be given for the best essays in the several States, while three national awards will be given for the premier essays that are written by the pupils of the fifth, six, seventh and eighth grades in school. The first national prize consists of a gold watch and a trip to Washington with all expenses paid, the winning pupil being under the care of board officials.

In each State a gold medal and a check for $15 will be given for the best essay, and a silver medal and a $10 check for the second best paper. The number of third prizes, each consisting of a bronze medal and $5, varies somewhat in proportion to the elementary school enrollment. New York State, for example, receives 27 State prizes, while the number of Alabama is nine, for California 13, Texas 19, Illinois 20, and other states in proportion.

Teachers' Contest

In the teachers' contest, three national prizes are given, amounting to $1,500, but the first consists of a check for $500 and a trip to Washington for the best lesson. The second and third prizes, respectively, are $300 and $200.

The contests are the fifth of a concerted program undertaken by the board at the suggestion of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, looking toward some amelioration.

IMPORTANT ELECTIONS TO BE HELD IN APRIL

Have you stopped to consider the part you will play in the success of your school when the first week in April rolls around? Perhaps you wonder why anything which will happen in April should be discussed in January. This is why. It is then that the three new presidents of the chief organizations in school—Student Government, Y. W. C. A., Athletic Association and Editor-in-Chief of the Rotunda and Rotunda will be elected. Yes—the elections will take place in April, but what should preclude the elections? Careful consideration of possible candidate must be given by each student. Who can best serve her school in each capacity? Does she show ability to lead in such a way that others will wish to follow? Is she conscientiously fitted, for such work? Remember girls—these are your organizations and the votes cast will be your votes. Let us one and all think carefully that our school may grow bigger and finer through our efforts.

TEA FOR Y. W. C. A. AND ADVISORS

Miss London Entertains

It was one of those affairs that no one ever dares miss—not even to pass over history for a coming test. What? Why, tea with Miss Lila and Miss Willie London. Miss Lila London entertained the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, Miss Willie London and Faculty Advisors Saturday afternoon in their adorable home on the hill. A most delightful afternoon it was, too. The last rays of the sun smiled a cheerful welcome through the windows on faculty and girls grouped about an open fire place, chatting merrily over tea cups.

Have you ever been in that home? No. Well, you'll just love it when you do. Everything from the dear old brass knocker on the door to the quaint old fashioned furniture fairly breathes and radiates romance. Then too, there is the adorable music-box that emits fruit cake from the top and French music from the bottom. "Dibby" went back to the days of childhood just to play with it, and we all wanted to slip in a voluminous pocket to bring it back with us. But no, it is still there for one to hear—that useful box of melody from over the Atlantic.

And though "Chubbe" insisted that we'd have "five courses for supper," we didn't even care if we had cheese. Isn't that sufficient proof that we did full justice to sandwiches, cakes, almonds, and candy? We leave you to judge.

We went, and such a lovely afternoon. We came away happy, with a smile. For such a lovely occasion is rare.

Come only once in a while. And dear Miss Lila and Willie too. We had a wonderful time you know. We enjoyed the tea and each minutes stay. Because we love you so.

CURRENT EVENT TALK FOLLOWED BY EXERCISES IN HONOR OF LEE'S BIRTHDAY

After a discussion of current events Tuesday, Dr. Walmesley gave a talk in interesting happenings in the life of General Robert E. Lee. Leading up to the talk Dr. Walmesley gave an account of a measure before Congress now, that United States appropriate two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to restore Arlington, the home of Lee, as it was during his life.

The Student Body honored the memory of this famous Southern general singing his favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation." Following the singing of the hymn, Mr. Grainger read Lee's favorite passage from the thirty-seventh Psalm, twenty-eight to fortieth verse.

ROBERT E. LEE

O great Virginia! true son of the South.

Today we bare our heads to honor thee.

That in our heart may still be kept aglow.

Thy high ideals, thy stainless memory.

O Lee, thou wast the champion of the right.

In love's and duty's paths wast always found;

Although the way was often steep and hard.

Thou ne'er forsook it for the level ground.

O leader of the South, when on thy steed.

Thy gray-clad heroes saw thee pass along.

Your presence cheered their hearts, and helped them bear

Their burdens and their sorrows with a song.

O may we ever, keep thee in our hearts.

And walk the straight paths thou hadst ever trod.

So when we leave this earth—our dwelling place

We may, like thee, come face to face with God!

VA. PRESS ASSOCIATION MEETS IN FARMVILLE

Members of the Virginia Press Association were guests of the Lion's Club at a banquet at 7:30 in the Tea Room of State Teachers College on Friday evening, January 15. One hundred places, including fifty Lions and fifty guests, were filled at the banquet tables. The convention of the association was held at Hotel Weyanoke January 15-16. Many speakers of national importance on the program discussed newspaper problems.

Along with such distinguished as J. C. Lathier, former secretary of the Virginia Press Association and now secretary of the World Press Congress, it is interesting to note that an address on "High School Journalism" was given by Joseph Nettles, editor of the "High School Beacon," Newport News, Va.

At the opening session Dr. J. L. Jarman, President of State Teachers College, was called upon for impromptu remarks. He responded with his usual felicity in part as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Press: We are delighted to have you in Farmville. At State Teachers College just across the street are girls from all over Virginia who have friends everywhere in Virginia. We are glad to have representatives of the Virginia Press in our midst. Representatives of the press are leaders of thought. You are doing a great work for Virginia. The Lion's Club of Farmville, of which I am a member, is especially pleased to greet you. It will be a pleasure to take you through State Teachers College."

The central thought that Dr. Jarman emphasized was that each member of the audience should not only be loyal to his own locality, but that he should be big enough "to think in terms of Virginia" and help promote the welfare of the whole state. He gave as a concrete example the proposed National Park for Virginia. This is the first of a series of six conventions scheduled for Farmville during 1926.

NOTICE

The Senior Class has decided that it is not advisable for them to wear caps and gowns at student body meetings.

The Senior Class will not edit the first class issue of the Rotunda, as was announced in last week's paper. It will probably edit the last of the series of class issues.

DREAMS

Beyond the sky where dreams are born
The dreams that fill the human heart

Is born again, dear heart, for you—
My far-off dreams have come to earth.

DRAMATIC CLUB PLAY PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE AT S. T. C. AUDITORIUM

On Friday night, January 22, the Dramatic Club presented to a packed house its first play of the season. Granville Barker's and Lawrence Housman's charming and colorful drama, Prunella or Love in a Dutch Garden, was most gracefully performed. The orchestra under the direction of Mrs. King added the finishing touches of melody to the performance.

If exaggeration be an evil it would be, to the critic of Prunella, rather a difficult task to avoid the appearance thereof since all which she wishes to say amounts to but one thing—praise of the performance.

Perhaps a brief mention of individual players might be in order here—though the leads were so well supported that a homogeneity and finish was attained which would have otherwise been quite impossible. Miss Lucy Halle Overbey as Pierrot carried that whimsical role with ease throughout though it might be said that she was at her best in the third act after the realization of the selflessness and conceit of Pierrot had been cast off and instead of the carefree and heartless Pierrot, he became humble and deeply in love with his once lost Pierrette. Miss Frances Sale possesses a delightfully musical speaking voice as well as attributes of grace and charm of appearance not unlikely to attract the attention of a discriminating Pierrot. Her innocent air reminded some of the audience of her fine work as Betty, in "Friend Hannah."

But love, the beautiful and heroic statue, deserves a paragraph to herself. A SPIDER CRAWLED UP HER ARM AND SHE DID NOT MOVE.

NOTEBOOKS AGAIN.

Fearful that I have overstepped the bounds of fairness in a critical survey of the required college notebook I willingly open this subject once more for discussion. That I have condemned the required notebook does not condemn its qualities and there must be worthwhile qualities attached to such a piece of work or its prominence would have gradually diminished at S. T. C. Surely this has not happened for at the beginning of each term loose-leafs seem to be more in evidence and so, that my criticism may be clear, that I may not deal unjustly with anything so closely connected with my life here I quote these thoughts from the Degree class of 1925: "In some instances a notebook may be your best friend. It receives the precious pearls of knowledge as they fall from the lips of the learned pedagogue and retains them safely. It may contain interesting bits of information culled here and there from various magazines or papers; all the interesting little incidents that make the acquiring of knowledge a pleasure."—M. K. M.

"Notebooks are very helpful in getting the students to express themselves more perfectly and more clearly. They include all three parts of composition: subject matter, language and organization, and mechanics and can be graded just as composition. Thus you see that notebooks are very beneficial to students."—R. L. B.

"Keeping notebooks in college is very much like owning a Ford in the country. They are awfully hard to get started, they are pretty rough traveling, but after all they are nice things to have and they help you out of many tight places."—M. H.

And now, I confess I have had some followers but there are two sides to every question and I feel that the notebook may regard me henceforth with a less critical eye. —F. R. B.

HOME DEPARTMENT NOTES.

In the continuous bustle and rush of our daily activities, we can find only a short period of time, which we can devote to cleaning up our rooms.

When we have eight o'clock classes we barely have enough time to sweep and make up our beds before it is time for us to rush to our classes. The many other little tasks, such as dusting, emptying waste baskets, putting away clothes, and straightening up generally, take even more time than the first two most important tasks. But we must let these go or we will be late for class, and we consider the latter the "greater of the two evils."

In the view of these facts, should the members of the home department be so conscientious in grading our rooms? If the student's point of view is taken into consideration, it is believed that they will be more lenient.

We all know that two room warnings mean an E-note, and that the latter keeps one off the honor roll. This misfortune often befalls a hard-working student, who, on account of her many classes, has only a small amount of time which she can possibly give to cleaning up her room. Should such a student, after working hard and earning good grades, have to be kept off the honor roll because of home department notes?

Table absences are often incurred unavoidably. Quite frequently students are locked out of the dining room, or through some misunderstanding they are marked absent when they are only visiting at some other table.

Should home department notes be put on the same plane as class notes in that they keep one off of the honor roll? Since they are obviously not of the same value, then they should not have the same effect.

SMALL COURTESIES AND KINDNESSES

Noah Webster, Esq. when asked point blank for his views on the subject is reported to have exclaimed in no uncertain tones that courtesy is "an act of civility or respect," and whether he spoke from experience or not he certainly had the direct idea. But he should have added "according to the state of mind one is in," which would have been just ambiguous enough to have been crucial.

The first act of courtesy very probably began back in A. I. when Adam thanked the Angel for closing the gate behind him instead of letting it bang shut. Now whether Adam was in a pleasant state of mind or not history fails to record; but I am sure that we can picture the thing for ourselves.

And so little kindnesses and small acts of courtesy have come down to us as our heritage. Are we taking them to heart? If there is anything we all hate more than an overly-polite person it's a more overly-polite person, yet I do not believe that any one of us has ever seen a person who was really too polite. Oh possibly he had little mannerisms, ways of saying and doing things which were strange to us, but that isn't any reason why we should disdainfully say that he is "putting on airs."

There are thousands of ways in which we girls could make life more pleasant for those with whom we live. For instance, take the teachers, poor souls they have enough on them already without adding to their burdens! When entering the dining room, stand aside and let the teacher go first—or better still step up and walk in with "the faculty". When one is running the gauntlet, literally, of almost a thousand girls a little companionship is indeed delightful. If a teacher should come to the table, or into a room, or even stop to speak to a girl in the hall, don't you think it looks better, as well as makes her feel better, to rise?

Towards the girls we all know our short-comings — I won't mention pushing, yelling and scrambling, we know about them—but I will say that a friendly smile and a cheerful "Hi!" go a long way toward helping a poor, bewildered girl.

Our conduct in general is—well, fair. I wonder what the members of the faculty would say about it? Just recently we've heard two of the all powerful express their opinions in uncertain tones, and I might go so far as to say that it seems to have helped us a bit, so far. Listen let's make a bargain, among ourselves of course not to whisper or prepare for a nap when any form of entertainment is being presented to us. Nine hundred girls can raise a heap of noise even when they sigh.

Don't let's allow Father Adam to put one over on us in such a small, and yet so important, a thing. No matter who started it, nor when, but little courtesies and kindnesses certainly spread a joy over things in general and people, students in particular.—V. W. B.

A LOGICAL ENDING.

As Mary gazed sadly down at the fraternity pin which she held in her hand she decided that she would never, never, have anything else to do with another boy—especially a college freshman.

Of course she was going to send the pin back. She didn't want to wear it anyhow, especially after what had just happened. No, she didn't mind sending it back, she was glad to be rid of it. Over and over Mary repeated these words, trying very hard to convince herself they were true.

But then as she looked at the pin all the incidents that were connected with it came back to her. She had been happy during the months she had worn the pin, and of course been in love with the owner. Yes, Bobby was a nice boy, even if he was a freshman. It was hard not to regret just a little that it was all over.

Would life ever be quite the same? This thought came to Mary as she prepared to wrap up the pin. She had idealized Bobby; she had thought just as every other girl had since time began, that this was different; they would not disagree like so many of their friends, and then suddenly to have every happy dream of love and the future shattered! It was a terrible disillusionment, to say the least. Mary was quite sure she would never go out with another man.

Still she gazed at the pin. Meantime her roommates chided with such remarks as these, "Don't be silly, Mary, you are the dumbest ever, to waste a thought over that infant." Well, perhaps she was, but she comforted herself with the fact that she would never think about another boy.

As the phone rang, Mary, continued to pack "his" letters, picture and miscellaneous things in a box. She would send them the first thing in the morning, indeed she would. She would feel better after she had sent them, and she could settle down to a meaningless life. The phone continued to ring. No she was not going to answer it. No one would call her up. Why should she be interested in the old phone?

"Oh Mary, someone wishes to speak to you."

Well, of all the nerve, to intrude upon the last thoughts she was ever going to waste on a man.

As she went down the steps she repeated, "No indeed, no one ask me for a date; I've had my last one." But as she recognized the voice of Lloyd at the other end of the wire another thought came to her mind. Why shouldn't she go out with other boys? She would show Bobby that it was all the same to her, whatever it cost her to do it. And Lloyd was cute; she had always liked Lloyd. Of course, she was never, never going to love anyone else—but, she might as well give Lloyd a date. Alva Drummond.

ATHLETICS

Volley Ball

Can you believe it? Volley ball has started out with a bang. The classes seem to have "picked up" and all are determined to win those ten points toward the cup. Volley ball means just as much to a class as basket ball and the sooner the school realizes that—the better. And the good part about it is that anyone with any grit at all can play volley ball because it is not as strenuous as basket ball and can be learned easily. Many girls have realized this but there is still a place for many more.

The contest for the cup this year is going to be closer than usual. How hard would each class work if it is fully realized that volley ball championship will have lots to do in deciding which colors will remain on the cup? A hint to the wise is sufficient.

Basket Ball

The basket ball team will play a game with Averett College this Friday. Although the game will not be played on the home floor every member of the student body will wait anxiously for the results of the game. Many will do as Miss Graham requested. They will pray that the team representing our school will play a clean game and be a true sport—no matter what the outcome will be. The girls realize that it is not the score of the game that counts but it is the way the game was played.

Good luck, team!

FACULTY & HOME DEPARTMENT NEWS

Miss Fannie B. Sheton has gone to Florida for a month's stay. She has the student body's wish for a pleasant and beneficial vacation.

Miss Helen Draper is at home due to the illness of her sister. During her absence Jac Draper and Evelyn Beckham are substituting.

Miss Estelle Smithy has been confined at home this past week, due to injuries received from a fall. We hope that she will soon be able to resume her work.

THOUGHTS

Alone with your thoughts—not alone for 'tis thoughts which make loneliness gay. Is there one of us here who would sell precious moments That come stealing at close of each day?

Thoughts—memories real—of the joys, not the pains, For the hurts must be banished away, That the pleasures alone may come hovering 'round, In our thoughts when the night endeth day.

Our thoughts are our own—they cannot be bought Or sold—be the price what it may. They loom up before us and circling o'er us, Know their masters won't turn them away.

Beautiful thoughts are finer than gold So keep them each safe tucked away, That the nights may find each of us thinking of only The joys which have passed with each day.

Caller: Is your son in college?
Mother: I think so. The authorities haven't written for a week.

MINERVA CIUSTINIANI

We have in our auditorium reproductions of some famous pieces of sculpture. The one we wish you to study with us this week is Minerva.

This statue was for a long time in the possession of the Guistiniani family, whence its name. Afterwards it passed into the collection of Lucien Bonaparte from whom it was eventually purchased by Pope Pius VII, and added to the Gallery of the Vatican so it is known as the Minerva of the Vatican, and Pollas of the Vatican.

The original is of Parian marble and is six feet ten inches tall. It was found in the temple of Minerva Medica on the Esquiline Hill, Rome, sculptor not known. When found the right arm, spear and serpent were gone. It was restored as we see it now giving it the attributes of Minerva Medica, the serpent raising its head by her side, a spear in her right hand, the Corinthian helmet and aegis, with mantle over the shoulders. The helmet is not that of the Athene of Phidias, seen on the coins of Athens, but that found on the coin of Corinth.

The statue represents the goddess as the beneficent protector and preserver of health—by her wisdom. The drapery is an especially good example of the grave dignity given to the figure by the toga so admirably sculptured. Study the statue not only from the front but from the sides and back.

The pedestal is an antique model showing the fluted columns of the Romans.

The statue and pedestal were presented to the college by the graduating class of June.

KINGS OF TURF IN RACE DRAMA "KENTUCKY PRIDE"

AT THE EACO THEATER

Man O' War, Negofel, Fair Play
The Finn and Marvich in New Fox Picture

It was not for artistic reasons alone that "Kentucky Pride," the William Fox supreme attraction which comes to the Eaco Theatre on Saturday, January 29, came to be filmed in the picturesque Blue Grass region. The principal actors in this thrilling screen drama are horses, and the cast includes some of the most famous race track champions of recent years, each playing himself in the film. Man o' War, the world's greatest thoroughbred, Fair Play, Negofel, Marvich and other set-drawn Kentuckians.

The ordinary two-legged screen actor gladly follows the camera to the ends of the earth if such be the orders. Not so with the four-legged stars. No trips to Hollywood and waiting around studios for them. They had to be photographed in the old Kentucky homes or not at all. And that's how it was done.

"Kentucky Pride" is the life story of "Virginia's Future," a royally bred filly, as told by herself. This daughter of Negofel was born on the splendid estate of Roser Beaumont. Beaumont lost great sums gambling. He bet the remnant of his fortune on Virginia's Future in her first race. She did her best to justify her master's confidence, but fell and broke her leg just when the race seemed won.

Beaumont was ruined and disappeared. The crippled filly, useless except for breeding purposes, soon fell upon evil times, ultimately passing into the hands of a peddler, who treated her brutally. Not until her father, Confederacy, grew up and restored the family fortunes by winning one of the most thrilling races ever screened, was she redeemed from bondage and returned to her beloved Blue Grass pastures.

There will only be one show this night, but there will be a matinee at 2:30 and at this matinee the Hotel Elliott Orchestra of Suffolk, Va., will furnish music. Admission to S. T. C. girls' 20 cents.

S. T. C. GIRLS SEE "JANICE MEREDITH"

Last Thursday and Friday the girls of S. T. C. had the privilege of seeing "Janice Meredith," one of the most mammoth productions ever filmed. More than 7,500 actors including some of the most famous ones on the screen took part in this picture. The costumes alone cost $200,000 and were exact reproductions, being made of the most gorgeous silks and satins. The scene depicting the court of Louis XVI and the ballroom scene at Philadelphia are the most lavish settings ever given on the screen.

The most important thing about "Janice Meredith" is its historical accuracy which surpasses that of any other film. It has received the approval of critics and great men over the entire country. The shots of Washington crossing the Delaware and the scenes at Valley Forge are enough to arouse any true citizen's patriotism. Best of all "Janice Meredith" is deemed "a great American picture perfectly played by American artists."

Dramatic Club Play

 Dramatic Club in its selection of plays to choose only those of the "costume" type since all the roles, masculine as well as feminine, are necessarily taken by girls. From the point of view of the audience this is a most happy practice giving a far greater opportunity for the preservation of the dramatic illusion than would be possible in a play in which young women appear in the stiff and tailor-made garb of the modern maid. Sara Bernhard was supreme in L'Aiglon, but sweet and tragic drama of the little son of Napoleon, and it is a wise stagecraft who follows the precedent of the divine Sarah in selecting the "costume" play as a vehicle for the talents of young women performers.

The finish and delicacy of the performance gave evidence of the careful training of the coach, Miss Leola Wheeler, whose sound preparation at Smith College and the Emerson College of Oratory, and whose good taste in things dramatic have fitted her peculiarly for such a position.

The scenery was painted and arranged under the supervision of Miss Martha W. Coulling of the Department of Art. The Home Economics Department under the direction of Miss Katherine Tupper designed the charming costumes. The dancing which added so much to the grace and beauty of the performance was directed by Miss Mary Barlow, head of the department of Physical Health Education.

Miss Elizabeth Jarman, who took part in the play was also Property Manager. She did not overlook one minute detail of the properties and the stage would have been incomplete without Elizabeth Jarman as the old maid, Aunt Prim, and as Property Manager.

The College Orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Katherine King played between acts and made the time pass swiftly on to the next act.

Why Argue

Prof: "Can you prove that the square of the hypotenuse is equal to the sum of the squares of the two sides of this triangle?"

Student: "I don't have to prove it. I admit it."

Highway Contest

tion of present conditions. It is believed by board officials and many others that the surest plan for relief, both immediate and in the future, is to interest the schools, pupils, teachers, principals and superintendents in a campaign which is broad enough to involve humanitarian principles, and grave enough to affect the foundations of our economic system in so far as it pertains to transportation.

Not Too Far To Plan

A generation ahead is not too far to plan, in the opinion of many students of traffic conditions, who believe there will be fewer traffic accidents proportionally, in 1946 than in 1926. They say it is not too early now to begin to train the drivers of automobiles and the pedestrians of that day and generation. In short, the boys and girls of today, it is claimed, will be taught through these contests to be motor wise and safety conscious, with a resultant decrease in the traffic toll of the nation, which in 1925 claimed approximately 20,000 casualties.

While the campaign is intended chiefly for the schools, it enlists the aid of automobile clubs, women's clubs, civic bodies, public officials, and to a very general degree, the support of teachers, principals and superintendents of schools. Indeed, board officials assert that no single group is doing more in highway safety than the schools through the medium of these contests.

SENIOR CLASS PRESENTS FACULTY BABY SHOW

Was it a success? Well, I should say so. The audience was kept in a continuous roar from beginning to end. Why no one would ever imagine that that adorable baby with the laughing eyes and golden curls is Miss Tucker, who now teaches us about Washington crossing the Delaware, or the life of the ancient Egyptians. And who was the little boy all dressed up in his Sunday suit, trimmed in gold braid, brass buttons, everything. No other than Dr. Walmsley! Oh there were babies of every size, some serious, some smiling, some naughty, but all if they were pictures of our faculty taken many (?) years ago. We all thank the Senior class for giving us such a pleasant hours' entertainment. And we heartily agree that as

"Thus endeth our rhyme
It was indeed worth a dime."

The Pi Alpha Club will now be known as Delta Kappa and they wish to announce Phyllis Jones as a new pledge.

READ THE ROTUNDA!

This Saturday, February 5, Farmville S. T. C. will play Averett College on our home floor.

Last week the varsity met Averett at Danville and S. T. C. was deferred of the opportunity of watching the team win a game. However, this week-end every girl will have a chance to see a game played in the S. T. C. manner, which means cleanliness in playing and cooperation of all.

YOU

The sunset twines with the lonely pines

That border the lonely hill;
And a deep appeal now comes to steal
My heart with a nameless thrill.

What can it be that calls to me
From the vast majestic blue?

'Tis your voice so dear, your eyes,
Your hair;

'Tis the dream —of—love, and you.

Are you making an effort to study during the week and not on Sunday?

OUR COACH, MISS BLANCHE
E. O. GRAHAM, HONORED

Miss Blanche E. O. Graham has been appointed chairman of the State committee on woman's basket ball for the year 1926. Miss Graham with a committee which she will select, will supervise all phrases of basket ball throughout the State of Virginia, will settle all problems which may arise concerning basket ball, will certify officials for games, and also collect data to be presented to the national board in connection with its efforts to improve the game.

This appointment was made by the national board under the supervision of the American Physical Education Association. All the students of S. T. C. are glad that our Athletic Director, who has proved so efficient in her work here and who has done so much to make the value of athletics more fully realized in our school, has now been recognized as a State official. COTILLION CLUB DANCE IS BIG SUCCESS

On Saturday evening, January 30, in the College Recreation Hall, the Cotillion Club of S. T. C. gave its first formal dance of the season. The hall was beautifully decorated in gay colored balloons and ribbon confetti. At the hour of eleven, the terpsichorean couples participated in a very attractive figure which was led by Miss Dorothy Myers and Mr. Burton Deckert. Gold-tipped imitation cigarettes, and paper blow-outs were given as favors. Excellent music was furnished by the Little Bud Gwaltney Orchestra, of Suffolk.

Among the chaperones were: Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Laing, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Coyner, Mrs. W. E. Anderson, Mrs. E. R. Booker, Mrs.

JUNIOR CLASS SOON TO PRESENT PLAY

Cast Is Chosen

On February 12th, the Junior class will present a one act play, "A Yankee in King Tut's Tomb." A beautiful dramatization of James Whitcombe Riley's "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," will also be given. Several other numbers will be in the program.

The casts have already been chosen and work has begun in the two plays. Tickets will be sold by the Junior class and can be reserved in the reception hall on February 11th and 12th.

This program promises to be a good one, and it is for a good cause—The Student Building.

FOUNDERS DAY!

You old girls—Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors, have you thought that Founders Day is only about a month away? Is your spirit up, have you done your part to help your class and other organizations get ready for Founders Day? Have you said anything to the Freshmen about what Founders Day can and should mean, do you think that they are catching the "Farmville Spirit?"

This one day of all the year is a highly important one. It happens this year that it will be Saturday, March 6. Of course, we won't have classes, but we will make it a day of celebration, and of thankfulness, that one day this institution was founded.

We hope that this year, as in the past, many alumnae will be back and that we may have some reports from the various chapters. In one sense "Founders Day" is the link which holds the chain together, that chain between the alumnae and their Alma Mater. It holds us to a vision of the past as well as giving us a vision of what the future may mean.

Since our goal in the last few years has been to pay for our Student Building, the efforts of the classes, alumnae and various school organizations have been concentrated toward doing "their bit" and paying for the bricks in the Student Building. Last year the classes alone presented to Dr. Jarman $1000. This year we hope to beat even that splendid record, so let's get our spirit up and remember that we have only about five weeks to work.

Catch the "Farmville Spirit"; it is an intangible thing—yet it stands for the best that Farmville is. It is the thing which we admire in Dr. Jarman and it is the thing toward which we ourselves are consciously or unconsciously striving. When we have caught this spirit and it becomes a vital part of our being, then, and then only, will we get the fullest pleasure and enjoyment from our social life—so remember when Founders Day comes we must all have caught the spirit.

CLASS ISSUES OF ROTUNDA TO START NEXT WEEK

Each class is to have an opportunity to edit one issue of the Rotunda. They will come in four successive editions, starting with the Freshman issue next week, the Sophomores follow, then the Juniors and last (but not least) the Seniors. As far as I can see the Freshman and the Senior class have the advantage—but maybe the Sophomores and Juniors will show them that they can do their best and beat the others. Each class will naturally want its issue to be the best, and with this object in view, two of the classes have elected a staff. These staffs have been elected after careful thought and they are going to do their best to make the paper for which they are responsible, the best in every way—but they can't do it alone, every member of the class has got to be back of them with suggestions and work—so do your part to help make your own issue the best. So far, only the Freshmen and Sophomores, have elected their staff, but the other classes expect to do so this week. There staffs are:

CONCERNING LYNCHING.

The following telegram was received in our college recently. It concerns a problem about which we as students of the South and of America should be vitally interested. What shall we do about it?

"To Student Leaders of the South:

"Associated Press reports mob lynched Negro after taking him from Sheriff at Ocala, Fla. This is the first lynching of New Year. Since 1900 Florida has had 135 lynchings. In few if any cases has it been possible for authorities to do anything about it because moral support from citizens lacking. South's civilization and Christianity discredited around world until we show vigorous and determined disapproval. Can you interest your student body or any portion of it to assert themselves publicly against this barbarous practice. Have student body and faculty by chapel vote or other poll, adopt resolutions publishing same and sending to Governor J. W. Martin, Tallahassee, urging punishment lynchings and assuring him of your backing under assumption he is exerting his whole influence similarly. Suggest editorials in college papers, discussion groups, etc. Students of South have opportunity to make opinion felt. Mobilizing best student sentiment to stand publicly and unitedly for law observance in this one point will be greatest contribution this generation can make to building of a greater South and America.

ON GOING TO CHURCH.

Going to church? What does it mean to you? Does it mean what it should mean? Nothing should mean so much and yet it seems that noting means so little in the lives of some students. As there are all classes in every phase of society, so are there all classes of church goers. We have a class who go to church each Sunday because they love the hour of worship. There is another group who attend church through habit and there is another group who go because they feel it a duty. But even these groups do not include the majority of the students, for there is yet another class who do not go at all. To which of these classes do you belong? How do you feel about this question? What does your conscience tell you, for surely you have a conscience. Does the living through weeks of health and happiness completely blot out all trace of spiritual life? Do the commonplace things of life so wrap themselves about you that you feel nothing of the spiritual? Perhaps you may feel that you have excuses, but is there any excuse sufficient to compensate for utter neglect to worship that Divine Creator who has given us life and beauty—all that we have and are today? Let us stop to consider a few of the pitifully frail excuses for failure to attend church services. Some say they are too tired, but are they? Would any social event receive their regrets on such grounds? Perhaps it's "but I haven't a decent thing to wear"—and yet, would these same girls refuse a bid to a Hampden-Sidney game for this reason? Let us remember that we go to chapel to worship and not to criticize or to be criticized as to styles and fashions. There is still another viewpoint to be considered. Let us stop and think of the folks at home. What is their wish regarding our religious attitude? They hope and feel that we are spending our Sundays in the right way—in just the way we spent them before we came to S. T. C. With such negligence on our part can we say that we are playing fair with those who mean so much to us? Think it over girls and let's not only believe but convince ourselves that Sundays which have meant so little may mean everything to us. The New Year is before us; it is not too late to add one more resolution to that list. Are you willing to resolve to go to church every Sunday?

THE MOST DIFFICULT ROLE OF OUR DRAMATIC CLUB PLAYS

Plays are put on here and after the night of the play the curtain is drawn forever. Only a dim memory of familiar faces and figures disguised in grease paints and costumes scattering over a stage of beauty is left.

There is one actor who plays the same role from play to play and always with the same patience and un-fatiguable efforts. No part is too minor for her to work over until it is made as near perfect as possible. The material she has to work with is not the choice of the talented nor is it like clay in her hands, it is more of a concrete nature. When a girl triple the size of this actor comes forth with all audacity, saying, "I would do that if I could but I can't and I'm not," the situation seems hopeless. But from over the footlights comes a snap of fingers and, "Yes you can and if you do not stop fooling with your part I will put you out of the play." The girl heaves a sigh and knows it must be done, so she does it.

This actor has a contempt for the word amateur and she couples her muscle and mind and erases it from the criticisms of the audience by hard work night after night.

In short we might say this particular part is all the other parts in one for each part is carefully considered and worked over by the character of this most difficult role. Every detail of the stage and its properties is also considered, instead of a mere coach. We find also a general overseer and worker of the whole play in all its details.

And so we owe the success of our Dramatic Club plays to our coach manager and friend, Miss Leola Wheeler. We might also add though it is not necessary, that Miss Wheeler's interest and work is not only in the Dramatic Club, but in other worthwhile organizations of student activities.

The following "Curious Errors of History":

William Tell was a myth. Nero was not a monster; he did not kill his mother, nor fiddle over burning Rome.

The Duke of Wellington, at Waterloo, never uttered the famous words, "Up Guards, at them!"

Chemists have proved that vinegar will not dissolve pearls nor cleave rocks, in spite of the fabled exploits of Cleopatra and Hannibal.

The siege of Troy is largely a myth, even according to Homer's own account. Helen must have been sixty years old when Paris fell in love with her.

A GUITAR

There it lay, only a broken guitar, kept for memory's sake. The body was warped and there was a deep crack, the result of a blow dealt by a careless child. It had but two rusty strings which creaked and rattled when they were touched. It was a useless thing.

Yes, it was useless, but it had lived. For four years of happy college life it had sung the joy and contentment of a girl's heart. It had accompanied merry groups, who had gathered to spend a night together during a holiday. Its last song was sung at one of these parties, a merry, rapturous song.

It was just a broken guitar, kept because of its memories, priceless memories.

FRIENDSHIP

There's a winding road through a valley of care,

With no one waiting your troubles to share,

By hills of worry on either side Over which a traveler may ride.

But somewhere in the distance a song's in the air.

And happiness teaches this "valley of care."

For there in this valley the traveler has found

Friendship is blooming in the flowers around.

—Frances Willis

IS THERE ANY REASON WHY

Is there any reason why you should haunt me night and day?

Is there any reason why I remember all you say?

Is there any reason why nothing seems the same?

Any reason why I think of only just your name?

Is there any reason why things shouldn't matter any more?

'Till I met you I was happy, never blue like this before;

Is there any reason why days should be so very long?

Any reason why I hate the sunshine and the song

Of birds up in the tree-tops cooing softly to their mate?

Why the things I used to love I now begin to hate?

Is there any reason why—sometimes I answer "No,"

You have given me no cause and yet I cannot let you go.

You're in my mind—you're in my heart each minute of the day,

But what can be the use of it is more than I can say,

You left me—why—oh! Just because you really wished to go—

And I'm a fool I guess—and yet I love you, love you so!

DIANA GABILI

The imagination of the Greeks delighted in sculpture; therefore, the art in which they took precedence of all other nations, was the plastic art.

As a result of the Peloponnesian War, which culminated in the capture of Athens, Greek art of the fifth century B. C. became a meditative art instead of a serene art. Praxiteles was one of the most outstanding sculptors of that age and to him belongs the famous Dianas.

The statue of Diana Robing or Diana Gabili was presented to the State Teachers College by the graduating class of 1908. At the present time it is placed in the main auditorium, on the left side as you face the rostrum. Before the time of Praxiteles, the shape of the face in Greek sculpture was round, but in his art the face is oval. The features follow each other with soft transition, yet each is clearly formed and finished. Delicately arched, and rather low and narrow, the brow passes into the marked and prominent nose and so on into the lower parts of the face; thus expressing no contrast but rather an harmonious combination of mind and sensuous feeling. The large well-cut eye lies in its broad, deep socket, betraying a firm taking hold of reality. The eyebrows are only slightly marked, and eyelids seem to melt insensibly into the adjoining planes of the features. The cheek softly swells sideways from its lower edge to the ear, and down to the chin, which projects with a strong curve.

The hair, in contrast with earlier sculpture, is freely and loosely modelled, instead of holding to a rigorous symmetry, which would have been a servitude for art. It is an artistic asymmetry which reveals the perfection of liberty, combining both order and freedom. The whole face shows preoccupation, with a subdued play of light and shadows, which precludes and vestiges of harshness and angularity.

The drapery which clings to the body in a noble, expressive manner, is marked by the rich fall of the folds. Simple and natural in style it brings out a quality which is seldom found in the drapery.

In this statue we find a certain freedom of lines as evidenced by the slightly lifted foot and bent knee. This belongs to the later sculpture and gives an idea of youthful lightness and beauty, so that we feel we can truly say with the poet, "Beauty is truth, truth beauty—that is all we know on earth, and all ye need to know."

Note: In the article on Art in last week's Rotunda, due to an oversight, the year of the presentation of the statue of Minerva was omitted. It was presented by the class of 1906.

SOCIAL NEWS

MISS STUBBS ENTERTAINS

Friday night, Miss Stubbs entertained delightfully a few friends. Progressive bridge was played and later a salad course was served.

ATHENIANS ENTERTAIN

Last Saturday night the old members of the Athenian Literary Society entertained the new members at a most delightful party in the old "Gym." Gold and white colors floated and streamed in a circular array around Athena, the goddess of Wisdom. Not the statue in the Auditorium, oh, no! One of the old members, in all the glory of a crown, staff, and flowing Grecian robe, posed as Athena, throughout the program.

The President welcomed the new girls most cordially. Then Miss Bierbower told the Society something of the origin of the Athenian Literary Society, and how its name was selected. Miss Rice drawing on her mythological knowledge, told of Athena's great power in ancient days, and commended the Society on its motto: "Self-reverence, self-knowledge, self-control." All of the members then sang of their love and loyalty to Athena, and the former cold statue came alive and stepped down from her pedestal.

Sandwiches, "dopes," dancing and getting acquainted finished a most enjoyable and enjoyed evening.

MITCHELL TRIAL DISCUSSED IN CURRENT EVENT TALK

Tuesday, Dr. Walmisley discussed the outcome of the Mitchell trial, during the current event talk. Col. Mitchell is to be suspended from service for four years. President Coolidge approves the court martial, but the question arises as to Col. Mitchell's salary. No citizen under such a sentence is allowed to hold any position in the U. S. And so it has been decided that Col. Mitchell shall receive one-half his former salary which amounts to three hundred and ninety-seven dollars and sixty-seven cents.

Following this discussion was that of the death of Cardinal Mercier, a Belgian, one of the most outstanding Christians connected with the World War.

Another interesting event in Dr. Walmisley's talk was the situation of the four hundred Italians, who are members of the American Legion Post. Because of the present immigration law these Legionnaires are not allowed to re-enter the U. S. The reason for this fact is that these four hundred Italians not being nationalized, volunteered for U. S. service in France. After the war these men returned to their native country. They will doubtless remain there until some change is made in our present immigration law.

FARMVILLE WINS SECOND VICTORY FROM AVERETT

Fast Game Proves Farmville Undisputed Victor

Last Saturday night S. T. C.'s varsity gained a second victory over Averett College in a fast game which ended with the score of 36-23. The game was very exciting throughout, owing to the fact that the teams were meeting for the second time within a week and each was determined to carry away the victory.

The game started off with a bang, Hall making the first field goal. Both teams had dashed into the fray, and the first quarter ended with a score of 8-5.

S. T. C. continued the good team work in the second quarter and rolled the score up to 19 while Averett made one field goal.

Both teams came back with lots of pep at the beginning of the last half, each fighting with all the vim they could muster for the glory of their Alma Mater. It was then that Averett did her best work, pulling up her score from 7 to 23; but S. T. C. was keeping pace with her opponent, the whole team putting up a good fight. At the final whistle the score was 26-23 in favor of the blue and white, and despite a desperate struggle Averett bowed again to S. T. C.

Line-up:

S. T. C.	Averett
Hall	R. F. Chappell
Perkins	L. F. Watkins
Mitchell	J. C. Pankey
Vincent	S. C. Rose
Crute	L. G. Newton, R. Jarman
	R. G. Bayer
Substitutes: Farmville—Reid for Vincent, White for Jarman, Gary for Crute. Averett—H. Newton for R. Newton.

TO MISS MARY.

Valentines frothy, and frilly, and gay,
Words tender, saucy, daring to say!
Arrows and hearts and Cupids bows
By fate just made for our Jim's and Jo's.
Even a rhyme for Dad, and too,
The soft, white verse that for mother grew.
But where is the one we'd bring—to you?
We gazed thru them all. Not even one
Had the words we would say—begun!
All inexpressive, they were tucked away
And we stole from our hearts the words to say—
"Our Miss Mary, someone means
A glimpsed tomorrow, builded dreams,
Someone means embodiment
Of gentle poise, of life true spent
In its perfect call.
Our Miss Mary, to that someone
We bring our hearts—their depth, their fun.
With a pastel strand we weave all thru
The heart of us each to the self of you,
Valentine of us all!"

The Freshman Class takes great pleasure in dedicating this issue of the Rotunda to Miss Mary White Cox.

MISS ILLER TO OFFICIATE AT ALL-GIRL MEET

Freshman Classman Honored

How about this? Proud of our classman? Rather! The Baltimore Evening Sun has invited the Farmville S. T. C. girls to participate in its Annual All-Girls Meet, in which college girls of Maryland participate, on February 20th. The reason for this sudden and cordial invitation? The reason is the best and most satisfactory one we know—Miss Iler! Miss Iler has been one of the Executive Committee of this All-Girls Meet, and because of her absence from Maryland this year has been asked to officiate at this event. As many as 5000 girls usually participate, and it is a Meet worked out on a vast and attractive scale. We are proud to send Miss Iler back to Maryland for a week-end, but prouder still that she's ours exclusively afterwards!

RADIO FANS TAKE NOTICE—S. T. C. TO BROADCAST

The Shriners of Farmville have arranged a Farmville night over the radio—broadcasting from station WIVA to Richmond—on the twenty-second of February. The Glee Club will sing selections from its operetta, Paul Revere. Solos will be sung by Mrs. King and Dr. Jarman. The Farmville Male Quartet will also render selections. Be sure and listen in on that night.

TRAINING SCHOOL SENIORS DEFEAT JUNIORS

The first Inter-class game of the Training School was played Wednesday, February 3, 1926, in the college gymnasium between the seniors and the juniors. Both teams played hard and put up a good fight, but the seniors out-played the juniors by a score of 11 to 4. Their playing showed that both teams had received excellent coaching, the seniors by Jackie Woodson, and the juniors by Elizabeth Crute.

The line-up:

"TODDLER TOWN"

Musical Comedy to be Presented by Freshmen

Are the Freshmen wide awake and working? Yes!!! They are to present a two-act musical comedy, that promises to be one of the most noted amateur performances of the South! Delightful song and dance music will be rendered by six different choruses. Not one moment without thrill and entertainment will be lost throughout the two performances of the comedy.

The scenes are laid on a tropical island, "Toddler Town." On this island there lives a princess who can really Charleston. Many other people of interest dwell on this island. There are "Tourists," "Toddlers," "Little Boy Blue," "Mother Goose", and even "Hotel Maids" (who know all scandal). On this island there will be a "Fashion Show" which will even display the latest styles—from everywhere—even Paris.

Seniors, Juniors, Sophomores, Faculty, All! Freshmen announce this musical comedy. The class of '29 promises its success and that class lives up to its promises.

FRESHMAN CLASS ENTERTAINS VISITING TEAM

The Freshman Class was hostess to the Averett College Basket Ball Team during their stay here the 6th and 7th. A representative group of the class met the train on Saturday morning. On Saturday night the class entertained the visiting team with an informal reception. Some very attractive selections were given by Miss Amanda Gray, Miss Eleanor Bennett sang some popular songs. Delightful refreshments were served by Helen Wilcox, Louise Craft, Carroll Cromwell, and Mary Culin.

The guests were: Miss Olive Iler, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Graham, Miss Barlow, Miss Winnie Hiner, the Averett Varsity and the S. T. C. Varsity. The class was really sorry to see their visitors leave Sunday morning.

JUNIOR CLASS PRESENTS PROGRAM—A YANKEE IN KING TUT'S TOMB, AN OLD SWEET-HEART OF MINE

On Friday night at 7:00 the Junior Class will present a one act play, "A Yankee in King Tut's Tomb" and a pantomime dramatization of "An Old Sweetheart of Mine."

The play is the story of the Queen wife of Pharaoh waking up and falling in love with a travelling salesman who tries to steal her away from her tomb. King Tut awakes and finds how times have changed in the world since he was King and he finally persuades the queen wife remains loyal, though the play has a tragic ending.

The cast is:

Queen wife Bessie Meade Riddle
Pharaoh Louise Brewer Guards, Rosalind Harrell and Louise Foster
A Yankee Salesman, Lucy Halle

"An Old Sweetheart of Mine", a lovely pantomime, will also be given. The scene settles around a middle aged man, who was once a gay young tea-hound and is now shown pondering over the many sweethearts of his younger days. As he recalls to memory those happy days each sweetheart comes back to him but each one passes with the twinkling of an eye. And back in the recesses of his memory, the lover finds the sweet

ARE PETTY RULES IMPORTANT?

There is a prevailing sentiment among a great number of students as to "how far you can go as long as you can get by with it," with reference to certain petty rules. Such an attitude is destructive not only to school spirit but to our sense of honor. It is an ever impending danger because it is very contagious. Girls who enter college with the highest ideals of student government soon realize that cooperation in keeping rules is vastly lacking. This should be an incentive to excel in loyalty to the rules of the school. If a girl conscientiously feels, however, that she is doing no harm to herself, to the reputation of the school, why should she keep the rules? This is the attitude which we meet daily.

What shall we do? The girl is pledged to abide by rules, and in backing out she breaks her word of honor. Then we must have a host of dishonorable people in our student body, judging by the study hall crowd and the number of girls who are campused. But our girls are not dishonorable. They are hampered by situations which are not life-like. If there is an inner argument between obedience to a school rule and the natural code of conduct, it is needless to say which will usually conquer.

As long as many rules which we now have are in existence, they will be commonly broken. There are two evils, perhaps, in the balance. On the one side are present conditions; some good is derived from rules by those who keep them, but many ignore them and thus they consciously lower their standards of honor. On the other side, is the removal of these rules in favor of the discretion of the students. Obviously, both situations have advantages and disadvantages. Student opinion and action can practically eliminate the disadvantages of either situation. Are not the students of this college worthy of being placed on their honor and discretion without being disciplined as children?

WHAT ARE VALENTINES?

Do we realize what Valentines really mean? Do we ever stop to consider them seriously? We select Valentines more for their appearance than for their sentiment, and rarely do we bother to send them to the person for whom they are appropriate. We send comic Valentines which frequently do not seem as comic to the receiver as to the sender.

A Valentine should be a message of love, such is a thing never to be considered lightly. There are people—our mothers, for instance—who would appreciate an expression of our affection for them, and yet these are usually the very ones whom we neglect. A Valentine need not be merely a red heart on a sheet of paper. It may be a letter, a flower, or just a word; but it must come with the true Valentine spirit. Let us this year make our Valentines real messages of love, and they will mean more to us and to the one who receives them.

OUR CARE OF THE STUDENT BUILDING.

"For the benefit of the Student Building." How often do we hear words? Even the faculty allow their much beloved and cherished baby pictures to be flashed on the screen—for the benefit of the Student Building Fund. We have the building; it is our own. But do we appreciate and care for it as we should? We are willing to help raise funds for it, but with our own hands and feet we mar its beauty. It is admitted that the "Lounge" is very pretty. We rush our friends down there to see the attractive room. But do we ever think about the carpet and the floors for which we are struggling to pay? Girls run quickly into the building from cut in the rain and snow. The useless door mat lies on the entrance floor. If the students would be more considerate, they would not inconvenience themselves, for girls are so destructive to this room that it necessitates the doors frequently being locked. This building is ours; we are paying for it. It is new—but will stay in this condition only with our help and consideration. Let's not be selfish and mess up its halls, furniture and floors. We must remember that the building is to exist for a long time, and after we leave, there will live in these same rooms of ours girls who will love nice things just as much as we do. Yes, S. T. C., each one of us is going to try to protect and care for the Student Building for our own selves and for others!

GOOD GRADES.

Good grades. Just what do they mean? In their proper sense they mean that you have done good work and accomplished something towards your chosen profession. They mean that you have done something to repay your parents for the opportunity they are now giving you. Then, shall we, when we have considered these two points, work for good grades?

Good grades mean hard work and consistent work. If you desire good grades you will have to work for them each and every day. You may say, "There are girls who get good grades without working." Probably so, but are you one of the girls who can get them without seemingly working? You know, all of us know our ability to a certain extent, whether you need to study much or little, remember, however, that the majority of us belong to the group that has to study hard. Just what are we going to do? Go to class from day to day and laughingly say, "I haven't opened a book"? Are you going to do this or work hard? Are you going to show your appreciation? Good grades nearly always come to the person who has done his very best. Success is invariably the result of hard labor. When you get an E note or a warning note what are you going to do? Are you going to sit down and say you can't help it, or are you going to settle down to hard work?—F. S.

THE "PEP" ELEMENT.

Do we, as a student body, look upon our athletics as we should? Do we realize that a victorious varsity reflects much glory upon its Alma Mater? Do we realize that no varsity can be victorious unless it has the whole-hearted backing of the entire student body?

To our cheerleaders, who have night after night called pep meetings which were very poorly attended; it might easily seem that their job is an uphill one; that of trying to infuse into nine hundred girls a school loyalty which they do not really feel. It is now, and has always been, the supreme ambition of our college in athletics to produce a varsity which through clean sportsmanship may be invincible. We have a coach who is giving unsparingly of her time and effort toward this end; we have a varsity squad which does not grumble at the frequent practices; do we have a student body which does not shirk its part? Let us accept the challenge which is thrown to us. Let us show our coach that her efforts are not unappreciated; let us show by our attendance at pep meetings our willingness to do our best; and let us carry our varsity to the very top by the enthusiasm of our whole-hearted support!

RIDING ON ONE'S REPUTATION.

Reports are just out. A girl passes in the hall and you ask someone what she got on a certain subject. The answer is, "Oh, she got A, of course, but she's riding on her last year's reputation." At first you might think this to be a jealous remark but when you make inquiries you find it is perfectly true. The girl is a brilliant student and well deserved her A's last year, but this year she has been resting on her reputation and trusting that it will get her an A without work on her part. One time it worked, but sometime it will fail.

Are you riding on your reputation? Live up to it or, like Humpty Dumpty, you will have a hard fall!

THE PERFECT CLASSMAN

"Miss Her will help us." "Ask Miss Her; she will know." How often we hear such expressions as these from the Freshmen! At every class meeting, at every meeting of the Freshman Commission—is fact, wherever we as a class are concerned, we look to Miss Her for help. When anything seems just a little too hard and we don't know exactly what to do, we know just where to go, for our classman is never too busy to give us a word of advice.

Miss Her is everything that a classman should be. She understands us and sympathizes with us. She seems always to have ideas for class plays and stunts, and she is willing to help us put them through. She knows them and how much to reprimand us. She is a good sport. The Freshmen find it hard to express their appreciation of Miss Her; but, we can say that we wouldn't know what to do without her.

THE SPIRIT OF VALENTINES DAY

An old gray-haired man stood fascinated in front of a gay, cheery little shop window. On the other side of the polished glass were displayed rows upon rows of dainty valentines. There were big, gold, red hearts and tiny little hearts all covered with frilly lace. At this sight something stirred in the old man's heart and sent a warm, delicious thrill over the bent frame. Long-forgotten thoughts came tripping up to him and he was lost in a flood of memories.

We thought he saw a tiny golden-haired child climb upon the arm of his father's chair and proudly display his first valentine, and later, kneeling at his mother's knee, ask God to bless St. Valentine. Then a little eager-faced boy sat in a tiny desk in a country school. He watched with expectancy a big box from which the teacher was giving out mysterious little valentines. At the sound of his name he went eagerly forward to receive his share of joy. Next appeared a tall, lean boy standing in front of a window, mentally counting up his savings. Then he went in and bought a beautiful real heart which he blushing took to a shy-eyed little girl. There next stood in line a grown man surveying with loving eyes a tiny heart cut out of red paper by tiny baby fingers.

A sigh escaped the old man as he raised a knarled hand to brush away the hot tears. Memories—yes, memories, all of the days of long ago. Now such joy was not for him. No one would think that he cared for a bright red paper heart. No one could know that the spirit of St. Valentine lived as strongly in him today as in the golden-haired child at his mother's knee so many, many years ago.

The old man looked down. A warm hand was slipped into his and an excited voice was saying, "Grandpa, just look at the pretty valentines, and tomorrow is Valentine Day!"

Silently, the old man entered the shop and with radiant face asked for the largest and prettiest valentine of all. Once more he looked forward to Valentine's Day.

WANDERINGS

A thought, a careless word
From one I love
And life is gone.
For what is life but Castles in the air,
Dreams and visions
Which are shattered
In the briefest span of time?
But still I live,
For now I know
A spark of God
Lies in my heart
That keeps my ideal
High and pure and true.
Tho my soul is scarred
To its very depths,
How strange is a soul
Whose ideal lives and Lives—and lives—to eternity!

—Pearl Etheridge '29

Harriet Booker, Chairman of the Town-girl committee of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet is ill with appendicitis. The Y. W. C. A. Cabinet as well as the student body, extend their best wishes for a speedy recovery.

Go to Prayers.

TO MY VALENTINE

Methinks your hair was spun
From out a Sunbeam's golden ray.
Your eyes are just the bits O' Heaven
Where stars were cut away.
You bought your cheeks from roses
Wild

That by the wayside grow,
And Cupid kissed your cherry lips
And carved them like his bow.

VALENTINE A LA PRACTICAL

Geography, geography,
Will thou be mine?
My heart craves not romance,
For you it both pine
I'm caught in a mesoon,
A river, a bay,
My heart swims of maps,
Not Valentine day!
Whirlwinds and eddies,
Copper and lead,
Where shall I put thee
In this wee head?
I lay aside romance,
This be my rhyme:
Bring me a pass grade
As heart's Valentine!

THE LIGHTHOUSE

A strong black tower
Against the wind-swept sky,
The monument of some dead giant,
Built upon the sands
To challenge dashing waves
And winds of time.
You are living, throbbing thing
To guide the weary sailors on the deep.
With your red beacon light,
A challenge to the waves
And winds of heaven.
With your far-seeing eye,
You warn the victims of old Ocean's trap
And snatch them, breathless,
From his passionate caresses.
Perhaps that's why mad Ocean foams
And why the wild west wind
Lashes against your body
The cruel, cutting bits of sand.

Carolea Harris

TO YOU.

I'd love to sing a song for you,
A happy little song for you.
To make you smile,
I'd sing of mother bluebird's love,
Of God's and tree's and flower's love,
I'd sing of laughing people's love,
A song worth while.

And you would laugh and sing for me,
How happily you'd sing for me
And I would play!
Your song would make the whole world glad;
And no one ever would be sad,
For they would see the smile you had
The live-long day.

THE JEFFERSON ADDS NEW STARS TO ITS HORIZON

Princesses and Oriental dancers! Poets and ageless bard! Dramatists and fervent lovers! All were present at a party given Saturday afternoon by the old members of the Jefferson Literary Society in honor of the initiates. And the above-named celebrities were new members whose talents were challenged and discovered during the process called "initiation"! The Society was supposed to do the entertaining, but it was itself entertained. Then, too, the most delicious "gables" were served—ice cream, cakes, and candy—and everyone ate on the daintiest paper napkins with painted hearts.

Miss Coulling, the honorary member carried off a prize offered for the best telegram formed by using words and a frame in each letter of the word Valentine in their original order.

Everyone is ready for more good times and judging by the versatile new element which has been added, the Jeffersonians are pretty apt to have them.

NEXT YEAR

Oh! I feel so weary and so very sad,
Folks don't treat me right any time
And my heart is feelin' awful sad I've spent my allowance and I have but a dime.

Tests for today and tests for tomorrow.
My life's full of nothing but gloom and sorrow
But there's something that brings happiness galore,
I'll dance, and I'll study, and I'll sing—
For next year I'll be a honest and true Sophomore.

AS IT WERE

It was Saturday. Here was an undecurrent of excitement and romance throughout the school. O thrills! O raptures! My heart skips a beat even when I recall it. The reason for the excitement and the romance was the arrival of a world-wide celebrity, a foreign nobleman, a Count! He had all the desired attributes—youth, handsome, blonde, and it was my duty to guide him during the afternoon and evening before his lecture! My heart pranced at such a rate that I feared I should be carried away.

At the appointed time and place I met him. Ye gods! What a man! I had spent hours preparing for this occasion, had used all arts known to woman to make a pleasing appearance, and I had carefully planned clever little remarks which would place me at the top of his catalogue of women. But I not prepared for such at this. Words left me, but a world of thought looked out from my eyes and he knew it!

The memories of those hours together will never leave me! Such a man there never was on earth before! Every act of his stands alone in my heart. He left me—how can I endure it?—with the promise to return in six days. But that parting is too sacred to mention! "heart met heart" My life is changed, my mind is far from the realm of mortal cares.

That is the way it might have been. He came and left, and I didn't even see him I am after all, only a Freshman, who couldn't have spoken to him had he stayed a month, but what's the harm in a little joke?

Her (passionately) "My heart's idol!"
 Bessie Meade () "Put it to work."

"Father, a man called to see you this afternoon."
 "Did he have a bill?"
 "No—just an ord'nary nose."

Dot Myers went into Shannons, ate a chocolate stir, and told Mr. Shannon to charge it.

"On what account?" asked Mr. Shannon.

"On account of not having any money with me," replied Dot.

Mary C.: "Look, Hodgson. I weigh three more pounds than you do."

Hodgson: "AW— you're cheating, you've got your hands in your pocket."

Zach: (talking about the Charleston) "It is vulgar and girls do not know how bad they look on the floor doing it."

Helen Hart: "I can't do the Charleston either, Zach."

Amelia: "Oh, I'm engaged."

Mary: "Who to?"

Amelia: "I don't know his last name but he goes to college and he wears a black suit."

Moralist: "Girls should refrain from kissing. Some terrible things can be caught that way."

Moraleess: "Struth. Have you seen my sister-in-law?"

"What makes you scratch your head?"

"I'm the only one that knows it itches."

ADVENTURES OF A FRESHMAN

There was a little freshman girl, Who came to S. T. C.

If wonders large and wonders small, Her dear young eyes did see.

A friend of hers a sophomore wise, Who at the train did greet her,

'd later tell her that she was, By dear Joan to meet her.

The freshman young did run around, This girl Joan to find,

But there was no girl of that name— She almost lost her mind).

One day she asked a Junior old— For she thought that she should know it)

OUR PRESIDENT PROGRESSES AS USUAL

Advocates Cuts (But Not Class Cuts)

Last week, as all of us know (except the very ignorant), that Virginia was awarded a brand new Governor. The inaugural address was excellent (we hear). And the reception which followed was—well everybody had a grand time. Our Dr. Jarman was fortunate enough to be among those present. But unlike our President, he was way, way, down the line, that "governmental" receiving line. Having only a few minutes to spare before returning to "us children", he became terribly worried. Short cuts are just fine when classes are not concerned, and college presidents are concerned, so Dr. Jarman took a short cut. Soon he was greeting all of the nobility of the state, their wives, their cousins, and their wives' relations. After telling them what a splendid event it had been, our President escaped, and came back to "us dears". We're glad to have you back, Dr. Jarman. We want you and need you as much (and we may say more) than even the Governor.

LEADING LADY FROM HAMPDEN-

SIDNEY TO HONOR S. T. C'S AUDITORIUM

Nothing very definite—but a mighty truthful rumor has spread around our school. Hampden-Sidney is to present a play in our auditorium. We know not what, nor when, nor how but it is anticipated with great joy. Already hearts palpitate wildly even at the thought of a Hampden-Sidney heroine actually acting on our school's stage. Already hearts have been lost and crushed at the hero's feet. Anticipation of wonderful love scenes—perfect love from Hampden Sidney excites our interest, and we await the coming day.

Where she must take her laundry bag "Over the Rotunda throw it!" This reply though very strange, It really did not daunt her, She threw the laundry over— (Thoughts of this deed still haunt her).

Her table hostess told her, That it was getting time, That she be told that for Dessert— Folks always brought a dime. The table hostess laughed in glee, When to next meal she brought Her ten small pennies and was proud Because 'twas right she thought. Through trials and tribulations, This freshman girl still goes, When smiles and grins she causes— She just turns up her nose. For she belongs to the freshman class Which surely will succeed, No matter what the trouble is— That Class will win indeed.

THURS.—Babby Peggy in THE FAMILY SECRET, a special production, with a most excellent cast. Here is a picture the whole family will like. It has the combined strength of a great novel and a stage play. It is from the novel "Editha's Burglars" by Frances Hodgson Burnett. Also good comedy. Matinee at 4 o'clock. We want the children to see this, so all of them under 12 can go to the matinee for 10c.

FRI.—Reginald Denny and Mary Astor in OH DOCTOR. Here is a howlingly funny comedy-drama, as clean as a whistle, checkful of hilarious thrills and a delightful love story—made from the funniest story Harry Leon Wilson ever wrote. He hated to be sick! But gosh! How he hated to get well! Also Good comedy. Matinee at 4. Money refunded, if it doesn't please you.

SAT.—House Peters, Patsy Ruth Miller and an all star cast in HEAD WINDS a special production. He married her, but she didn't know it—he loved her, but she wouldn't believe it—he tried to tame her, but she ran away! It's a thriller from the word go! Has the most thrilling sea-wreck ever filmed in it. Also 10th episode of THE ACE OF SPADES. Two shows, 7:15 and 9 o'clock.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT IN HIGH SCHOOLS

The Women's Intercollegiate Association of Student Government, together with the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government employ a secretary for the purpose of extending student participation in government in secondary schools.

It is asked why the colleges should be interested in establishing student government in secondary schools. College students visualize how much Freshman training would be simplified if the Freshmen had experienced the advantages of student government in high schools. This was the first purpose of establishing student government in the secondary schools, but the purpose broadened.

College students now see the fine chance of helping secondary school students develop their sense of honor and good citizenship whether or not they enter college.

This work now extends over twenty three states and reaches three thousand secondary schools. It consists of gathering up information about student participation in government and relaying it on to secondary schools. It tries always to get the cooperation of the educational officials before approaching the schools. It attempts thru correspondence to interest principals, faculty and students, and to give specific help where it is needed. The Department is not originating plans, but instead it is endeavoring to share the successful methods of government worked out by some schools with thousands of other schools.

PRESIDENT OF THE SOPHOMORE CLASS

The Sophomore Class takes great pleasure in dedicating this issue of The Rotunda to Virginia Updike, her president.

TO VIRGINIA

Idle words will not the message bear
The message that is old—
All the same, a message ever rare,
Whenever it is told.
But needs alone will to you bring
In language pure and sweet,
The love we deem on golden wings
To unburden at your feet.

—B. G.

SOPHOMORE CLASS TO ENTERTAIN BALL TEAM

The Sophomore Class is to act as hostess to the Harrisonburg Basket Ball team when they visit Farmville next week. We know that the whole student body will cooperate with the Sophomore Class in making our visiting feel at home.

HOMESICK

It's tough when you are homesick
In a strange and distant place,
It's anguish when you're hungry for
An old familiar face,
And yearning for the good folks and
The joys you used to know,
When you're miles away from home
It's a bitter sort of woe.

Keep the Red and White on the cup.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

(Born February 12, 1809)

This man whose comely face we look upon,
Was one of nature's masterful men;
Born with strong arms, that unfought battles won;
Direct of speech and earnest with the pen;
Chosen for large designs, he had the art
Of winning with his humor, and he went Straight to his mark, which was the human heart;
Wise, too, for what he could not bend
Upon his back a more than Atlas load,
The burden of the Commonwealth, was laid;
He stooped, and rose up to it, though the road
Shot suddenly downwards, not a whit dismayed.
Hold, warriors, councillors, kings!
All now give place
To this dear benefactor of the race,

NOTED ARCHAEOLOGIST AT STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

Count Byron Khun De Prorok is a well-known archaeologist, author and artist. Girls, can you imagine anything more thrilling than seeing a real live French explorer at S. T. C., in the little town of Farmville, Virginia? A real young man too, full of humor and although living among the ruins of the ancient times, has not forgotten the ways of the present day, our likes and dislikes. First of all what was his subject—when we first heard it we said, "I don't want to hear that dry old lecture about Carthage," but lo! it was not dry but extremely entertaining. The count made it seem that we were right there witnessing each great excavation. He spoke of his own personal experiences and then before he finished uttering the words the scene was flashed before our eyes in beautiful colors. The count not only lectured but he had tinted the slides so that we might be able to appreciate some of the real glories and beauties of his adventures.

Everyone who had the privilege of hearing this lecture enjoyed it all immensely and felt that their afternoon had been very profitably spent.

TO THE FRESHMEN

What could S. T. C. do without her Freshman Class? They came here in September but they have already made themselves so much a part of us that we cannot conceive of school without them. They have shown their spirit by entering into all the student activities. They have been winners in athletics, not only when they were winners but when defeated. Many of them are taking part in our F. W. C. A. They have proven their willingness to cooperate and their spirit of service and at present are working on a musical comedy, the proceeds of which are to go to our much beloved Student Building.

Although we may not have expressed our devotion to you, Freshmen, in so many words, and at times you may even have thought of us as your worst enemies, we are indeed proud of your pep, initiative, good sportsmanship and your spirit of cooperation—and here is the love of the Sophomore Class!

DRAMATIC CLUB PLAY "MICE AND MEN"

The Dramatic Club has chosen its spring play, the title being, "Mice and Men." Selections for the cast are being made and rehearsals will start soon. Everyone knows what a dramatic club play promises and will wait with great expectancy for the time when it will be shown.

Zeta Tau wishes to announce the following new pledges:
Helen Sturges, Eastern Shore
Sara Nickels, Gate City.

VIRGINIA CLUB ORGANIZES; SIXTEEN CHARTER MEMBERS

Ten years ago at Chapel Hill, in the state of North Carolina, a club known as the North Carolina Club, was formed. Dr. E. C. Branson, who had seen similar clubs started in other places, was very much interested in the work and helped the club get started.

The North Carolina Club has had for its purpose the studying of state problems. Each year a specific problem is studied from every phase. At the end of the year a bulletin is published, containing the information and the papers which have been presented during the year. These bulletins are for distribution and anyone who wants one may have it. These bulletins have been of great aid in helping the state, and have been back of a number of the improvements. The University of North Carolina feels that the Carolina Club is an essential element in the school.

There is no organization anywhere in Virginia which corresponds to this. For sometime people in this school have been realizing that we need to come into closer contact with the state and that an organization such as this might make this college a greater asset to Virginia than it now is.

Due to Miss Stubbs, who talked the plan over with different groups, a club has at last been founded, with its main purpose that of keeping the college and the state in closer touch. On Thursday, February 4, Mr. Edgar T. Thompson, secretary of the North Carolina Club, came here and told the group what the North Carolina Club has done and what it hopes to accomplish. After supper in the Tea Room, and an informal talk and discussion with Mr. Thompson, the Club was formally organized. The officers elected were:

President	Mrs. Edwards
Active Treasurer	Miss Stubbs
Secretary	Louise Brewer
Cor. Sec'y.	Anne Robertson
Treasurer	Daphne Gilliam
Historian	Elizabeth Bugz
Reporter	Rosalind Harrell

Dr. Walmsley was elected to active membership and Dr. Jarman and Mr. Thompson to honorary membership.

OUR SISTER CLASS, THE SENIORS

Who are they, these figures who haunt our halls in black gowns and caps with tassels? They are the lordly seniors, the leaders of our Student Body. What could S. T. C. do without them? One of the leading factors in our own Farmville spirit is the Senior Class. Would any of us feel the same warmth around our hearts if a week went by without singing 'Alma Mater' for our sisters. The repeated singing of this from week to week, brings very clearly to our minds the closeness of our bonds of sisterhood. As the cap and gown is the symbol for preeminence in learning, so the Senior Class (Continued on last page)

"TIS A SHAME TO GO AWAY EMPTY-HANDED."

Any spectator who has, by chance, watched a college girl depart "with head and baggage" would not believe that she could "go away empty-handed." It is difficult to imagine her without an amusing lot of luggage from hat-box to kodak. We agree with the Greek general who uttered these words to his men in a losing fight. "'Tis a shame to go away empty-handed." It is certain that in June the home-going student will have a plenty to burden her hands, but what will she carry in her head? A hat-box may be packed half an hour before departure, but for development, enlarging of outlook, and gain in knowledge, months are required—months in which opportunities should be accepted as liberally as they are given. There are not so many months before June in which we may take advantage of our liberal opportunities. We must begin now packing the real treasure we shall carry home, for it would be a shame to go away without it.

A SPINNER IN THE SUN.

She was spinning, spinning as the sun's bright rays came down. She was humming softly as her golden thread ran through, as her wheel revolved round and round. I paused upon the threshold and I wondered as I stood why the golden thread ran smoothly and the wheel never ceased to hum. With a smile of golden sunlight and with eyes like dewy morn, she paused in her spinning and made answer to my silent thoughts.

"Oh! you stranger, list while I tell. Through my hands passeth the golden strand of life, which so delicately, so deftly do I weave in characters of right. Behold my pattern. Is it not a charming sight?"

I gazed—it was. Doubts assailed me and I murmured:

"Oh. Spinner, spinning in the sun, do knots or tangled threads e'er halt you—life does not run so smoothly, there are tangles everywhere. Tell me do you not ever find it so?"

A cloud rolled o'er the sun but passed as a fleeting thought.

"My pattern is not perfect for beneath it lie the faults of the spinner—but who shall say that it is not beautiful for it is woven in the likeness of One who is perfect."

The sun's rays began to slant. The sky in the west grew soft and the evening stars came out. She was spinning, spinning as the moonlit rays came down. At her feet lay the almost finished pattern, gleaming in the silvery light.

So I left her, humming softly, as she goes spinning through the night.

THE TRYSTING PLACE.

What music to our ears are the old familiar phrases—"Go to Gilliams' with me?" "Meet me in Gilliams'." "I'll see you at Gilliams'." Never are such appeals as these refused. Who could, in fact, refuse a chance to go to such a place as Gilliams'?

Indeed! What would our school be without that bright meeting place across the way? If you're ever feeling blue go to Gilliams', and you'll surely have a sudden change of feeling. You'll find the place filled within every inch of its floor space, and still the hordes come in. What sighs of relief are heard when about six people decide its time to leave. And speaking of noise, The like of the hubbub in Gilliams' has never been heard. Everyone is trying to talk above everyone else, and everyone wants to be waited on at once. We wonder how Danny Gilliam ever keeps on such friendly terms with all of us.

When we think of Gilliams' we'll all have to admit the truth of "That's where my money goes" but on top of that, we must add —To Gilliams' We Bow.

SOPHOMORE CLASS MAN

T. A. McCORKLE

McCORKLE

Who is it knows when things go wrong?
Who greets each new day with a song?

Who strides along with rapid pace
Meeting his trials with smiling face?
Whom do we love—one and all together?

This man who is happy whatever the weather;

He who will stick through thick and thin.

Meeting our problems, as his, with a grin.

Perhaps you have guessed—would you like me to tell?

McCorkle's the man whom we 'Sophs' love so well.

—Fannie Rowe Brown.

THOUGHTS

Days are swiftly flying by—we can not bid them stay

And yet to think that soon will come the time to go away,

We fuss about our classes—fume about the food we eat,

And even complain because we have to own a chapel seat,

The tests we say are all too hard—the classes are a bore,

The study hour is much too long and bells just make us sore.

We don't see why we have to go to meetings every night,

We wish the maid would clean our room—it's always such a sight.

The building isn't heated right—it's too hot or cold

We can't even tell a joke unless its always just been told.

Oh! these and many other things we hate while we are here,

But what will be our thoughts when we are far away next year?

We'll think of all the good old times and long once more to be.

Where we have left our happiness—at dear old S. T. C.

—Fannie Rowe Brown.

The most inspiring message from a head coach to his men is attributed to the football mentor of a North Carolina eleven just about to face Harvard, said he, "I want you to remember boys that every man on the Harvard team is a Republican."

THE TEAM THAT HAS NEVER BEEN DEFEATED

The Sophomore Basket Ball team has the honor of being the only team that has never experienced defeat. Through these two years they have worked and played as a unit always loyal to Red and White, and always true to the Sophomore code—good sportsmanship.

No one player can be picked out as the star player; all go to make a perfect whole. The upholders of the Red and White have a wonderful record to pass on to next year's Freshmen, and may their spirit "carry on."

DELTA SIGMA CHI MID-WINTER BANQUET

On Saturday evening, February 13, at six-thirty, the active members of Delta Sigma Chi, together with their advisors, visitors, six old girls, and three new members were guests of the Queen of Hearts at a banquet in the tea room.

The Valentine spirit pervaded the entire occasion, and the decorations and menu were in harmony with the season.

In the center of the room hung a large red heart, from which streamers of tiny hearts were suspended to each plate. Frances Sale was toast mistress, and each of the individual toasts carried out the idea of the Valentine celebration at the Court of the Queen of Hearts.

The following guests and old members of the sorority were present:

FAIRYLAND

World so simple, unassuming,
You are like a garden blooming;
Your heart throbs only simple airs,
In your soul perpetual prayers.

Graceful hills, purple mountains,
Fairy music, gurgling fountains
Trailing off silvery streams
To a wonderland of dreams.

When upon your brow I gaze
I always wonder with amaze
Why the Lord should ever plan
Such realms merely just for man.

I always wonder could there be
A home for fairies in each tree,
Or by each smiling, babbling brook
A home for fairies in each nook.

I am always, always thinking
That the fairies must be drinking
In some dark, secluded dell
Hidden where the fairies dwell.

Mystic whispers from the leaves
O drenched and dripping apple trees
Fill my mind with rainbow showers
Caught from many fairy flowers.

I am always, always scheming
'Bout this fairyland, and dreaming,
When at eventide I trace
In the west a mystic face.

All of these—and many more—
Things unnamed, unthought before,
Make me drunk with fairy wine,
While at the fairy board I dine.

Would you, could you? hear the things
Harmonies from mystic strings—
That my fairies play for me;
Would you? Could you, tell me.

Would you like my fairyland,
If I took you by the hand;
If I led you to the dell
Where the fairies ever dwell?

Louise Brewer: What do you think
I am a centipede?

P. K. O.: It says here that there are a lot of dubs attending college these days.

O. K. P.: I'll say so. You've got a mighty big chapter.

I say Payne's S. T. C.'s acted bee

Dorcas Chaney: Do you play by Student: It's dark without.

Kara Trent: Dark without what?
Student: Without a light.

Every old frat has a sweetheart song
And mine is among the list;
With my sweet mamma the song seems wrong—
Please write a tune like this.

She has late dates with an A. T. O.
After she's told me to roam.
A Theta Chi takes her to a show
And a Delta brings her home.

She wears a star for a Sigma Nu
A heart for an S. P. E.
And a Phi Gam's diamond comes to view
When a Phi Gam's there to see.

The line she shoots to a Delta Sigma Phi
She got from an S. A. E.
Then if it works on a Sigma Chi
She tries it again on me.

She just loves to dance with a Beta
"His eyes! Oh, I just could die!"
She adores a Phi Delta Theta
Until a K. A. comes by.

She will cuddle and coo with a P. K. A.
She holds a Kappa Sig's hand
A dear Chi Phi falls for her
And she thinks he's simply grand."

Every "sweet" frat man that she has met

Now adorns her boudoir wall
And she hasn't found a frat man yet
That wouldn't do his little "fall."

She rides at night with a D. K. E.
Down any dark road he'll choose.
Though she swears that she is true to me,

I've got the fraternity blues.

Although I'm not sure which way is up

Or I fit in the wheel—
I love her; so here's a cup—
And I toast my Pan Hellenic girl.

FOUR YEARS

About the Seniors there's lots to be said

She's reached a goal; she's achieved an end.

The pinnacle of joy she now has reached

Her memory book is a storehouse complete.

About the Junior there's much to be told

She is visioning the June, when a degree she'll hold,

One more busy year at old S. T. C.
To store up memories—to carry out on life's sea.

About the Sophomore, there are some things to be said

She is neither beginning nor yet near the end

She's happy, contented and busy's can be

"She's going to College" is about what you'll say.

Now, about the Freshman there's a story to be told

For coming to her are four years of gold!

Look! There are these.
Freshman curiosity

Soph superiority
Junior importance

and Senior-osity complete

For the Freshman Girl.

THE BELLS

(With apologies to Poe)

Hear the ringing of the bell—
Rising bell!

What a day of laboring that clanging sound! foretells!

Hear it jangle, jangle, jangle,
In the icy hour of dawn

And to us it seems to tangle
Yea and ever seems to strangle

All our dreams and they are gone.
Keeping time, time, time,

In a sort of deadly rhyme
To the awful condemnation that so noisily doth well

From that bell, bell, bell

Bell, bell, bell
From the clanging and the jangling of that bell.

Hear the mellow meal-time bells—
Golden bells!

What a world of happiness their harmony foretells!

Sealed up in our class-rooms tight
How they ring! to our delight!

From our strolling outside
Or from our beds.

To the dining room we glide
To the monitors it would seem we are late

No excuse!

Oh, from out the mellow ole bell
What a sign for hurrying

Voluminously wells!
How it swells!

How it dwells!
In our S. T. C! how it tells

Of the penalty which fell
On the lazy and the sleeping

Oh the bells, bells, bells,
Oh the bells, bells, bells, bells,

Bells, bells, bells
Oh the signal and the warning of the bells!

Hear the startling chapel bells—
Warning bells!

What a tale of bustling now the turbulency tells!

In the gym teacher's talks
How we're told of our faults!

To much discipline here I shriek
We dare not even speak

To a soul.
In our hastening to obey

All the rules they give to us
We forget to raise the seats

As Mrs. King says we must.
Marching out—we fall in line

And race out—or else a talk
About our leisurely walk!

The next time.

In the halls of S. T. C.
Oh, the bells, bells, bells

What a tale their clangor tells of surprise!

How they clang and buzz and roar
What a panic they pour out

On the bosom of the palpitations
Yet the ears distinctly tell

In the jangling
And the clanging

How the pupils run pell-mell
By the hustling and the bustling on account

Of that same bell—

Of the bell,
Of the bell, bell, bell, bell

Bell, bell, bell
In the clatter and the clanging of that bell!

Hear the chiming of the bell,
The light bell!

What a night of peaceful dreams its quiet chimes foretell!

In the work of preparation
How we always hasten

At the tempting invitation of its tone!
For every sound that boats

Thru the hall at these salutes
Is a moan

Keeping time, time, time
In a sort of rhythmic rhyme

To the summons of the bell
Of the bell, bell, bell

Keeping time, time, time

As it tells, tells, tells

In a happy merry rhyme

Of the rolling of the bells

Of the bells, bells, bells

To the calling of the bells

Of the bells, bells, bells, bells,

Bells, bells, bells—

To the chiming and the rhyming of

the bells.

GLEE CLUB OPERETTA COM-ING MARCH 4 & 5.

The Glee Club Operetta, "Paul Revere" is nearing its completion and will be given March 4 and 5 in the S. T. C. auditorium. From all we can "hear" everything is going over big,
and with Mebae Hunt and Lucy Mar-stellar as the leading characters we are sure that a treat is in store for us.

This splendid work of our college women must not end with their college years. When they are teachers and workers in the secondary schools, they must remember this extension work and personally help the students to take upon their shoulders their share of the responsibility of our school community.

PIERIAN INITIATES NEW MEMBERS

The Pierian Literary Society initiated its new members at the regular monthly meeting Friday night in the Student Building auditorium. The new service was very beautiful and has been adopted as the yearly initiation service. Mrs. Mae Marshall Edwards gave a very helpful and instructive talk on the work of the program committee for the rest of the year.

Cakes, candy, peanuts and dopes
were served by Anna Leigh Gwaltney and Cornelia Dickinson at the end of the meeting.

At Eaco Theatre This Week

THURS. & FRI.—Rudolph Valentino in the super special production, THE EAGLE. He spurned an empress, and her love turned to hatred. Then with a price on his head he became the Eagle, a bandit feared for his daring, cumming, skill at arms. And then came The Girl, caught by the highwaymen only to be freed by the soft glances of half-hidden eyes than win the Eagle's heart and bring him to her feet. A tempest of emotion. It is considered the best production Valentino has ever starred in. Also good comedy each day Matinee at 4 o'clock. Attend matinees and save on admissions.

SAT.—Richard Dix in THE LUCKY DEVIL, a Paramount picture. An action comedy of love, luck and lightning. Written especially for Richard Dix by the author of "The Air Mail" and the famous Wally Reid auto racing stories. It's a peach of a picture. Also the first episode of BATTLING BREWSTER, a fast action serial photoplay starring Franklyn Farnum and Helen Holmes. Two shows: at 7:15 and 9 o'clock.

S. T. C. CELEBRATES WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Colonial Seppie and Dance in Rehearsal Hall

Had Martha and George Washington stepped into the Rehearsal Hall on February 22nd, they would surely have thought themselves in their own Colonial Ballroom. For our college girls were not "celebrates" but genuine maidens of pre-Revolutionary days. We had got a townswoman from an extra local supper, during which cherries had been served (most excellent idea!). For this, we thank Mrs. Jamison. And we had red and white roses and the most appropriate red hatched for place cards. Costumes of various hues dotted the floor and gentlemen, powdered and be-wigged, attended the ladies fair. The Grand March was led by Kate Trent and Gertrude Quinn, followed by the many sons and daughters of Colonial fame. What a sight they were! The prize was won by Alice Carter and her partner, Clara Thompson.

Four couples gave an exhibition of the minuet with such delicacy and grace as to delight the audience. Following this, the entire student body was asked to participate in that lovely old Virginia Reel. Yes, surely Washington would have been pleased to see such an affair. But perhaps that noble gentleman would have been slightly shocked to see Virginia's daughters "step" to "Paddin' Madelin'" and "Charleston." On the other hand, who knows but what he himself might have tried it?

To the Y. W. C. A. Social Committee we are gratefully appreciative for such a delightful evening.

To finish it off, the student body was entertained by radio and heard its own Glee Club broadcast from Richmond, Virginia. We only wish that every 22nd were someone's birthday!

BETA PHI

The members of Beta Phi entertained Tuesday evening, February 16th at a delightful supper. The color scheme of blue and gold was carried out most effectively in the decorations and favors. Those entertained were Misses Molly Ferguson, Margaret Chandler, Frances B. Smith, Doris Brauer, Margaret Fowler and Frances Clark.

DEDICATION

With all our love and grateful appreciation of her interest and loyalty to us, the Junior Class dedicates this issue of The Rotunda to Miss Myrtle E. Granel.

MISS CRENELS HONORED

An Outstanding Figure at Geography Conference

A Normal Science Conference was held at Columbia University in November 27 and 28, 1925. At this conference the outstanding contribution of the Atlantic Seaboard was represented.

In the Geography Section our member agreed to work out a typical question on some geographical situation to show the way in which the personal subject matter could be handled.

The topics were presented and the two most typical ones were chosen for discussion on Friday, November 27 and one of these was: "The British"

FARMVILLE - LYNCHBURG GAME ENDS IN TIE

The Farmville and Lynchburg College Girls' Basketball teams tied the game 24 to 24 on the Lynchburg gym floor, February 19. The result of the game was a tie is due to the fact that the basketball rules prohibit playing extra periods to break a tie.

The game started off slowly and continued in this manner until the latter part when it developed into a rather frenzied fight. Both teams kept hard, keeping the score very close, with neither team leading more than four points throughout the entire game. Farmville improved, as usual, ran high and strong.

The Farmville forwards exhibited some remarkable shots for goals. The center's back work was excellent and demands to be noted. The game was a passwork and clean play. A very novel incident occurred when White was charged from center to center, her old position, and played a good her game. The high point witness for Lynchburg were Elbert and Hurdley.

Line-up:
Farmville: R. P. Elbert, Perkins, J. F. Hurdley, Mitchell, J. C. Schwartz, Reed, S. C. Hise, Crane, L. G. Eaton, White, R. G. Gresham.
Substitutes: Elbert, A. Reed, the Hall, Woodson for Reed, Hall for Perkins, White for Woodson, Gray for White.

Lynchburg: Hurdley for Reed, Gresham for Eaton, Gray for Gresham.

Referee: Robert, Rogers, Under, Taylor.

WHO WILL WIN THE "BUCKLE?"

You remember the story about the "buckle" that Mrs. Gresham told in Chapel one morning? That is right and, therefore, the winner when the "buckle" was won by the Farmville Victory on our part at 5:30 p. m. This is one of the home games of the season and a way to look forward to in the greatest anticipation.

The following week on March 5 we return the game. Let's keep the "buckle" forever!
"Forward Farmville, forward Farmville."
Please right to the tip. Get the Buckle every time. Victory will surely gain today!

THE SPIRIT OF WASHINGTON.

Each year we celebrate the birthday of our famous Virginian and Father of America, George Washington, but do we from custom celebrate in song and pleasure such an occasion without thinking of the ideals of the man whose birthday we commemorate? In him was a faith that never faltered, though the trying circumstance of the American Revolution weighed heavily upon him. In him was an almost unearthly wisdom, courage that was never dismayed, loyalty to the demands of patriotism and honor, and above all, that "harmonious union of moral and intellectual qualities which has never found its parallel among men." Among the heroes who struggled for independence, he was leader and king, and they gladly testified their love, admiration and gratitude to him as a soldier, a man, and President.

There was also a Washington of peace, striving in the aftermath of our fight for freedom to unite the states in an everlasting bond of peace and security. In visions he saw growth, grandeur, and the imperishable glory of one Country, one Constitution, one Destiny—Union and Liberty inseparable.

What a spirit! What an ideal for America to live up to and cherish! How proud Virginia is to claim one whose spirit is marching on and who is

"First in war,
First in peace,
And first in the hearts of his countrymen."

ON BEING COLLEGIATE.

When one sings "Collegiate, Collegiate,—Yes, we are Collegiate!" and asks the question, "What does one mean?" Does one really suppose that collegiates are "seldom in a hurry", "never, never worry!" and all the rest of the popular production. 'Tis true that many fair and golden locks are not shorn until Mary or Jane are college students, and as for saying "Damn"—why it was never thought of until entrance to college. Galoshes and slickers are hailed as college "regalia" by those of the older generation who stand on the side lines in the whirl and mad rush of modern life and indiscriminately criticize Youth. We ask, with all deferential respect for the older generation, if they are dealing justly with collegiates, and especially, with girls? When one considers the comparatively recent amelioration of educational advantages for girls, there is little wonder that they seem so straightforward, so open-minded, so democratic, so equal to men. Inflexibility of spirit and desire for learning have been inculcated in girls within the last fifty years, and they are holding on—yet expanding—such traits most advantageously.

Again we ask—is wearing galoshes and slickers being collegiate? Is putting on a "typical" college life, as a whole? Is the cause dancing, socializing in most colleges, does that imply a laxity in the morality of students? Is the quintessence of collegiate life "crushing" or "petting"? Ask yourself! On the other hand, does the very word collegiate suggest a "book worm", a grind? A college education, as we of today understand it, means not merely absorbing Latin and Science, and graduating with a cranium stacked with batteries of statistics. No. Our idea of being a collegiate is being a lot of things: a good sport, a Christian— one who is ever ready for fun, for serious thinking, for service; one who gives her best, sharing it freely and willingly with her friends and sister collegiates; one who is trying to glean from her college education a valuable, permanent, and human nature, incite into problems that face humanity; one who is far-seeing, seeking a vision and an ideal to hold before her in her life work; one who is tolerant enough to cling to the best of the past and open-minded enough to accept the best of the present and future. In what sense of the word are you "collegiate"?

THE VOICE

Flowers bloom in the spring
A whispering wind
The leaves rustle in the breeze
The birds sing and dance
And time has passed by
But it comes again and will

If I could see you now
How glad I'd be
How glad I'd be
How glad I'd be
How glad I'd be
How glad I'd be

ANCESTRAL HOME OF WASHINGTON RESTORED

Sulgrave Manor in Northamptonshire, England, was, as many people know, the ancestral home of George Washington. It was originally an abode of Henry VIII and was given to Lawrence Washington by him in 1539. In 1606 John Washington left his home and came to America, settling on the Potomac River.

Eventually the manor passed out of the direct line of the Washington family and was allowed to fall into a state of neglect and disrepair. Throughout the period of neglect and decay the Washington Arms was preserved intact on the stone lintel of the porch.

The British Centenary Committee purchased the house in 1914 as a commemoration of the treaty that marked the close of the American Revolution. During the Great War the house was damaged, but it is now being restored to its former glory.

A small sum of money was raised in America, but the largest contributions made toward the restoration of Sulgrave Manor were made by the people of England.

The interior as well as the exterior of the manor has been restored in all its Tudor beauty and charm.

On the 25th of July, the Manor was formally opened to the public by the British Centenary Committee. It is a national shrine to the memory of the famous Washington family.

COLLEGIATE VERSUS COLLEGIATE

Each year in this college, under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A., discussions are conducted. All students are invited to join some group and participate in discussions on topics of local, national, or international interest. These groups have been both interesting and helpful, but many of the girls have not entered these groups.

Therefore, Dr. Walmley has kindly suggested to conduct an open forum on a question of nation-wide interest. "Collegiate vs. Collegiate." Are you collegiate and do you wish to be considered as such. Think about it, girls! And come to the Student Building Auditorium on Wednesday and Friday morning of the first two weeks in March. This is your opportunity to discuss collegiate problems and set forth all of those views you have had pent up in your hearts since entering college. Are your thoughts collegiate, your clothes and your attitude collegiate. Are you collegiate?

CONFERENCE ON INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

On Tuesday, February 16, 1926, a conference on International Relations met in the auditorium of the Woman's Club at Richmond, Virginia.

Men and women of state, national, and international repute attended, several making interesting and helpful talks. Among these was D. H. I. Moulton, of Washington, who spoke on the economic conditions of Europe of today. David H. Miller, international lawyer and assistant in framing the League of Nations, made an address on Alternatives to Armament.

Those representing Farmville State Teachers College at the conference were Dr. Walmley, Anne Robertson, Margaret Lewis Stearns, Mary Linn Petty, and Frances Walmley.

LETTERS

Dear Sister Class:

We would like so much to tell you just how proud we are of you. You've played the game; you've been true to the green and white, our class colors. And we think you've been a great sport, you have worked hard, and in the past half year are great prophesies for the future.

Love always,
Junior Class

Dear Sophomores and Seniors:

Through our college life with its multifold implications and its various round of activities, we have been proud to have and preserve the green and white. The red and white versus the green and white, but inherent in all of us are aspirations for the finest for the blue and white and our beloved Alma Mater.

Little George Washington a good boy was he.

He cut down his father's nice cherry tree;

And when his father asked him why
He told the truth and never a lie.
And so the word has come down to us
For a counter-acting in my mind of late—
What did he say when to broke a date?

There was a girl named "V"
She's our Junior President you see,
She's jolly and gay—
As pretty as May!

But he fell and "skint" her knee!

Dot Myers (performing with salt chests at table): "This is a dumb-bell in gym."
Amelia: "You're mistaken; you are a dumb-bell out of gym."

Edna R.: I've just been down to Miss
Wheeler's to "make up".
John M. Oh, what did you have a make about?

Lucy Haile was a Yankee brave,
But she flirted worse than a knave;
In old Tut's tomb,
She fell with a boom!
With his wife "she" wouldn't behave.

A Janitor was once King Tut.
She made a wonderful nut;
She was tall and lean,
Had a beautiful Queen,
And her guards were black as 'smut'.

Oh: "Squirt! Squirt! Wake up!"
Squirt: I can't.
Oh: "Why can't you?"
Squirt: "I'm not asleep."

H. S. Studer: "Don't you think the backfield is fine?"
Mary D.: "Yes, the entire grounds are beautiful."

Handed to the Junior team
We held them in highest esteem
They can surely, play ball,
And we love them all,
When we see them our faces beam!

"The birth of a nation," cried Adam when Cain was born.

E. M.: Tell me, have you ever loved another?

E. T.: Of course, dear. Do you think
I'd practice on a nice girl like you?

Mary C.: "Has anyone ever told you that your chin was ugly?"

Skinny: "No, why?"
Mary C.: "Well, you're growing another one."

Sam: Isn't your roommate coming back next term?

Others: No, I couldn't afford her.

FARMVILLE GLEE CLUB BROADCASTS FROM RICHMOND

To celebrate Washington's birthday, the Glee Club of our college broadcasted over radio from the Edgeworth Radio Station, Richmond. The girls went to the capitol city in cars, did a bit of shopping in the afternoon, and finally gathered at the station to broadcast at eight o'clock in the evening. The management and all those connected with the broadcasting station were most hospitable and charming to the company. Several telegrams were received during the program; while here in S. T. C. seven hundred girls sat perfectly quiet to hear the music and singing of their own Glee Club. They have been invited to return in the Spring—the highest compliment that might be paid them.

"US"

Act I (1923-24)

We came in the fall of '23.

Eager and ready for work;

Exactly 500 strong were we

Our duty we'd never shrink;

The "fire" came about Thanksgiving time.

We had to go home for a while;

'Twas in Farmville, we heard the Xmas chime

For we stayed here meek and mild. Act II (1924-25)

Sophisticated Sophomores now were we.

We learned about cooperation;

We learned to be sports, to know how to smile,

To work a lengthy duration.

Our pennies to the Student Building we gave

When Founders Day came around. The Faculty, Dr. Jarman, smiling or grave

Their glories we'll ever expound. Act III (1925-26)

We're mid way now in our Junior year

We've "played the game" all thru. Ours is the very best Sister Class here;

To S. T. C. we're true blue.

"Life is a picture, paint it well" Is the motto of our class.

If asked how we do it, we should tell "Teamwork and love of each lass."

Act IV (1926-27)

To be continued next year!

BLUE RIDGE BANQUET

Principle Organizations in College Represented

Last Wednesday evening, one of the most delightful banquets of the year was given in the Banquet Room of the Tea Room. The guests numbered seventy. Most of the organizations in school were represented, faculty members who had been to Blue Ridge and who were interested in such conferences were there, and many girls who, as individuals, are greatly concerned in the success of that great movement of the Southern colleges.

The welcome address was made by Alice Carter, President of the Blue Ridge Club. She stated that the club and the Y. W. C. A. were more than delighted to see so many students already catching the Blue Ridge spirit. After a few words concerning the organization and purpose of the Blue Ridge Club in our college, she extended a cordial invitation of sending delegates to Blue Ridge.

Rosalind Harrell, the first speaker, told of the educational advantages of the conferences in Blue Ridge, of the friendly contact with students of the southern colleges and with foreign students, of the opportunity of hearing such men as Mr. George M. Collins and Dr. Koo, Y. M. C. A. Travelling Secretary of Japan. A gusto was imparted to the occasion when Lucy Haile Overbey ran the gamut of the sporting world at Blue Ridge. Riding, (and Lucy Haile's horse stood up most on the time!) swimming, rowing, tennis, and basketball, to say nothing of hiking and trips to Mt. Mitchell and other points of interest, furnished recreation for all. Miss London who was hostess of the Conference last year praised our delegation very highly. (By the way, we had the largest number of girls there!) She suggested—and we all agreed heartily—that to gather around the fireplace of our cottage there and talk, or toast marshmallows, or sing was heavenly! Least that most vital thing "food" be omitted, "Bun" Quinn sang its praises. She also explained to the guests something of the spirit of Blue Ridge, of the intensive religious and exalted feeling one has while sitting on the steps of Lee Hall and gazing at an indescribably beautiful sunset. Clubby Gray extended an invitation to all organizations to send a girl to Blue Ridge to represent them at that conference.

During the evening, the girls who had been to Blue Ridge sang those familiar songs so characteristic of the place and also some of our original songs.

The end of such a delightful banquet? We sang "Taps" and the Blue Ridge Call! And we were carried back to Lee Hall—to Blue Ridge!

DELTA KAPPA ENTERTAINS

On Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock the Delta Kappa entertained the Mu Omega and their advisors at a delightful party in the Tea Room. Valentine decorations were carried out, and the entire party was unique in every detail.

At Ecco Theatre This Week

WED.—BETTY BRONSON and RICARDO CORTEZ in NOT SO LONG AGO. A Paramount picture. A romantic comedy of the days when New York was young—when Times Square was a pasture and Broadway just acappath. Produced with charm and color by the director of "Little Old New York." Also Aesop Fable. Matinee at 4 o'clock.

THURS.—Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton in the D. W. Griffith special production ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL. A simple romance of love and potatoes. The N. Y. World said: "We could write for hours on this picture, but space is limited. Perhaps, however, we've conveyed the idea that this is a great picture and will have to be reckoned with in the list of the best of the year." Also good comedy. Matinee at 4 o'clock.

FRI.—BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK a Paramount Special production from the noted stage play. The biggest, most spectacular production James Cruze has made since "The Covered Wagon. This is the hilarious hit New York roared at for two years. It beggars description. It tells one of the sweetest love stories ever screened. Also GOOD comedy Matinee at 4 o'clock.

SAT.—RICHARD DIX in TOO MANY KISSES, a Paramount picture that we have shown before. He swore he would never kiss another girl. Then along came the most kissable girl ever—and smack! went the kiss that started the fun. A jolly, lively love-comedy, 100 per cent entertaining. Also episode two of "Battling Brewster." Two shows: 7:15 and 9 o'clock.

It Pays to Advertise

It is a time worn expression but will remain true—

"Till the Lion eats grass like an ox
And the fishworm swallows the whale
"Till the terrapin knits woolen socks
And the hare is outrun by the snail
"Till Thomas Cats swim in the air
And elephants roost in the trees
"Till insects in summer are rare
And snuff never makes people sneeze.
et cetera ad infinitum.

FARMVILLE VICTORIOUS OVER HARRISONBURG

The Buckeye Returns Home!

About five years ago a Buckeye journeyed to Harrisonburg and much to our sorrow and against our will there it has remained for five long years. Now that is past history, for Thursday night we brought our Buckeye home.

The gym was packed to overflowing with slinky yet cheering girls. The game started off with a bang and proved to be the fastest and most spectacular played on the local court this season. Both teams showed coaching of the finest kind, and the entire game was clean and well played throughout. At the end of the first half the score stood 8-4 in favor of Harrisonburg. But the Farmville team came into the third quarter with the determination that the "Blue and White shall wave on high". In the last half Farmville rolled up 11 points to Harrisonburg's 1, making the score at the final whistle 15-9 in favor of Farmville.

We take off our hat to Harrisonburg in that her pass work seemed perfect. Each player knew just where the ball was going and was on the spot when it arrived. It would be hard to pick any outstanding players as they all worked as one machine.

Farmville played a quick, snappy game, teamwork showing here as with Harrisonburg. The passwork in the center was exceptionally good. Our team can surely play ball.

Line-up:

Harrisonburg	Farmville
Rosen	R. F. Yancey
Nesman	L. F. Hall
Mills	J. C. Mitchell
Nickell	S. C. Reid
Jackson	R. G. White
Kelly	L. G. Crute

Substitutions: Harrisonburg—for Jackson, Farmville—Perkins for Yancey, Jones for Crute.

Field goals: Rosen 2, Nesman 1, Perkins 2, Hall 2.

Foul goals: Rosen 1, Nesman 2, Yancey 1, Perkins 2, Hall 4.

Referee: Wells. Umpire: Venable.

THE BUCKEYE

O the Buckeye shining soft and brown
It will always make you lucky;
And it's come to us in Farmville town
Because our Team is plucky.

The Buckeye! The Buckeye!
'Twill shine on us for many a day
The Buckeye! The Buckeye!
Has come to town to stay!

DEDICATION

When one has passed thru four years of life in our college and has learned to love her graceful colonnades, her stately halls, her home-like atmosphere and her gentle influence, giving incentive to learning and inspiration to service, one looks about to find an ideal of what a true daughter of our Alma Mater should be. Wishing to recognize their ideal of an alumna of S. T. C., the Seniors dedicate their number of the Rotunda to Miss Mary Clay Hiner.

MOSCOW ARTISTS ENSEMBLE

One of the most unique lyceum numbers was given in the auditorium Friday night by the Moscow Artists Ensemble. The work of the whole company was of a high type and extremely original in its nature. TEAMS TO ENTER TRIANGULAR DEBATES

Farmville is going to have a reputation in another field—namely, debating. She is already nationally known for her curriculum, she has a national reputation in athletics, she has a monument to the never-failing devotion of her athletic instructors, Miss Graham and Miss Her. And now she is starting out "full steam ahead" to make for herself a place in the debating world.

Plans have already been completed for a triangular debate with Harrisonburg and Radford on April 30. Then in May we are to have a tug-of-war with Hampden-Sidney. And you remember what a fine time we had last year when we debated with H.-S. And now word has come from the Bridgewater College girls that they would like to have a contest with us. Already our fame has spread abroad for the Bridgewater boys have been debating H.-S. for some time. The student body may help by coming to the try-outs and making an audience for your teams to talk to.

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY JONGLEURS PRESENT "STOP THIEF"

On Saturday evening, February 27, at 8:15 in the State Teachers College Auditorium the Hampden-Sidney Jongleurs presented their initial play of the season.

The delightfully humorous drama, Stop Thief, a farcical fact in three acts by Carlyle Moore, was particularly well suited to the Jongleurs' dramatic ability.

The men were exceedingly ingenious in adapting themselves to the women's parts, not only in their dress, make-up, and voice, but in their manner as well.

Charles Kernan, the president of the Jongleurs, who was the thief, was excellent in his role. Willie Williams, as Nell, who was his efficient accomplice, was a genuine girl with "her" boyish bob and feminine ways. Burton Dechert, assisted by his monologue, was a most attractive English bridegroom. The members of the Carr family, their wedding guests, the rector, and the agents of the law were all perfectly splendid, each carrying out his part exceptionally well.

Professor J. G. Roberts, who directed the play, is to be heartily congratulated for without him it would not have been possible.

The cast of characters who appeared in the order in which they were named was as follows:

Joan Carr ---- Jack Brightwell
Mrs. Carr ---- Lacey Tynes
Caroline Carr ---- Roy Randolph
Madge Carr ---- Dabney Jarman
Nell ---- Willie Williams
William Carr ---- Christian Munt
James Cluney ---- Burton Dechert
Mr. Jamison ---- Alfred Dudley
Dr. Willoughby ---- Robert Porterfield
Rev. M. Spelvin ---- Frank Hoffman
Jacob Doogan ---- Charles Kernan
Joe Thompson ---- Thompson Southall
Sergeant of Police ---- James Ayers

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE PRESIDENTS OF COLLEGE

Dr. J. L. M. Curry it was who inaugurated the establishment of Normal Schools in the South and the Virginia School was among the first. He originally drafted its bill, and was President of its Board of Trustees.

On September 17, 1884, the State Board of Trustees of Virginia's Public School System, only established in 1870, ordered the Principal, Dr. William Henry Ruffner, to open the State Normal School at Farmville in six weeks. And on October 30th began the first session of our Alma Mater.

While Dr. John Cunningham was President the school grew slowly and steadily, though not rapidly. In the ten years of his administration there was an increase from 93 students the first year to 250 the last. His motto was "to teach truth and honor by trust, and to punish severely when this trust was betrayed."

Twenty-eight years have passed since Dr. Cunningham last walked down our halls and lest we forget the man who established its present "conscious success" it is well to look back upon him who saw in it its small beginnings, and him who bore the burdens and heat of the day, who toiled for it and died in its service—John A. Cunningham.

Dr. Robert Frazer became President of the State Normal School in February, 1898 and for four hard years he worked with an earnestness and zeal and a conscientious devotion to his duty that characterized him throughout his life. "His aim in the conduct of school affairs was, first to provide the best possible advantages for the students; second, to offer those advantages to students at the lowest cost so that the benefits might reach the largest number."

Then in 1902 came our own dearly beloved Dr. Joseph L. Jarman. There is no need to say anything more because we all know all about Dr. Jarman and his administration so far, how in 1902 he had only 13 members in his faculty and now there are nearly fifty of those august members presiding over our already overcrowded classrooms, for the student body has grown in far greater proportions than the faculty. Our library has been enriched, we now have a Tea Room of which we are inordinately proud and the most imposing of Student Buildings. Other wonders have been performed and we are expecting more miracles to unfold any day—for what can not our own dear J. L. J. do? Nothing. Long may he administer the affairs of our S. T. C.

LITERARY SOCIETIES

The Cunningham Literary Society entertained the new members at a party in the Recreation Hall Wednesday night, February 24. A very delightful program was given, all the new girls taking part.

FOUR YEARS.

It has been the privilege of the degree class of 1926 to be at S. T. C. during four very fruitful and colorful years in the life of the institution. Four autumns ago, the Student Building was nothing but a hole in the ground where the first bricks of a foundation were being laid. A foundation, too, was laid in the hearts of the three hundred girls who entered then, a foundation on which they hoped to raise a structure of knowledge, character and worth. The student body, then, numbered only five hundred. It has grown toward a thousand and the class of '26 has hoped to grow in breadth of mind and depth of vision with the rapidity of our school population. The institution was a Normal School when this year's Seniors entered. They saw it attain the dignified position of a Teachers College and they hope to be allowed the privilege of helping it to raise its standards and to realize its ideals.

DO WE NEED A REVISED POINT SYSTEM?

The time comes to all of us when a little self-examination is necessary. Ask yourself a few of these questions: Are you so busy with extra curricula activities that you are neglecting your classes? Do you have time to go out for a breath of good fresh air every day? Do you have time to read good books? Do you have time to write home? Are you troubled by having three meetings scheduled on the same evening? Do you wonder why Mary has plenty of leisure while you are breathlessly hither and yon? Do you loathe the word "committee meeting"? Do you belong to about twelve organizations in most of which you are dead timber? Are you so busy that you haven't time to enjoy living?

After you have answered the above questions and recovered your breath, consider the cause of your answers. Here it is: You are over organized, not the college. What you need is an efficient point system to relieve you of your too heavy burden and to give a chance for service to some other girl who has not as yet been discovered.

THE SPIRIT OF FOUNDERS DAY

What Is It?

We hear of "entering into the spirit of an occasion," of "catching the spirit", etc. This would seem to imply something external, a kind of atmosphere that can be entered from without.

The Spirit of Founders Day (which is really the Spirit of Alma Mater) cannot be defined thus, for it is a vital, compelling force that comes from within, that radiates from the very heart of the College and reaches out to her children.

This spirit permeates the institution at all times but reaches the ultimate height of its expression as Founders Day draws near—the celebration, as it were, of Alma Mater's Birthday: it is the spirit of unselfishness, the spirit of loyalty, the spirit of love and appreciation. To the young hearts and minds within her walls this may seem to be an exaggeration of what Alma Mater means to them; to their care-free youth it appears as visionary and extravagant,
but to those who have run the race, to those who look back on their school days from a distance, it is the true definition.

An institution is like a human being—it may possess physical beauty it may be surrounded by luxuries and by all things lovely, but if the right spirit is lacking it is not fulfilling the purpose for which it was intended, and its beauty is as that of a rare blossom without perfume.

Alma Mater lives: she not only lives with those who are at present in her care, but she is very close to all who have had the privilege of a sojourn with her in other days, and her spirit is the same that it was in years that have long ago slipped into the past. Her physical growth has been wonderful, but it has not changed her heart; the vital force that we speak of as the Spirit of Founders Day was born with her and she implanted it just as strongly in the hearts of her children of 1886 as in those of 1926. The only difference is that her marvelous expansion has enabled her to reach out and come in contact with numbers that, in the days of her youth, would have been deemed impossible.

As the time of Founders Day draws near the hearts of thousands are urning "home"; Alma Mater broadcasts this spirit of hers throughout the land until it reaches hearts old and young. Her children are "listening in" in Old Virginia, in many distant States of the Union and even in foreign lands, and these hearts throb anew with love and gratitude when they learn once more that they are not forgotten by her. And so generously does she disseminate this spirit that hundreds are fired with their old-time, school girl enthusiasm which expresses itself in the countless letters that find their way to her;
and without exception they bear, not only greetings from her absent children, but expressions of warm love, of interest in her welfare and (above all) of a longing desire on the part of the writer to "come home" once more.
And in no better way can Alma Mater express this to her own life than for them than in the hearty and loving welcome which she always accords them when they can return to her walls.

The Spirit of Founders Day! May it live through the years and fill the heart of every daughter of Alma Mater!

OUR PRESIDENT

Who is the girl whom we love through and through?

Who plans for the Seniors such grand things to do?

Who puts things across with a "bang," vim and pep?

Who's won for our class so much honor and rep?

Why it's Ann!

Who's true to the Seniors' beloved red and white?

Who'll lead us to win, always strive for the right?

Who's inspired each one all the past two years through?

Who's the wonderful girl all our hats are off to?

Why it's Ann!

AWAKENING

When Nature hears the silent call of Spring

And deep within her heart responses ring

'Tis heard; when sun and rain upon the earth

Dress the early blossoms into birth;

When birds their love notes trill upon the air,

And brooks begin to murmur everywhere

Their melody;

When through the naked limbs with mighty urge

The sap its strong, invigorating surge begins, and trees are tinged with living green;

When resurrection everywhere is seen;

When in the human heart there is a surge

Of love—behold, fair Spring is here;
O ecstasy!

TO MISS JENNIE

For four long years thy love has been Outspoken in a friendship true

For four long years thy smiles have shown

The courage that abides in you.

Strong is the faith we have in thee,
Sweet poetess, with spirit free.

If e'er we need thy strength of heart
Like from an oracle there flows

Not just thy heart but thy whole soul
And all a silent trust bestows

A partner true, a loyal friend,
To every Senior thou hast been.

Thy song will lead us thru the years
Thy laughter will a poem be,
Dear Silent Partner, loud will ring
The praises that we have for thee.

TO OUR SISTER CLASS

We acknowledge the tributes you've paid to us

We'll try to deserve each one
And we wish to express our love to
you,

Our thanks for the things you've done.

It will mean so much to each of us
When out in the state next year

To feel still the tie of friendship for
you

Ending us to our college dear.

A PERFECT WEDDING

As the chosen friend of the bride her only attendant, I arrayed myself in white and sang blithely as I posed the dream of a lavender had becomingly over my eyebrows. I looked thoughtfully at my nose as I powdered it, and reflected that the bride did not quite protect it. And my nose was rather round on the end, too.

A horn honked loudly. I peered out the window and there was Jim, in an open car, of course! He explained that it was for greater speed, and I dashed an extra bit of powder on the exposed nose, and climbed in.

Jim was chewing frantically, seemed to have trouble adjusting his neck to his collar, and in other ways showed that he was a bit nervous. I spoke timidly concerning this, but was informed that he was not the least bit nervous. It was to be a simple wedding, no fuss, no confusion; it had been planned "forty-seven dozen times." I relaxed into silence, and we bumped merrily along.

Perhaps you should see Jim as I saw him. He was short. I was five feet six and he could walk under my arm. He was fat, almost to butterball roundness. His arms were so short they barely met across his front and his little feet did not touch the floor of the car. However, a head of majestic beauty rose from those fat shoulders. Eyes, brown and flashing, looked out from wide-winged brows; force and power were expressed in the fierce mouth and strong chin. Lou really forgot the rest.

Anne, the bride, on the other hand, was six feet tall. She looked like a Greek goddess, with calm, fine features, and long limbs. I never had understood why out of all the people in the world Anne and Jim should decide each was meant for the other.

In February Jim left me to lunch with an old chum while he went to meet the bride. In a short while, however, the bell rang, and there stood Jim. He was arrayed now in black broadcloth, and a certain grim whiteness played about his mouth. He had come to say that the local was delayed thru an accident, that the wedding would take place in a certain hotel instead of the church, and that he was off to get Anne with a high powered car.

I went down to the hotel. It was a commercial affair. I walked into a lobby of cigar smoke and masculine stares, and with dignity inquired the way to the ladies' parlor. I was directed to the floor above. Two large connecting rooms formed the parlor, and as a lady was entertaining a friend in one, I went into the other. Out of an assortment of chairs, I selected a large, leather "Turkish" rocker. I sat down, leaned back, and horrors! the thing went over, leaving me with my feet in the air, and unable in any way to help myself. The lady now ran in from the other room crying, "My dear, I was just about to warn you against that chair. It did me the same way the first day I arrived." I recovered my dignity, rescued my hat, and thanked her all in one breath. I selected another chair and waited.

After what seemed to be hours, the minister hurried in, hot and perspiring, and conducted me down to the station, explaining on the way that Anne and Jim would leave to be married on the train, as time was precious. I thought of the "seven dozen times" the marriage had been planned and mopped my hot face—by this time I knew my nose was unrecognizable as such, and furtively dabbed it with powder.

From my position on a ciner-pile I watched the train pull out—train

Miss Bowden was a graduate of the 1924 class at the State Teachers College, Farmville, Va.

SPANISH CIRCLE HOLD MEETING

El Circulo Espanol held its regular meeting Tuesday, the sixteenth of February in the Student Building auditorium. Miss Hill's students in Rush Spanish attended their first meeting at this time.

New officers were elected for the following positions:

President ----- Daphne Gilliam
Vice-President ----- Lillian Rhodes
Secretary ----- Ida Hill
Treasurer ----- Martha Henderlite
Reporter ----- Isabel Macdonald

The new constitution, drawn up by Miss Gilliam, Miss Moore and Miss Henderlite, was read. After the business was concluded a one-act play "La Primera Disputa" was presented by three of the members, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all after which all the members entered into a discussion on "The Manner of Teaching Spanish in High Schools."

Phillip, our chief cook has been sick. All of us realize how much he ministers to our physical needs and we wish for him a speedy recovery.

That was to have carried the happy pair to New York and the Bermudas. I turned, and in the other direction beheld Anne dismounting with the unruffled mein of a Juno, while behind her was borne Jim. Unfortunate man, he had sprained his ankle in his haste to rescue his bride!

They were married in the stuffy parlor, Jim, literally "rooted to the spot," with his foot encased in a huge carpet slipper. Again I thought of the "seven dozen times" he had planned it and longed to mention the fact to him, but I really hadn't the heart. Of course, he had been placed on the wrong side of the bride and she, with heightened color, must march around him to gain the other side. His eyes were those of a suffering animal as he beseeched me not to notice, so I looked away and my gaze rested upon the mocking depths of a nearby "Turkish" rocker.

WHAT USED TO BE

Does it seem possible that this school we have today was ever equal to this description? "No factory or warehouse could be more frankly ugly without or artlessly jumbled within. Its bricks stood awry and its boards were rudely matched and planned. It had grown old, not gracefully, but gloomily and grimly". To our scholastic needs the old shell offered a small, primitive assembly hall and two shabby classrooms. Any overflow must go to the reception room or a bedroom. The dormitory was a series of cubicles, on two floors, lying off crooked, narrow, multi-levelled corridors, much as pig iron lies at the foundry. For our subsistence department there was a dining room furnished with three long deal tables and a supply of plain wooden chairs. Beneath the dining room was a great cavernous kitchen. A little reception room and a wide staircase hall completes the tale of our early quarters.

The bedrooms had cheap painted furniture, and little shelves saved the cost of dressing tables. Two hundred dollars had been allowed for the reception room, but when a rug and some curtains had been bought it was found that the rest of the money was needed elsewhere, so we rested that case. The deal tables in the dining room were hidden by inexpensive red cotton table cloths, but we were rather vain of our new forks and spoons till William, the general utility boy, took to scouring them with the scrapings of common red brick. The only library was a box of books belonging to one of the teachers; it was most actively peripatetic.

Can you imagine it? Yet that is what Miss Celeste Bush, the first vice principal and a Connecticut Normal School teacher, first saw when Dr. William Henry Ruffner introduced her to the "school shell where she was to manage and he to super-manage". Those are the trials and tribulations that she underwent managing the almost insignificant school, that was, in a few short years, to become the pride of Virginia, the institution upon which the spotlight of education is so often turned, and a monument to her founders and presidents.

MY SATISFACTION

Memory still brings them back,
The days that are past and gone,
And sadness would dwell in my heart
Were my memory not flooded with joy.

Joy that increased in its making;
Joy that fed at its height,
Joy that dropped me from heaven;
And left me alone in my plight.
Around me circled shadows of darkness;

They filled my soul with despair,
Till out of the depths of the midnight
A voice rose radiant and clear:
"Weep not for that which has been;
Sigh not that it might have been;
Hope not for what is to be;
But LIVE—and be in what is."
So I folded past joys in a corner
Sacred and safe—all my own—
And I work with new zeal,
And endeavor each day
A new joy to reveal.

BROADCASTING

Sherlock Holmes, a holiday at S. T. C., or strawberry shortcake in the dining room have nothing on the shock when it comes to broadcasting! Full-grown Seniors rarely make initial tours but a most notable one was made several days back to that unpunctuated WRVA in Richmond in real cars, i. e., not trucks or trains. Three thin tires subject to change without notice, a tank minus gas, a back seat full of rusty chains and rain curtains are small plagues when visions of the destination flood the mind in those peculiar waves we read about in psychology, and are entirely forgotten when the door to the destination has been actually opened.

For a moment the calm appearance of the lovely reception and dressing rooms soothe the complexion and the ammonia is temporarily slipped into the hand bag. There are still evidences of dullness and self-possession when the studios are entered preparatory to the rehearsals. The studios are assorted in size and have the usual number of walls covered with heavy curtains except where glass windows and wooden doors have been piloted in. The rehearsal, of course comes off in a fair style and the Senior sighs with relief at its completion and finds herself accompanied by an exhilarating assurance of notoriety and a feeling of unusual importance. At lunch a familiar air is likely to be assumed indicating a suspicion that the disinterested onlookers do not realize that they are near a very unusual, accomplished prodigy who will that very night bring the world to her feet. It is with removed pride that one sits next to an unknown quantity in the theatre and visualizes the unsuspecting heart close to her own celebrated one. It is supposed that the crowds on Main Street and in Miller and Rhodes must instinctively know they have an important and promising young artist in their midst.

A rush of hours, the silent fall of dusk and the striking of eight o'clock bring the advent of the programme. Numbers pass and her name is called. The heart rises and sinks at the audience that cannot be seen. The Senior realizes that the world is awaiting her first note and secretly wishes they were waiting for the sunrise instead. Notes follow and not one mistake must be made. The once promising young artist prays that the air will rock with static but after passing the first line successfully, changes her mind and prays that the folks at home are listening in with the sky clear. She wonders how many souls have heard her voice and if there is not one of her dreams who will send a telegram that might blossom into the lovely flower of romance—alas! a misinterpreted note! Perhaps the sympathetic, understanding world is giving three cheers—three cheers for something they wouldn't give anything else for! A fevered brow, a sparkling heart, ten fervid fingers and the song is finished. Air! She has disturbed the air but it must restore her. Moments of reflection follow and she no longer wonders why radio artists die young, why their hairs turn grey and their heads grow bald. There is but one hope to regain in the 100 years a hectic night has stolen from her. Cans of sauer kraut must be bought and eaten immediately. She remembered this from an advertisement. Perhaps, by way of conclusion, the lowly cabbage will yet become a century plant.

OLD TIME SPELLING BEE

On Tuesday night, February 23, the old-time spelling bee was revived in all its glory and mirth, by the local chapter of the alumnae. It lacked the zest of having sweetheart spell against sweetheart, on account of the dearth of masculinity.

A number of the alumnae, faculty, five from each college class, and a few high school pupils made up the participants. Dr. Frederick Diehl dealt out the bitter dose to speller after speller, until one by one the sides decreased until Mr. Coyner was holding his side seven to one. At 8:15 promptly Dr. Walmesley hurriedly left the room on "conspicuous". Mr. McOrkie, getting tired of standing, preferred a terrestrial position.

One after another the high school and college girls, along with members of the alumnae left the ranks until only Elizabeth Roberts remained to hold up the college fame and to win the $2.50 for the Senior Class Soon "fricassee" proved her "Waterloo."

Finally, Mrs. Wicker Miss Davis and Mr. Coyner held the floor until the lone nut "pistachio" proved too much for Mr. Coyner, leaving Miss Davis and Mrs. Wicker so physically tired but mentally alert that chairs were provided with the prospect of a drawn battle until "statistician" left Miss Davis the victor.

A NEW ELEMENT—"WOMAN"

Symbol—"Wo".

A member of the human family.

Occurrence—Can be found wherever man wishes. Seldom occurs in the free or native state.

Physical properties—All colors and sizes. Always appears in disguised condition. Boils at nothing, and may freeze at any moment. Melts when properly treated. Very brittle if not used correctly.

Chemical properties—Extremely active. Possesses a great affinity for gold silver, platinum and precious stones of all kinds. Violent action when left alone by men. Sometimes yields to pressure. Fresh variety has great magnetic attraction.

Note! Highly explosive and likely to be dangerous in inexperienced hands.

THE LOOK

Strephon kissed me in the spring,
Robin in the fall,
But Colin only looked at me
And never kissed at all.

Strephon's kiss was lost in jest,
Robin's lost in play,
But the kiss in Colin's eyes
Haunts me night and day.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE IT?

There are various kinds of girls
Thin, and tall, and fat;
Yet when they come to the library desk

All ask for this and that.
Of books and men galore,
The librarian must know it all—
Where is the "Life of Plutarch,"
And a poet by the name of "Hall?"

Where are the books on "how to sing"
And "railroads"—and oh, yes,
A good book to read on Sunday.
And one for "my English class,"
Where are the "books on business"
Those of "Cowley"—where are they?
"What" (disgustingly) "you don't know?
Well—I should say!"

POEM

Pause for a moment and shed a tear
We have come to the end of a day
We have left undone what we should have done

And said what we should not say.
The beautiful, unclouded, bright blue sky

Some days has a touch of grey
Very lovely fragrant rose
Among its thorns must lay.

Though this day be lost by nothing done
tomorrow is given again

he chance to live, to honor and give our best to our fellow men.

"Miss Jennie"

The by-word on the tongue of every student who has had the privilege of attending Farmville in the last few years has been "Miss Jennie". A figure familiar to all and one that every girl has grown to love and to admire before her days as a student at S. T. C. end.

This is Miss Jennie's Alma Mater as well as ours and since we have heard so much about the spirit of our Alma Mater, to find a perfect example of what the true spirit can mean to our school, all we need do is to look to Miss Jennie and see what she has meant to S. T. C.

Not only does she keep a record of all our deeds, good and bad, write to prospective students and extend them a welcoming hand, and to the Alumnae and give them aid and news. She has a vital, living interest in every phase of our school life—and she shows it.

Our Alma Mater song was written by Miss Jennie, so are many of our other school songs. She has been our guiding spirit and her help, advice and interest is always there for the asking.

We cannot begin to express our love, admiration and appreciation for the many things Miss Jennie has

FARMVILLE CHAPTER MEETING

There was an enthusiastic meeting of the Farmville Chapter of the Alumnae Association on March fifth. The members assembled in Miss Mary White Cox's sitting room.

The treasurer's report showed that the Chapter has $225 to present to Dr. Jarman on Founder's Day.

For some time the Farmville Chapter has helped some Prince Edward County girl through school. This year a girl is being helped and at the present time -195 toward this fund is in the treasury.

The Chapter will hold a rummage sale within the next few weeks.

A play under the auspices of the Association is to be presented, on March 26th in the College Auditorium, and probably a few days later in the Eaco Theatre. The proceeds from both the rummage sale and the play will be used to add to our Founder's Day check.

The committee on nominations presented the following names:

President ----- Miss Alice Carter
Vice-President --- Mrs. Martha King
Secretary ----- Miss Grace E. Garnett
Treasurer ----- Miss Virgilia Buggs

It was decided that the Chapter give the visiting alumnae an informal tea on Founder's Day. After the business of the meeting was transacted refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed.

THE HISTORY OF FOUNDER'S DAY

The fact that a freshman was heard to ask whether the stores were open on Founder's Day, their seeming to put the day on a par with National Holidays shows what an important part Founder's Day now plays in our school year. Yet last Saturday was only the fifth Founder's Day ever celebrated, at S. T. C.

The first Founder's Day program, celebrating the thirty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the State Teachers College of Farmville, was held on March 7, 1922. The program of that first Founder's Day, or rather Normal School Day as it was then called, resembles our program. The same songs, which are dear to the heart of every loyal daughter of S. T. C. were sung, many stunts were given and of course a good time was had by all. The chief difference in that first program and ours was that all the money given towards the Student Building was sent by Alumnae chapters. The student body at large gave nothing. This may seem funny to us who have put forth every effort towards raising money for our Student Building. But we should remember that in 1922, the Student Building was only a dream, while now it is reality.

Each succeeding Founder's Day seems to have meant more and more to S. T. C. Every year more and more alumnae have come back to celebrate the Great Day. Of course, we think this is the best Founders Day the college has ever experienced and, of course, we will all come back each year to enjoy again a Founder's Day at S. T. C.

TO OUR ALUMNAE:

Farmville, Va., March 8, 1926.

My Dear Alumnae:

How we longed for each and every one of you to be here when we celebrated "the" day of the whole year.

In this copy of The Rotunda we are trying to convey to you a vivid picture of the various features of Founders Day and to share with you the joy of the occasion.

We have many reasons to feel that the day was a very happy and successful one. We were glad to welcome more alumnae than ever before. Among the many new chapters which answered the roll call with heart-warming greetings and substantial contributions were two new ones, Charlotte, N. C., and Hopewell.

The largest part of the thrill and inspiration of the day however, comes from the realization that there is a oneness of purpose in everyone who has ever been connected with the school, and this purpose is; their desire to foster the true spirit of the Founders of our Alma Mater; to serve her with loyalty, love and devotion and to manifest this spirit in a tangible way by contributing to her material development.

I wish to extend the sincere thanks (Continued on last page)

STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE OBSERVES FOUNDER'S DAY MARCH SIXTH

ORIGINAL AND ATTRACTIVE STUNTS MAKE FOUNDER'S DAY A BIG SUCCESS

Could the nine stunts, given Founder's Day as a means of presenting the money for the Student Building from the classes and clubs, have possibly been more attractive or original? Maybe they could, but the future will have to prove it.

The Senior stunt was the most impressive. Dr. Jarman, accompanied by Miss Hiner as his junior girl, was presented with his LL D, after which the Senior hood was placed on him. L-L-D stood for love, loyalty and devotion while the hood was made of dollar bills. During the entire service the Senior Class sang original and impressive songs.

The magician also arrived on Founder's Day. Then Junior class had him come to extract money from unknown sources. After calling girls from the audience, covering them with a shawl and whispering the mystic words—S. B., the magician found:

"Money in the shoes,
Money in the hair,
Money in the sleeve,
Money everywhere."

The Sophomores, with the aid of Mr. McCorkle, made a mint. By putting strips of paper and green dye in one place, after which a motor was turned on, a long string of dollars was seen issuing from the mint.

The Freshmen had the cutest "old woman in a shoe." And the woman had forty-eight children,—Jack Horners, Mother Hubbards, Miss Mocks, Humpty-Dumptys, and Jacks and Jills! All these skipped down and put money in the big green shoe. The woman who lived in the shoe had so much money that she gave it to Dr. Jarman.

The Pierian Literary Society sent the Pierian spirit which asked Dr. Jarman to drink deeply from the Pierian well. In drinking, money was found.

Paul Revere, with his beloved Molly, returned to the joy of all and brought a contribution from the Glee Club for the Student Building.

Pierro and Pierrette also returned to life and after finding a check apiece and spying the Student Building, they decided to give the money to that cause from the Dramatic Club. All this was done in pantomime.

The Womens Club sent a wee wee woman with a blackberry pie. When the pie was opened birds began to sing. (Money began to talk). Every bird that flew out was a dollar bill! State Teachers College High School also contributed. Four girls, representing each year of high school, brought money to Dr. Jarman.

FOUNDERS DAY THE EVENING PROGRAM

Promptly at six o'clock dinner was served, and such a dinner! It was delicious. The Student Body, as well as the Faculty, and Alumnae I am sure, wish to thank Mrs. Jamison most heartily for being so kind to us. The dinner was carefully planned and served and would have done credit to any up-to-date hotel. The dining room looked lovely, with all the girls in pretty vari-colored clothes, and a vase of sweet peas on each table striking the note of color tone. Dr. and Mrs. Jarman, the Faculty and their wives, were guests for dinner as well as the families of many girls and the alumnae.

At eight o'clock there was a program in the auditorium at which Mr. Charles G. Maphis, Dean of the Summer School, University of Virginia, addressed the Student Body and guests. His subject was "Pioneers" and going back to Lewis and Clark he took for his theme the development of educational institutions giving something of the history of colleges. After his talk, Dr. Jarman gave us the figures of Founders Day. The sum received from the sending out of the circular letter to all alumnae was $4,428.28 in cash and in pledges. The total cash resulted up to the end of the day was $3,784.41.

DR. J. L. JARMAN

Dr. Jarman said he couldn't help smiling on Founder's Day. We'd like to tell you alumnae that the cheery smile Dr. Jarman has in this picture is the one we see every day, and the one which inspires us as well as you to put forth every effort to help pay for the Student Building.

"THIS IS JUST A PLEA—THE OLD FACES TO SEE."

Sometimes we wonder if they really want to come back—those students of long ago. Joan says that they loved their Alma Mater with the same clean, fine spirit as the students of today—and yet —and yet it seems that they have forgotten. Can we—should we forget so easily that which we loved? Perhaps it is time which has gradually succeeded in erasing fond memories, perhaps it is life which has filled their minds with too great a number of worldly thoughts—ah, perhaps there could be many, many reasons, but should there really be even one cause to forget? Memories of faces of long ago still linger at S. T. C. and Joan still wants to greet them. They are not forgotten for the spirit of S.
T. C. does not forget. There might be new faces to greet you, but the handclaps would mean as much as the old and the welcome would be true.

"Dear Alumni of long ago,
Though the past has faded away,
The doors of your Alma Mater swing wide
To welcome you home today."

—F. R. B.

WE ARE PROUD OF OUR ALUMNAE SPIRIT.

From the time we enter S. T. C. as freshmen we hear, on every side, someone talking about school spirit. We are told that we are not true daughters of this school until the Alma Mater spirit has become a part of us. Most of us catch the spirit at one time or another whether we held on to it or not. Yet, we can't put our finger on it, it remains a sort of myth and we begin to doubt whether such a thing really exists.

Former Day offered us innumerable proofs that there is a very live Alma Mater spirit which stands for our efforts, our love, and our loyalty. It is intangible but it's there. The very fact that the Freshmen who have been here only six months have caught this spirit enough to make such a splendid contribution in such a unique way is indeed a proof that inside of our school walls the spirit lives and moves.

The thought sometimes comes to us that such a spirit is of little good if it is forgotten as soon as we leave our Alma Mater.
The Farmville spirit isn't forgotten! It doesn't die! It is a loving memory part of the education work. Has any other school such an alumnae? The spirit which the Alumnae showered on their Day—with their messages and their contributions, their pledge of love and loyalty, made us realize that the influence of our school extended far outside of its walls.

The Alumnae showed the true Alma Mater spirit and we are proud of them. We appreciate their coming back to their Alma Mater and those who couldn't come, sending messages. In return we send them our love, appreciation and a wish that everyone of them will continue to hold in their hearts a love for Farmville and a little of its splendid spirit.

Best wishes to the Alumnae from all of us at S. T. C.!

OUR ALUMNAE PRESIDENT MISS
ADA RANDOLPH BIERBOWER

After her graduation from the Roanoke High School in 1911, Miss Bierbower came to Farmville to begin her special training for the teaching profession. At the end of two years he received a full diploma and began her career as an active teacher in the public schools of Virginia, since 1913. She has had a varied experience in teaching in one-room schools and in graded city schools, and in supervision in the counties of Mecklenburg and Cumberland. During the summer months, she has taken courses at the University of Virginia and the University of California.

In all of her work, whether as a student or teacher, Miss Bierbower has been an active participant in the life of the community. Everything that touches community welfare has her wholehearted interest and support. As an alumna of S. T. C., she has been a tireless worker in furthering the purposes of the Alumnae Association. She has served as president and secretary of the Farmville Chapter and as chairman of some committee every time there has been any work undertaken by the group since her coming to S. T. C. as a member of the faculty six years ago. She has been in turn vice-president, secretary-treasurer and president of the General Alumnae Association, and those who have worked with her say that she has done an incredible amount of work in each capacity. In all these offices she has shown marked executive ability, contagious enthusiasm and an inspiring example of unselfish devotion to our Alma Mater.

All honor to Miss Bierbower, the beloved president of our Alumnae.

NOMINATIONS

At the Student Body Meeting held on March 1, the President of the Student Association asked the students to be considering the making of nominations for the coming election to be held in May. This is a matter not to be slighted, for the making of the nominations is the distinctive function of any organization. It is even more important that the election and a much more difficult task, for after the nominations are made, it is a comparatively easy task to vote. We want to nominate capable girls and we want the nomination to represent the wishes of the student body. This can only be so if the student body is active and thoughtful in making nominations. —I. H.

The Evening Program

After the lecture the Student Committee entertained the Faculty and Student Body with a dance in the Recreation Hall. We all danced to music furnished by our well-known Sensational Syncopated Orchestra, and thoroughly enjoyed ourselves until 11 o'clock, when the last bell rang and the fourth Founders Day became history.

DEATH

With deep regret we announce the death of a loyal alumna, Honor Price Green, who passed away suddenly at the University Hospital, February 23, 1926.

FARMVILLE LOSES TO HARRISONBURG

Friday night Farmville varsity lost a hard fought game to Harrisonburg by a score of 26 to 21. Although Harrisonburg was defeated on our home court only two weeks ago with a score of 15-9 it seemed that they were determined to regain the buckeye at the end of the second it was 13-13. During the third quarter Harrisonburg forged ahead and made the score 21-18. When the final whistle blew the score was 26-21.

Yancey scored the most points during the game. However, every girl did her part for S. T. C.

The line-up:

Farmville	Harrisonburg
Yancey	F. Heiseman
Hall	F. Rosen
Mitchell	J. C. Herrick
Reid	S. C. Nichols
Jones	G. Miller
White	G. Kelly
Substitutions:	Farmville—Perkins
for Hall, Crute for White, White for Reid.

THE ECHOES OF SPRING

Awake to life, oh! sleeping Earth,
From out your cold and chilly snows,
And give to every blossom birth,
With every plant and tree that grows

You've tarried long, oh, sleeping Earth,
The echoes of the woodlands bring
A sound of merriment and mirth
Which tells us of the coming Spring.

The little birds from tree to tree
Are caroling their music sweet,
And now we hear the honey-bee,
And Spring lay smiling at our feet.

Now mother Earth, the shining sun
Has kissed your bosom once so cold,
And brought to birth each little one,
The plants their tiny leaves unfold.

And happy lovers 'neath the moon,
Their sweetest stories oft repeat,
Sweet summer will be with us soon
For Spring lay smiling at our feet.

GLEE CLUB OPERETTA GREAT SUCCESS

Everyone who had the pleasure of seeing "Paul Revere" enjoyed a finished musical performance. Mebane Hunt and Lucy Marsteller in the stellar roles were splendid. Everyone in the cast took her part well, and the chorus of good looking old-fashioned ladies and gentlemen added much to the music and beauty of the scenery. Frances Clarke, as Phyllis Faxton, deserves special mention although it is difficult to pick out one outstanding actress in a cast where everyone seemed so well suited to her part. Mrs. King and the Glee Club deserve a great deal of credit for giving us such a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

Ruth Bartholomew '25 is now a student at Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn.

Evelyn Barnes '24 is engaged in work with the Presbyterian Church in Greensboro, N. C. She sings in the choir and assists with the young peoples work.

"KEMPY" TO BE PRESENTED

On March 26th at 8:00 o'clock in our auditorium we will have the pleasure of seeing something different in the way of a play. In our plays, girls take mens parts and in Hampden-Sidney plays, boys take girls parts but in this play "boys will be boys" and "girls will be girls."

"Kempy" is a comedy by J. C. and E. Nugent. It is a story of modern American life. It has made a success on Broadway and College Dramatic Clubs have successfully produced it. A review of "Kempy" is in the March issue of "The American" magazine. The cast will be announced in the next issue of "The Rotunda."

done for us. Nothing brings to our mind her fine loyal spirit than our Alma Mater song, which she wrote:

All hail, Alma Mater, Dear Mother to thee,

Thy daughters true, faithful and loyal will be;

Thy gentle instruction thy influence so sweet,

Will go with them always—a guide to their feet.

Thy loving protection, thy nurturing care,

Would lead them to cherish things lovely and fair.

All hail, Alma Mater, Dear Mother to thee,

Thy daughters true, faithful and loyal will be.

Thy halls and arcades with their calm classic air,

Thy campuses with blossoms perennially fair,

Thy trees and thy fountain, thy vine-covered walls

Will live in their memory, whatever befalls.

Though far from thy care and protection they roam,

They still hold thee dear, as a well-loved home.

All hail, Alma Mater, Dear Mother to thee,

Thy daughters true, faithful and loyal will be.

FARMVILLE'S FOURTH FIRE IN TWO YEARS

One long, awful cry and then dead silence except for the clanging noise of the rushing fire engine and the hooting of automobile's horns as the drivers dashed hither and thither, seeking the scene of disturbance. Then when all was forgotten, nearly fifteen minutes later, the air was suddenly rent with that maddening cry, half human, half demon, such as is beyond the power of human words or thoughts to express. And chaos reigned supreme. First came a cloud of white smoke followed by the leaping flames that seemed continually trying to reach up and clasp hands with the aloof and black heavens. And the sparks in the sky looked like myriads of shooting stars. The telephone operator was busy telling worried townspeople that the fire was in Paulett and Bugg's Hardware Store.

On Sunday morning the sun was greeted with a much sadder face by Farmville town than when she had smilingly said good-night to him barely twelve hours before.

Not one store, but seven were completely gone and five on the other side of the street gave the appearance of gaping with wide open mouths because their plate glass windows had been entirely demolished by the heat and flying debris.

Only the untiring efforts and hard work of Farmville's volunteer firemen kept her from being almost totally destroyed by the fire demons. And it reminds us of just two years and four months ago when the soldiers that are now patrolling Main Street, patrolled our own S. N. S. and the Student Body again send out unspoken but heart felt thanks to those self-same firemen.

Our friends among the stores whose faces are now buried among the smoldering embers, are Paulett & Bugg's Hardware Store, Drummell's Grocery Store, The Hub, Greenberg's, Anderson's Grocery Store, Gray's Drug Store, and Misses Davidson.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

The Student Committee wishes to make known to the student body that it is greatly pleased with the way in which the girls discussed the problems brought before it at the last student body meeting. Through this discussion it seems that the girls had a part in the government of their school.

The Committee also appreciates the number of suggestions placed in the suggestion box. They show that you have an interest in your school.

S. T. C. GLEE CLUB PUTS ON PROGRAM AT AMELIA

Did you hear about Miss Iler starting as chaperone and ending up as official car fixer? And can anyone ask Frances Walmsley about the "joys of motoring" without receiving a substantial black eye? These questions arise out of the trip the Glee Club Group I made to Amelia Friday to put on a program there. Mishaps, and cold toes, and no little number of laugh-provoking episodes on the way were all amply recompensed when we gazed upon the repast the hospitable folk of Amelia had prepared for our ravenous young appetites. No great wonder the program later in the night was a success— who could not sing, read or dance as inspired upon chicken and pie galore? Its the hospitality of places such as Amelia that make the Glee Club Group I trips worth the effort.

A splendid crowd witnessed the program and Glee Club Group I did itself justice as never before. The following numbers were rendered:

Chorus, "Stars the Night Adorning."
Solo, "I Wish I Had Never Known Sunshine" — Mebane Hunt.
Reading, "The Baseball Game" — "Chubby" Gray.
Solo Stunt — Eleanor Bennett.
Dance of Human Dolls, Gertrude
— Quinn and Eleanor Bennett.
Trio, "Absent," Rose Powell, Patricia Smith and Frances Jenkins.
Reading, "The Lie" — Lorah Brewer.
Solo — Gertrude Quinn.
Solo Dance — Gertrude Quinn.
Chorus, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" — Mrs. King.
Director — Mrs. King.
Pianists Virginia Burks, Mary Lynne Petty, Jack Draper and Virginia Potts.

MISS TABB HONORED

Miss Jennie M. Tabb has been appointed State representative of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars; this Association has a membership of over three hundred Registrars from the largest colleges and universities in the United States and Canada—every State in the Union is represented. The annual meeting of the Association will be held in Minneapolis, Minn., this year.

AN APOLOGY

Notices are generally read as they are written and sometimes they are written wrong—however I do humbly beg the pardon of the Freshman Class on reading a notice in which the very attractive musical comedy, "Toddle Town," was so carelessly called a stunt.

DEBATE TEAM HAS INITIAL TRY-OUT S. T. C. FRESHMAN CLASS PRESENTS "TODDLE TOWN"

On March 4th in the Student Building auditorium was held the first try-out for the debating club. The following girls were chosen as the best:

Lucy Haile Overbey
Olive Smith Bowman
Alice Carter
Sallie Kate Gilliam
Gadys Huband
Mildred Morris
Pauline White
Lois Westbrook
Belle Bryant
Katherine Bentley

On March 18th will be held the second and last try-out and this will be the final chance the students will have to be selected to represent our school in the three debates to be held in the spring.

On April 20, we will send a team to Bridgewater and they will send a team to Farmville for a debate on this question: Resolved, "That a system of direct primary nomination for State and local office is preferable to nomination by convention?"

April 30 we will have a triangular debate with Harrisonburg and Radford on the interesting question, Resolved, "That Virginia should concentrate her efforts upon the development of her rural possibilities rather than upon a metropolitan area around Hampton Roads." Then to cap the climax there will be a debate with Hampden-Sydney on May 14th, but as yet the subject has not been chosen.

Every girl who enters these try-outs automatically becomes a member of the Debating Club which will be officially organized in the next few days.

The Faculty and Student Body are invited to the Student Building auditorium at 6:45 p. m. on Thursday, March 18th. We want a large audience for the girls to talk to, so come out and provide that important factor. The Debate Council is asking for your support and they need it. Who is the Council? Martina Willis, Anne Robertson, Ida Hill and Daisy Mitchell.

The judges are to be the same for this time, namely, Dr. Walmsley, Mr. Tate, Mr. McIlwaine, Miss Marshall, and Mr. Grainger.

OUR PICTURES OF S. T. C.

Dr. Jarman confessed to a start at our applause in chapel on Wednesday morning, March 10. We were simply applauding his announcement that to each S. T. C. student would be presented a 15 by 30 inch picture of the college. The buildings and campus are attractively portrayed and complete in every detail. We thank Dr. Jarman for so enduring a gift, one that will keep our Alma Mater so vividly before us.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL STUDENT VOLUNTEER CONFERENCE Held in Richmond

During the week-end of February twenty-sixth, the students of the Union Theological Seminary were hosts to delegates from the leading colleges of Virginia at the eleventh annual conference of student volunteers.

The convention was held primarily for the benefit of students who had volunteered their services for carrying the word of God into foreign lands. The conference was very fortunate in having present missionaries from China, Korea, Brazil, Africa and India. Messages of the work being done among the heathen people were very inspiring and words of hope were extended to students who in the future expect to do similar work. A profound spiritual atmosphere pervaded the entire conference and the earnestness of students was astounding.

Farmville students attending the conference were Elizabeth Rucker and Mary Markley, Student Volunteers; Jean Vaughn, Elizabeth White, Louise Branch and Katherine Patterson, students interested in the movement; and Rosalind Harrell, representing the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet.

OPEN FORUM CREATES MUCH ENTHUSIASM

The second open forum discussion, "Collegiate versus Collegiate" was conducted last Wednesday night. The girls who attended entered the discussion with frankness and considerable enthusiasm. Everyone is invited to attend these discussions and add her opinion to that of the others.

On Saturday night, the Freshman Class presented "Toddle Town", a two-act musical comedy, to a full house. The play was a great success and S. T. C. should indeed consider herself fortunate in having such wide awake freshmen.

Miss Mebane Hunt, who carried the leading role, entertained the audience in her usual delightful manner and Louise Foster, as "Sylvia", was charming.

Miss Margaret Mackasy and Miss Marion Grimes are to be commended upon the excellent humor which they attributed to the play.

Then, who could forget the big hit of the evening—"The Charleston" and who could ever have danced it any better than Mary Cullin?

The "Tourists" opened the show with a bang and following close upon them came "Little Boy Blue", a peppy and enjoyable chorus. Next, out stepped "The Toddlers" with Miss Molly Ferguson as soloist and dancer. Miss Cornelia Hanger as soloist in the "Fashion Show", displayed to the audience the latest spring styles, and whether the "maids" worked very much or not they surely succeeded in entertaining the audience between acts.

The curtain for the second act rose on "Romance Land" and the joy of the romantic should certainly have been complete. Following this, the Nursery Rhymes with Julia Yancey as Mother Goose danced the old time rhymes in a syncopation.

The grand finale with its pep and animation set the top notch of perfection on the whole show.

Much praise is due to Miss Mebane Hunt, Miss Louise Foster and Miss Iler, who so ably and creditably directed the performance and made "Toddle Town" the success it was.

STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE

Throughout this year the faculty and the students through the Presidents' Council have been attempting to instill into the Literary Societies more spirit and encourage better work. The Presidents' Council is composed of the President of each Literary Society and a faculty committee of six, chosen with a view of representing the different phases of literary work.

Early in the fall the Presidents' Council called a meeting of all of the members of the six literary societies in order to discuss the lax spirit of the societies. Three plans were considered—the abolition of literary societies, the formation of two societies from those organized, and the adoption of a standard for the societies. The latter plan was adopted.

A committee was appointed by the chairman of the Presidents' Council. (Continued on last page)

S. T. C. OUR HOME NINE MONTHS OF THE YEAR.

Our home is very close to the heart of each of us. It may not be as large or as handsome as the people's next door, but it is home and the dearest place in the world.

For nine months of the year we live at S. T. C. Have you ever thought how much like a home our school is? There are so many different people to see to our comfort, as there is someone at home; someone to go to when we are in trouble, as there is at home; and such a large family to be with and to love. When you are tired and want to be away from the crowd, your own room is waiting. When you want company, the Recreation Hall with its smooth floors, music and dancers awaits you. Joan receives your guests and you may show them a cozy parlor which is yours, because you are a most important person, at that time. You feel great pride when you walk to the steps of your Student Building and say, "I helped to build that." The pleasure you express when the company exclaims upon its perfectness is just like the pleasure you feel when you have something new in your very own home.

You know well all of your privileges and the things that are yours in this home, but do you often stop to count your blessings? This school is your home for nine months of the year, and when you consider it as such you find that you love it. —M. A. B.

ARE EXAMS ESSENTIAL?

Each year, indeed nearly every term, the rumor goes around, to the effect that next year, or next term, we are going to have examinations. Then the arguments begin. Generally they are all one-sided and reasons by the dozen are given why we should not have exams. Once in a great while some very brave student says—"I see the reason for exams, but I don't think we should have them." We all see some reasons for and some against; the question is, which reasons, if really tested, are the stronger?

Advocates of both sides claim that the examination grade should count for only a small portion of the term's work. All right on point is conceded. The reason given for this is the age-old one. Some students who have done consistently excellent work, get nervous and fall down on examinations, while students who have done comparatively poor work may "crum" and make an excellent grade on their exams. Thus overbalancing the student who has done her work all during the term.

Because of this agreement, those against examinations claim that they are not fair to students and that for this reason they should not be given.

Those who believe exams should be a part of the regular work of the session make their strongest claim that examinations help a student organize the entire work of a term in a systematic way. This is undoubtedly true and without a doubt it is something which should be done. However the first argument that the examination grade will not have much weight in the term grade and this argument do not coincide with each other. A student realizing that the grade she would make on an examination would have little effect on her average, it is very unlikely that she would study enough or try very hard to get her material in an organized form, while on the other hand the student who "crammed" would probably have her ideas only for the time being and the organization would mean little or nothing.

That a course should be looked on as a unit, rather than in parts, each part to be forgotten after she has been tested on it, is an absolute fact. But there are other better and more efficient ways in which this may be gained. The project method of making the work of a term a project certainly leads to an organization of the whole, while the plan of writing term papers certainly carries some one idea through the course. A teacher who is an efficient one would in any case, through some means organize the class so that the thoughts gained in the first two or three weeks of a term, will not be forgotten before the end.

It seems that the nervous reaction of students to exams, the unfairness of them to all students and the additional amount of work and worry on the part of both teacher and student far outshadow the side of organization, a problem which may be solved in other ways.

—E. C.

SHOULD A GIRL BE RE-ELECTED?

Is it fair to the student body at large and to the girl herself to indulge in the habit of re-electing girls to the many offices in school? When considering the girls whom you will nominate and elect as president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, editor, assistant and business manager of all the organizations of schools what principles will you consider as the ones that will guide you in your voting? We want representative, capable girls as leaders of the school but in the meantime it isn't fair to overwork one set of leaders while others who are just as capable are deprived of all opportunities of service and development.

In a school of this size there is always more than one girl who can fill each position efficiently. A new girl has new ideas and new plans for the office she holds. She should be elected in preference to one who has held the position before because an old girl has put forth her best effort, has used all her ideas and has done all in her power to make the organization in which she holds an office a success. If her best is recognized as good she is worthy of advancement or another office. Why tax and overwork her with the same one again? If her best is not so efficient she is not capable of holding the same office. Why re-elect her just because it has been the custom, when she could serve better in another capacity? Not only is it possible for that girl to serve better in another capacity and to broaden herself, but it is also better for the organization to have new material and new ideas. A new person coming into office will bring these with her and help the organization to continue advancing, while under the old regime it would practically be a repetition of what had gone before.

Monopoly of office is non-democratic. The United States realized this in becoming a democracy rather than an autocracy. Why not make our school more democratic? A president of our country never devotes more than eight years of his political life to this office. Yet he often denotes his entire life to politics. If the country realizes that change of office is beneficial it seems strange that a girl would be willing to devote more than a fourth of her college life to one office.

The success of our elections depends on two things. First, the candidates should choose wisely the office for which they will run, being sure that it is the one to which they can give the most. Second, the elections or student body must vote intelligently and elect those who can best fill the office. What are you going to do? —"D."

OPEN FORUM GREAT SUCCESS

Last Wednesday night, the first open forum on the question "College versus Collegiate" was held in the Student Building auditorium. Dr. Walmsley, with his usual wit and pleasing manner led the discussion. Students were asked to express their true opinions and not what they might be "expected" to think and say. The questions of what is "collegiate" and are you "collegiate" were discussed in an open, straightforward manner, and with a great deal of enthusiasm.

Announcement will be made as to the time of the next forum. The student body is cordially invited to attend.

AN APPRECIATION OF THE TEA ROOM

The flowers without rain would perhaps suffer no more than the students at S. T. C. without the Tea Room. For us it holds so many of the charms of home—just the kind of biscuits and pies that mother makes. When we have money we go to the Tea Room, when we are blue we go to the Tea Room and when we are very, very hungry we go to the Tea Room. No one ever leaves the Tea Room without a smiling face for food that "touches the spot" always brings a smile. But who makes the Tea Room what it is? I sing the praises of Mrs. Gish and Mrs. Smith for it is due to their uniring efforts that we students enjoy the hospitality of that "meeting place." Can any others accomplish so much as these two? I marvel at the preparation of a banquet for eighty in that wee kitchen and yet it is done, and properly done, too—for even the coffee which reaches her eightieth individual is steaming hot. The efficiency of the Tea Room service is all and more than could be expected with such facilities and there it is that we really we are "getting our money's worth."

Mrs. Gish and Mrs. Smith—our hats go off to you, for long will we remember when we have left S. T. C., all the happy moments you have given us in your Tea Room.

We hope every nook and corner of our Alma Mater dear, But, if the Tea Room would close its doors We'd all have to leave here I fear." —F. R. B.

ALABAMA VISITORS AT S. T. C.

We had, as visitors, on Thursday morning, four delegates from the state of Alabama, who were welcomed and presented to the Student Body by Dr. Jarman at chapel. They were: Miss Mary D. Pierce, Supervisor of Teacher Training, State Department of Public Instruction, Montgomery, Alabama, and a former teacher of this college.

Mr. T. Dwell, Assistant State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Mr. Wright, Head of Education Department, Troy Normal School, Alabama.

Mr. Tate, Head of Mathematics Department Troy Normal School Alabama.

Each member made an informal talk, which was delightful and humorous, after which the Student Body sang, "Alma Mater," "What's the Matter With Jarman?" and "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginia."

The delegates were here for the purpose of observing the methods and curricula used in our college, chosen as the best representative State Teachers College in this section of the country. They hope to carry back with them new ideas along educational lines.

The Alabamian visitors were entertained at a luncheon given in the Tea Room. Other guests were Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Lila London, Miss Jennie Tabb, Mr. Gainger, Miss Mary P. Jones and Miss Fleeta Cooper (the two latter are our faculty members from Alabama.)

The presidents and representatives from the leading Normal Schools, and Teachers Colleges of the U. S. attended a conference at Washington last week-end.

A FIN TISKY

Beloved, could I be up across
The great world's outer bars,
I'd walk along the milky way
And bind my hair with stars.

And I would dip my fingers in
The clouds along the west,
And pluck the little silver moon
To wear upon my breast.

Then I would walk across the sky,
And you would be there—
And ask: "Who is the lady with
The stars bound in her hair?"
Mary O'Kelly—Meredith

SOON

You took my heart like a letter,
Opened it, and read aloud
So that all about you knew
My heart's thoughts.

Then you laughed
And crumpled my heart
Like a little piece of paper
And tossed it away—
—Marvin Collins—U. of Nebraska

PEACE

Now at length I find my peace
In common daily things;
For there is a quiet in my soul
Since I have cut it's wing.
For it would carry me a way
That was so hard to go—
"If I betray my soul for peace,"
I said, "No one will know."
—Frances Harper—Agnes Scott

VISITOR FROM SOUTH AMERICA

Miss Margaret Vessey, Continental
City secretary in South America, visited our college last week. She talked in chapel and also at Prayers about the general conditions of South America. She is in the U. S. on a furlough until May and will attend the

THE LAND OF LOST THINGS

Once I lost so many things,
Childish toys, and pins and rings,
But my mother used to say
I could find them all one day
On a high shelf high away
In the Land of All Lost Things.

Now I've lost more precious things
Love and Friendship, Heart that sings
Shall I find them all one day
On a high shelf high away,
Kept by one who loved me gay,
In the Land of All Lost Things
—Louise Boyden—Tufts

INFINITY

A thought,
That touches deepest chords
And sets the heart afire;
A wish,
That burns like the heart
With all of life's desire;
A dream,
That circles all the span
Of earth, and sky, and sea;
A life—
A fragment in the plan
Of all eternity.
These are Infinity!

GLIMPSES

Now away the mist
Dry your eyes discreetly—
Nothing quite exists;
Nothing dies completely.

THE TWAIN

When Beauty goes aroving,
She will not walk alone,
But takes a sad companion,
And names him as her own.

There is some drop of sorrow
In every cup we drain,
And he who walks with Beauty
Must hold the hand of Pain.
—Martha Edmonston—Hiram College

LADY MOON

Lady Moon, Lady Moon,
Up there so high,
Why glide so swiftly
Across the inky sky?

College girl, college girl,
Way down below;
The swifter I move,
The sooner dawn will glow.

Lady Moon, Lady Moon,
Queen of Romance,
Can't see my loved one
By any chance?

College girl, college girl,
Your loved one is true.
He dreams by my mellow light
Only of you.

LAVENDER

Long years ago I laid my dreams away
In lavender, so faintly sweet it sickened me.

I went, because I fain would linger for a while
Beside the open casket there.

But I was young; and dreaming dreams too full of joy
For one whom grief had claimed her own

I tried to smile—and snapped the cover shut,
And in a while arose from bended knees

And went away.

Today I found my chest of scented
dreams
Where I had left it, high
In an old attic, near lost amid the piles

Of other half forgotten memories . . .
The beauty of my dreams had faded not at all,
But oh! alas, my soul had grown so small

And twisted that the dreams no longer fit,
But were too large and free . . .

I had not thought any soul could change so much
In all eternity. . .

I locked the attic fast, and crept away
In the drowsy air
The faint, sweet smell of lavender Lingers, and seems to mock and jeer.

ville, '23.

OUR SCHOOL PAPER

Is about to become a staff's paper except for the remaining faithful reporters who are still on the list.

Again, we say, make The Rotunda yours with what you think especially about the school. This paper should be the voice of the students and just before the splendid class issues, very few spoke. We do not want that lag again. Make it what it stands for—the center of school.

The Rotunda was chosen for special study by a Northern college which picked one hundred papers out of the entire United States. It is a member of the National and Southern Inter Collegiate Newspaper Association.

PUZZLE

What we want to know is this:
why do a number of teachers here advocate not studying on Sunday and then, in making assignments say,
"well you can take all of this and write at cetera, because you'll have the week-end to do it in."

Puzzle—Find the week-end.

MEDITATIONS OF A RADIATOR PROP

I'd rather be here, than any place I know—beside the radiator."

Don't bother about this A grade so much, because, after all, it's knowledge you're after and not the grade.

Some girls here get a book of knowledge but can't tell you a thing about life in college.

Some of our teachers expect us to do all our cramming right before a test, sometimes we do.

Roasting parties will soon be held in every corner—wait until elections come off and every girl will get out a frying pan.

Why do some girls kick while they're here and then praise S. T. C. when they leave? Isn't it strange? We're glad we don't have outside kicking.

MY WEALTH

When the good God gave his gifts to men
He kept from me the gold;
He knew I'd worry now and then
If I had riches to hold.
So the gold he gave to the princes and kings
And to me—the wealth of Nature's things.

Mine is the blue of the mountains high,
The sunset's gold and gleam;
The call of the birds, and the breezes sigh,
The murmur of a cold deep stream
Where the banks are lined with trees and flowers,
And the green grass carpets my bow-er of bowers.

Mine is the silver of a moonlight night,
The white of the drifted snow,
Mine are the clouds and the stars' bright light—
The ways of the wind know.
And the white fringed waves of the darkened sea
Are Nature's gifts from God to me.

Louise Marsh, President of Ruffner Literary Society. Those serving on the committee were Louise Jones, President of the Cunningham, Ida Hill, Vice-President of the Jefferson, Sara Spiers, President of the Athenian, and Mr. Grainger, Chairman of the faculty committee on Literary Societies. After two months of work and revision the Standard of Excellence for Literary Societies was ready for adoption by the societies. The Standard involved the efficiency of programs members and organization. Each term the societies are to be graded on the work accomplished, the benefit of the work to the individual members, and the benefit of the societies to the school. The grading will be done by the Maintenance of Standards Committee, to be elected by the societies, each being represented.

The Standard was adopted by the societies with a vim and eagerness that promises much for the future of our Literary Societies. Since then new elections have been held, new members chosen and initiated and a program meeting held by each society. With the Standard as a goal, new members and good material, we have great hopes for our Literary Societies.

ANNUAL PHYSICAL EDUCATION EXHIBIT'N

All Classes Take Part in Program Monday Night

On Monday night, March 22, between 7:30 and 9:30 S. T. C.'s physical education classes gave an attractive, and complete demonstration of their work for the year. The Freshman and Sophomore classes especially were well represented, while the Juniors contributed several dance numbers and a volley ball game, and the Seniors took part in the inter-class relay. The members of the Physical Education Department, Miss Barlow, Miss Her, and Miss Tucker deserve a great deal of credit for the classes' preparedness. Miss Barlow made honorable mention of the equal leaders of her Sophomore classes.

The first number calling forth the applause of the spectators seated in the balcony of the gymnasium was the marching in of the students in their regulation costumes.

The Freshmen held the floor for a series of gymnastics and a straddle relay. Next, sections of the Sophomore class gave story plays, gymnastics and wand exercises in addition to a few games and dances. The Juniors exhibited something new in the way of Jumping Jack Drill. In the six-minute volley ball game the Reds and Blues, both of the Junior class, combated for the victory which finally went to the Reds. The French Reel by the Freshmen intervened between the game and the Dance Trio by the Juniors.

Perhaps the most unique event on the program was the Croquet Relay of the Freshmen, and the most attractive features, the Dance Trio of the Juniors and Irish Lilt of the Sophomores.

Enthusiasm ran high during a Touch the Line Relay between the classes, at the close of the exhibition. Each class claims to have the swiftest runners but is Monday night's relay the Freshman Team raced into first place followed by a very close second, the Sophomores. Their sister classes, Junior and Senior, came third and fourth, respectively.

WEEK-END CONFERENCE TO BE HELD APRIL 9-11

A week-end conference or Cabinet Training Council, will be held in this college during the week-end of April 9-11. This is for the purpose of training the new cabinet members for their work in the Y. W. C. A. next year.

Elizabeth Bugg, Undergraduate Representative, and State Chairman of the Cabinet Training Council of Virginia, has planned for the conference. Many speakers of note will be present.

About fifty girls are expected to attend the conference from William & Mary, Lynchburg College, Harrisonburg, Randolph-Macon, Fredericksburg, Radford and West Hampton.

FIGHTING FARMVILLE WILL REBUILD

The Farmville that one sees as one walks its streets, the Farmville of homes and shops and schools, may be razed by fire, but the Farmville one does not see stands upright in the charred ruins. The spirit of the town is undismayed. One had expected that.

It is recalled that Farmville's fires of the last several years often have aroused the citizenry on a busy Saturday. May it not be, a pyromaniac is indulging his gross appetite there? Perhaps an astute investigator would contribute materially to Farmville's future schemes for fire prevention.

No town in Virginia in the last ten years has been more aggressively progressive than Farmville. It is by no means the sleepy Virginia hamlet which so frequently is described by the feature writer and the novelist. After the recent meeting of the Virginia Press Association there virtually every editor in Virginia tuned his typewriter for a symphony of praise. Farmville is wide-awake hopeful, full of fight.

"We will rebuild," say the people, who shake ashes from their hats and scrape black mud from their boots. They will. They will rebuild in accordance with their best laid schemes. All Virginia will help. The fighting spirit always will lure cheerers to the bleachers.—News Leader.

FARMVILLE LOSES TO FREDERICKSBURG

Score Results 22—21. Farmville Stages "Come-back"

Friday night our varsity lost the last game of the season to Fredericksburg by a score of 22—21.

During the first half of the game Fredericksburg excelled Farmville in passwork, as well as accurate shooting, the score being 14—6. Draper made these fourteen points while Hall and Yancy both contributed three points to our score.

At the beginning of the second half the Farmville girls regained the confidence which they seemed to lack at first. Hall, who is ever dependable and steady, with Perkins as her co-worker, made goal after goal until the whistle blew. The fight exhibited in the last half was the characteristic Farmville fight. White and Crute as guards played hard and always returned the ball to Reid or Mitchell, who took no time in putting the ball in the hands of the forwards. The team played hard and demonstrated the principle of true sportsmanship in the losing.

The line-up:

Farmville	Pos.	Fredericksburg
Yancy	F	Driefus
Hall	F	Draper
Mitchell	J. C.	Squire
Reid	S. C.	Hogan
Crute	G	Wilkins
White	G	Hatchett

Substitutions: Perkins for Yancy.

SISTER CLASSES OBSERVE CLASS DAY

March 17th and St. Patrick's Day but was that all? If you were on the campus and could see at all you saw white and green floating around and you realized that March 17th was also Junior and Freshman Class Day. Green and White predominated on the campus, in the Rotunda and in Chapel.

The Juniors marched in chapel to the strains of an original song sung by the Freshman. Louise Foster read a humorous history of the Freshman Class and the history of the Junior Class was given by Bessie Meade Riddle, Rosalind Harrell and Lacey Haile Overbey.

In keeping with St. Patrick's Day, Mebane Hunt delightfully sang, "My (Continued on last page)

THE HONOR SYSTEM.

All of us are thinking constantly of our college and the great strides forward that it has made in the last few years. The question that comes into our minds is, "Has our college grown consistently?" We see our new buildings, our broadened curriculum, our increased faculty, our growing student body, and think with pride that we may well be proud of our college. And we should be so. However, when we examine our conception of an honor system, we do not speak so loudly in its praise. All of us read with admiration accounts of the strides other institutions are making. One of the first ideas that comes to mind in thinking of the University of Virginia is its honor system. Washington and Lee has a store on the campus that is run by the honor system. Everything is open and unwatched. The boys make their own purchases change their money and leave. No one even thinks of such a thing as short change or "purchases" made without payment. Such things are effected by a great cultivation of the honor system.

Coming back to S. T. C., we must look into our handbook of regulations. One is appalled by the vast number of petty rules, made necessary by careless girls arousing the suspicion of those in authority. What a splendid thing would be wrought if we could cultivate an honor system that would eliminate the necessity of such rulings! There are hundreds of girls here at S. T. C. capable of attaining such a standard of honor. They are prevented from asserting that power in order that a few girls may be prevented from "getting by" with things. If such a high degree of truth were encouraged as much as possible, the result would be a greater respect for authority, an utter repugnance for things dishonest and low, that would practically eliminate them, and the deepest love and consideration for Alma Mater that would make the desire to keep her record blameless the chief motive for doing right.

Such a development of course must be an evolution. One can not say, "Go to, we will have a perfect honor system", and presto! have it. Such a state will come about by complete cooperation of the administrative department and the student body. There must be a willingness to try new things, a perseverance in what seems to be the right path and strong faith in the final outcome. It won't happen in a day but it can come if we are willing to trust each other more and endeavor each to do his part and to do it now.

If we will really put our hearts into improving this phase of our college life, it will be done. And the outcome? Well, to give the whole, would require much space but here are a few results: A faculty and home department, less harrowed and overworked, a student committee receiving the admiration and honor of the girls whom it represents, a student body with higher ideals and better attitudes and a college sending forth teachers who will carry over to their students a far greater gift and more inspiration than any "ology" or "ism" written in books—that is a true conception of honor that does away with watching, suspicion, questioning and restraint and replaces them with self reliance, frankness, trust and freedom in its highest and best sense.

FARMVILLE'S SPIRIT

Farmville is an aristocratic county "capital." It is a highly progressive town; yet it breathes the spirit of an ancient and delightful civilization. Living in a vibrant present and looking out upon a hopeful future, it draws its inspiration from a glorious past.

The names that are associated with the history of Farmville belonged to men who had a great share in fashioning this Virginia of ours. The County of Prince Edward was the home of such families as the Venable, the Carringtons, and the Johnstons. It was a citadel of culture, refinement, courage and patriotism. Before this was a nation Prince Edward enjoyed the distinction of offering to the rest of the country a great institution of learning. Hampden-Sydney College, located just seven miles from Farmville, came into being coincident with the Declaration of Independence. Its entire student body marched from the campus to fight the battles of the American Revolution. One of those who helped nurture the infant college was Patrick Henry, "The Voice of the Revolution." Another, James Madison, was destined later to be President of the Union not yet formed. Many other great names, including that of John Randolph of Roanoke, are closely associated with the County of Prince Edward and the Town of Farmville.

That is the background of the place that Sunday suffered a heavy loss from fire. It is from this background that the spirit will come to sustain Farmville in its work of rebuilding. Those historical personages associated with the county and the town have passed on, but their courage in the face of disaster still lives as a valued heritage from the past. The sympathy of the rest of the State is consoled at this time in the knowledge that Farmville will recover quickly. Upon the ashes of Sunday it will rise more substantial and more beautiful than before. Cruel adversity will serve but to quicken the spirit that is Farmville's.

THE FARMVILLE SPOTLIGHT

All the world's a stage and there are many Spotlights. Spotlights of approval, of criticism, of recognition, of public opinion—all playing on the individual players and all working a great influence on their acting. But there is no influence more powerful on our stage than the Spotlight of Main Street in Farmville after 3:30 p. m.

Somehow none of us can resist its lure and all of us, lazy or energetic, tired or busy, happy or homesick, don a frock and dash out down town. Here we find an intoxication in merely being under the public gaze and changing the dulllest become gay, changing subtly into actors coquettishly courting the public. Such a prismatic array of colors and girls has never been equalled before. The keynotes seems to be riot and the most outstanding color for the time gets our vote as leading lady.

Some few of us really have a motive in going down town, and shop busily for ten minutes, but most of us go because we cannot stay away. And why? For the simple reason that the town of Farmville has made itself so friendly and agreeable that we want to give something in return. And isn't the best way to do it dressing up and cooperating with the town socially and otherwise? Besides we would not for worlds forego our little corner in the spotlight and miss perhaps all the fun, talk and gossip of the day. We are received everywhere so cordially and with that make-yourself-at-home air which we cannot afford to lose.

Most of us stared out down here by wondering just how in the world Farmville would get along without us. Of course, there is absolutely nothing original in that thought because every college student in every college town has been wondering that since colleges began. So I've come to the conclusion that we're all wrong and the situation should be stated like this: what would we do without Farmville? Here's hoping we never have to and can continue to prouette before the kindly, tolerant gaze of the Farmville Spotlight.

"VIOLETS."

With soap moistened hands, Martha brushed back the hair from her throbbing temples and drank hungrily the fragrant air wafting into the little screened porch. The heavy perfume of lilacs, with its tantalizing suggestiveness of spring, and spring with its tantalizing suggestiveness of "life and love and laughter" seemed a sham, a mockery to this tired wife of a woman. True, "love and laughter" had come to her on such a day twenty years ago. Jim, her stalwart, honest Jim, had seemed then the embodiment of those qualities that would make life, well—just one eternal season of springtime. But the jolly comrade, the sharer of her flights of fancy and laughter loving ways, had long since disappeared, and seemingly another Jim had taken his place—a taciturn being, who talked uncouthly about, and lived only for, his crops and farm interests. From his springtime playmate, she had become a silent drudging playmate.

Queer,—all the long winter she didn't mind so much, and the pent up longings were held in check. But when the earth began to don its new raiment, and the bird's calls seemed for her alone—and the invigorating scented breezes, wafted their way in to her heart,—then—the elfin imaginative spirit broke loose from the tired stooped body, and played truant over the meadows and through the inviting woods. And, while the spirit ran riotously free and seeking the body toiled numbly on,—almost unknowingly, in the kitchen, in the dairy, among the humdrum tasks.

"Queer sort of critter I am,"—Martha Ann murmured as she laid her head against the door for a minutes relaxation. "Dreamin' about violets and those bright faced little pansies when the wash ain't been put on the line; wishin' I could set by the stream up high Martin's place an' watch it ripple an' turn funny colors under the sun, when there's chores to be did and the men's dinner to get. Wish I could stop thinkin'—it hurts awful . . . Yet, if I only et and slept and worked like the rest of the folks around, life would be dreafal empty. I'm reckonin' violets an' sunsets was made for folks like me to keep pine-ling after . . ."

Tiring of her thoughts and acting upon a sudden impulse, Martha put the tubs aside, picked up an old shade hat and started to the glen for a few moments freedom before starting the dreaded dinner ordeal. As she passed the farm hands she could hear their loud and unrestrained laughter, or ther mumbled complaints. She shuddered as she heard one of them stolidly curse the very weather that she was reveling in,—the air that she was jealously wrapping as a mantle about her fatigued body. Then Jim's voice—"Better have dinner ready in twenty minutes, Ma. We're most finished these rows . . ." Martha nodded and hurried her footsteps until she reached the cool, shadowy little glen. Then with a glad, inarticulate little cry she sank down upon her knees before her most treasured possession, a luxurious bed of purple-blue violets and saucy-faced pansies. These she had secretly planted, for she was in the habit of keeping her fancies and heart-deep wishes from Jim and the boys these days, to avoid their ridicule, or impatience.

She buried her face in their fragrant bed. She liked the violets because they were delicate, timid appearing, sweetly sympathetic;—the pansies because their elfish, saucy faces seemed to be human . . . Lonely sort of world . . .

An hour later, Martha was her silent, composed self as she placed the steaming dishes—numberless dishes—before the hungry men. As she stood watching them put away incredible quantities of food, she suddenly felt the eyes of Jack, her oldest boy, riveted on the tiny bunch of violets at her throat. With a tell-tale flush she snatched them off. The act amused him, and winking at the other members at the table, he said, "Say, wanna hear a ripping joke? Pete and me saw a little show today. We finished our rows, and wondering why dinner wasn't ready, walked up past the glen in the direction Ma had gone, what do you reckon we saw? Mom on her knees taking to a mess of violets! Say, Ma do you name the stars or dance with the fairies or goblins at night, too?"

Much laughter was following this witty sally, when an event entirely unforeseen and unexpected in that household, occurred. Martha answered back!! Her face was an unearthly white, but her voice was steady and biting as she blazed, "How dare you speak of the stars an' fairies an' violets, Jack Tomlin, and how dare you all laugh at him when you don't know how things exist! You only know how to plant potatoes, and eat 'till you're satisfied and sleep on and on, because you haven't got minds to think with and hearts to feel with, oh, how dares you . . ." her voice trailed off into a sob and she fled from the room.

Jim found her in the glen. She saw him standing at the entrance, hesitantly holding out the tiny cluster of violets that she had thrown upon the floor. "Violets . . . they sort of make a feller remember, don't they Marthy. Remember them I gave you that day and what I said. Of course you remember. It was me that for got, I've been a fool. Do you reckon its too late to,—to see a bit of spring time together, you and me, Marthy. We could make a start by turning over the farm to someone for a while, and—ah—following the trail of violets an' dreams like we used to do. Is it too late—Marthy?"

The shining light in her eyes answered him. He fastened the violets tenderly at her throat. Then they started down the trail together.

ALEXANDER'S ENTRANCE INTO BABYLON

We have a reproduction of a portion of Thorwaldsen's beautiful frieze in our main auditorium. It is placed over the door on the right leading up to the rostrum. It was presented to the school several years ago by the Kindergarten Department of the Training School.

In the nineteenth century the democratic character of modern instruction brought forth a reaction against aristocratic sculpture. A desire was felt for subjects more national in character, and especially for the representation of men distinguished in literature, science, art and history.

One of the first European nations to participate in this revival was Denmark. Bertel Thorwaldsen was one of the sculptors of this age. Although he represented classic spirit in his first works in his later years he caught the naturalistic spirit of modern days.

In 1812 Napoleon was expected in Rome and Thorwaldsen was employed to make the frieze for one of the most spacious halls of the Quirinal Palace. Taking the works of Phidias as his model, he produced a magnificent frieze representing "The Entrance of Alexander into Babylon."

The men in the piece of work appear strong, stern and brave, typical of the fighting men of that age. The horses seem to be spirited thoroughbreds, probably from Arabia. It is a flat relief which makes it a fine and valuable piece of work.

His success in this wonderful piece of sculpture made him known among the Romans as the "patriarch of bas-relievo."

A PROMINENT CITIZEN

It is interesting to know that one of the greatest surgeons who ever lived was born and reared in Prince Edward County—Dr. John Peter Matteaux. He was a skilled surgeon one hundred years ahead of his day. He was born in 1790 and died in 1878. His father was a French surgeon in Lafayette's army who married in this country and lived here. He sent his son, John Peter Matteaux to France to study medicine. Dr. Matteaux's youngest daughter is Mrs. Crute, who resides in Farmville.

Recently J. B. Mitchell of Pittsylvania County died. He was the last living patient of Dr. Matteaux. He was operated on by him before the Civil War long before the day of anesthetics.

Dr. John Peter Matteaux's grave is in the Presbyterian churchyard in Hampden Sidney.

NICE AND COLD

They were riding after the party, And the night was very cold; He didn't attempt to keep her warm For fear she'd think him bold. "Are you nice and warm?" The ladie asked her twice, And with clattering teeth She said, "At least, I'm nice!"

THE "EYES" HAVE IT

There are eyes and eyes and eyes—The calm, placid gray type, the mischievous brown, the innocent blue, the sparkling, dashing black—yet I wonder if we ever think of what lies back of those orbs of different hues. What tales do they tell? What secrets are hidden there? It is said that "Beauty lies within the eyes."

And lies, and lies, and lies! This is true, I think, in the serious sense, for all that one is, is shown to the world through his eyes, and no one is ever judged as ugly who looks upon the world with eyes of beauty. The tongue is held to be mightier than the sword, but the eye surpasses either of these. With one flashing look we may pierce through and through—withered into mere nothingness; with a look of encouragement and hope we are often spurred on to heights unattainable by other means. It truly is the eyes of the world which rule our world!

OLD SERENADE

The serenade I sang for you In those lost, lilac days. Has spent its sweetness ruefully Along forgotten ways. And here, upon a garden wall, A boy in black and white, Sits strangely sad and silent, Remembering a night.

Once you were on a balcony. Sandalled in silver there, With moonlight on your lovely face, With moonlight in your hair; And I, a graceless Pierrot, Drunk with deep wondering, Knelt in the white grass quietly And sang a little thing.

O dear, my dear, we dallied In arms of sweet embrace, Forgetting things were happening In every other place; Remember how we mimiced Aucassin and Nicolette, And stayed each other's kisses With sprigs of mignonette.

But, of course, you don't remember. For the lips you lifted then, Have felt the swift seduction In the lips of other men. That serenade is shattered, And a boy in black and white, Sits silent on the wall, Remembering a night.

CAREFUL, GIRLS

(Apologies to The Virginia Reel)

Tell me not in idle jingle, "Marriage is a happy dream," For the girl is safe that's single, And men are not what they seem.

Free you are, then free remain, Marriage is not woman's goal. Flirt and kid with every swain, But do not trust 'em as a whole.

Not in marriage and thence to sorrow Will you find your destined way, But to act so on each tomorrow You'll be farther from that day.

Your days are long, beauty fleeting, And your hearts now light and brave, Should each thought of man defeating Send it bleeding to its grave?

When they court you don't get rattled, Do not let 'em ruin you life. Be the victor in the battle, And keep your best days free from strife.

Trust no man however pleasant, Let the poor boob rave along; Don't think only of the present, Life is not just one gay song.

Lives of single folks remind us, We can make our lives sublime; And departing leave behind us Pleas resisted every time.

Men are never, never perfect, They are seldom halfway so; And the girl who stops to reflect Shall down the road of caution go.

Let us then watch what we're doing, Keep our hearts against 'em set. No matter how long they keep pursuing, Let them not a victim get.

ALPHA DELTA RHO FOUNDERS DAY PROGRAM

Dr. Easter Makes Address

At eight p. m. on Saturday night in the College auditorium, the Joan Circle of the Alpha Delta Rho society had its Founders Day program. The speaker of the occasion was Dr. D. B. Easter, of Washington and Lee University, Department of Romance Languages and Assistant Dean.

Following is the program of the night:

1. Introduction, Dr. J. L. Jarman
2. Spirit of Joan of Arc, Mr. J. M. Grainger
3. Leadership in action, Dr. D. C. Wilson, Hampden-Sidney.
4. Violin Solo, Olive Smith Bowman
5. Address, Dr. D. B. Easter, Washington and Lee

Dr. Jarman in his introductory talk gave a brief history of the organization as well as of our college. He showed us that as a great institution grows its parts grow along with it and with the better things here must come some one thing that will draw all the parts together. Dr. Jarman said that as the school had grown the need had been felt for an organization which would recognize the highest type of scholarship. This need was met in the establishment of Pi Kappa Omega. As the school enlarged, its leaders became more numerous and for some time students and faculty of the school have felt that there should be some one organization where the leaders of various groups could come together and discuss and solve school problems, so the organization Alpha Delta Rho was formed. The Joan Circle was added because of the fact that the spirit of Joan is our leading spirit in this school. In closing Dr. Jarman said that he felt the organization would be of immeasurable good in the school and that not only would it be of aid to the organizations but to every individual student, since each student is eligible providing she comes up to the qualifications of leadership.

Mr. James M. Grainger, in his talk on the Spirit of Joan, brought out the fact that the first suggestion of this school adopting Joan of Arc as its patron saint was made by Miss Maria Bristow in nineteen fourteen. He spoke of the admirable characteristics of Joan, the leader and the splendid embodiment of these ideals in Alpha Delta Rho. In conclusion he expressed the hope that through this organization the spirit of Joan would be permeated even more than ever into the soul of our school.

In his talk on leadership in action Dr. Wilson said that he thought the Alpha Delta Rho would mean the same thing for girls colleges that the Omicron Delta Kappa has for boys. On showing what very splendid work that organization has done for the colleges in which it has a chapter, Dr. Wilson gave examples from Hampden-Sidney. The organization

VIRGINIA SPRING CONFERENCE MEETS IN FARMVILLE

During the week-end of April 9-11, the Virginia Spring Conference met in State Teachers College, Farmville. The purpose of such a conference is to furnish training, knowledge, and inspiration to new Y. W. C. A. Cabinet members who will carry on Association work during the coming year.

We were fortunate in having with us a number of notable personages of national fame. Mr. George Collins, Miss Willa Young, Miss Katherine Alston, and Miss Katherine Newkirk. Their talks were heard with keen and pleasurable interest and many valuable, worthwhile ideas were gained from discussions among the members of the entire conference and in small discussion groups.

Two special features of the conference were a drive to Hampden-Sidney, and a Blue Ridge supper in the Tea Room Saturday evening. The conference included delegates from S. T. C. Harrisonburg, S. T. C. Fredericksburg, Lynchburg College, William and Mary, and Randolph-Macon Womens College.

The program:

- Friday
6:00 Supper
7:30-8 Devotions Miss Willa Young
8-9 "What Kind of Folk are Christians to be?" Mr. Collins
9:00 Informal reception in Lounge.
Saturday
7:30 Breakfast.
8:45-9 Devotions Miss Willa Young

HISTORY OF ALPHA DELTA RHO

From time to time different girls in this school have felt a definite need for an organization on this campus which should seek to bring together the outstanding leaders from the various college activities for the purpose of carrying out constructive programs in the field of leadership. To this end the girls have been groping in the dark, as it were, until last spring when a group; after ascertaining that there was a distinct need for an organization of this nature, not only on this campus but on others become organized into what has come to be known as the Joan Circle of Alpha Delta Rho.

This group selected as its most capable adviser and active member, Miss Florence H. Stubbs, without whose help and advice the perfection of this organization would not have been possible.

The rather extensive investigation for the purpose of inquiring into the work of other organizations of this nature on other campuses, was carried on and completed before the end of last session.

The following questionnaire was sent to sixteen colleges and universities throughout the south and east:

- I. What society on your campus recognizes leadership?
- II. How does it function in connection with your society that recognizes scholarship?
- III. What scholastic standards are required in your leadership organization?

"MICE AND MEN" TO BE PRESENTED BY DRAMATIC CLUB

Second Production a Delightful Sequel to "Prunella"

Do you remember the fantastic, delightful "Prunella" that for one night took us all with a carefree Pierrot and a haunting, sweet Pierrette into a shadow, and laughter land? If you remember that, surely you know how to anticipate the second production of the Dramatic Club, "Mice and Men," to be given Friday, April 23rd. "Mice and Men" is a romantic comedy by Madeline Lucette Pyle—at least it is a comedy in that on the surface it is sprightly, airy, satirical. However, it isn't the laughter moments or contagious chuckles that the play occasions so often, which endears it to an audience whenever presented. It is the magnetic personality of the unusual Mark Embury; it is the appealing face and pert loneliness of "Little Britain"; it is the depth of emotion that always creeps out of the lines of a dramatically forceful play into the personnel of an audience.

You'll like "Mice and Men" because of its play merit—and it will rather startle you with the amount of subtle understanding and character interpretation the Dramatic Club girls are putting into it. You'll not soon forget Louise Brewer's portrayal of Mark Embury, the scholar, who selects from the lower class a young orphan whom he plans to educate according to an ideal system and

MAJOR OFFICERS FOR YEAR 1926-27 ELECTED

Result of Recent Elections

At no other time during the year does one theme of interest draw so closely together the Student Body as the dates for nominations and elections for major offices. The results of the recent nominations showed that the very best material had been considered, and the elections gave us, one and all, the feeling that each organization would be held together next year by the strength and character. Our organizations hold a most important place in our life at school, and to be really worth while there must be high standards and ideals by which every organization is judged. We have no doubts as to the qualifications of every girl elected in filling perfectly her position—we are satisfied with our leaders and will be ever ready to lend a helping hand to each one of them, that our major organizations may cooperatively fulfill their mission.

HOW OTHER SCHOOLS FEEL TOWARD ORGANIZATIONS OF THE TYPE OF ALPHA DELTA RHO.

"They (the members of Omicron Delta Kappa) have been exceedingly influential in giving tone and character to the student activities and creating a finer spirit on the campus. I regard Omicron Delta Kappa as a highly useful organization. It stands for the right thing, and it is, I believe, held in greater esteem by the student body than any other college organization."

John H. Latue, Dean of College Faculty,

Johns Hopkins University--

"No organization in Center College means more to the best life of the institution than Omicron Delta Kappa. I have noticed that every man asked to become a member counts himself honored and feels that he is obligated to make whatever contribution he can to the highest welfare of his Alma Mater."

James H. Howlett, Professor of English,

Centre College

THE SPIRIT OF JOAN.

A poor peasant girl of France became the greatest woman in the world's history. It wasn't just an accident—it didn't just happen for her thru her love of God and her fellowman she became a devoted Christian. As a Christian she learned to watch and to listen, in other words, when she was just a child she tuned her thoughts with God so that when He struck a chord it vibrated in her soul. At first she refused to heed the call but at last she gave herself up to God and at His bidding saved her country. Later in life she was forsaken by France and burned at the stake.

But even thru the centuries the memory of her has burned itself into the heart of the world. The Maid of Orleans, the graceful, winsome figure that she is, stands for gentleness, loyalty, character, strength, bravery and all that is fine and big. Do we appreciate our Joan of Arc who reigns supreme in our Reception Hall. Do we as a school stand for the things that Joan would have us stand for. Allowing the real Joan to influence us we will become bigger and better citizens of a bigger and better school.

EASTER HOLIDAY

Wasn't the Easter holiday almost too good to be true? All the girls that went home had a wonderful vacation and the girls who stayed here enjoyed the holiday equally as much. Just imagine few or no street rules to abide by, permission to go to the movies every night and to Shannon's afterward. And some girls, for the first time, visited the post office on Main Street! And the food! Why enough can't be said about it. The girls haven't stopped raving yet. Mrs. Jamison and Mrs. Peery surely must be mind readers for they gave the girls just exactly what they wanted.

It was the grandest feeling to know that when the bells rang they did not mean "Go to chapel" or "Go to class". This may all seem like a fairy story, but really it isn't.

Everybody enjoyed the holiday to its fullest extent and we give our sincerest thanks and appreciation to Dr. Jarman for giving us four days in which we could play, rest or spend in any way we chose.

FACULTY TAKE OFF HOWLING SUCCESS

If you missed it—you missed a good laugh and an evening of real fun. Even the Faculty couldn't resist the temptation to laugh at themselves. Not all of them were represented, owing to a lack of students who were capable of doing them justice, but those who saw it know that Dr. Jarman (Mary Alice Blanton) really got the cooperation he asked for in the teaching of "Little Boy Blue", for Mr. Bowman (Peggy Lou Stearnes) asked his class to find its "propodeic values", Mr. Grainger (Lucy Haile Overbey) looked for the "fundamental message", while Miss Davis (Virginia Graves) found it to be "a real gem." Miss Russell (Jackie Woodson) looked for the details, such as the number of buttons on his coat. Of course, Miss Craddock (Izzy Payne) had her class make direct compact ovals. Miss Wheeler (Lucy Haile Overbey) insisted that the corn must not stand in a straight line, as it spoiled the dramatic effect. Miss Millican (Betty Hopkins) made "Little Boy Blue" the subject of her manual training lesson and Mr. McCorkle (Eleanor Bennett) did his best to analyse the horn according to its chemical constituents. Other members of the faculty did their share towards giving their classes the full benefit of learning about "Little Boy Blue", according to the subject that they were teaching.

POTTS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF SENIOR CLASS

Junior Class Elects Officers for Coming Year

On Saturday, April 16, the Junior Class met to elect the officers for the Senior class of 1927. The elections were held earlier than usual this year as Virginia Vincent, the former president, has been chosen as the future president of the Student Body.

The following officers were elected:
President Virginia Potts
Vice-Pres. Cornelia Dickinson
Secretary Ola Thomas
Treasurer Mary Ames
Reporter Sara Spiers

With the whole-hearted cooperation of the class there is no reason why the senior class of 1927 should not be one of the best and finest in the history of his college.

AN APPRECIATION

The Joint Circle of Alpha Delta Rho wishes to take this opportunity to express its appreciation to Miss Hiner, Mr. McCorkle, Mr. Grainger, the members of Pi Kappa Omega and others, who have given invaluable aid, and without whose help it would have been impossible to complete the organization of the circle.

Alpha Delta Founders-Day Program

there, Dr. Wilson said had been instrumental in solving the inter-fraternity problems and making the rivalry fair and friendly, it has helped do away with the problems of hazing by establishing a vigilance committee. Dr. Wilson said that association between faculty and student in solving problems was very necessary and organizations of this type bring his association and help solve problems in the safest, sanest manner. Leadership in action must be brought into an organization of the type toward which Alpha Delta Rho is striving. Dr. Easter's address was as follows:

"Ladies and gentlemen and especially ladies, my subject was not sent to me in the correspondence that I had with you. When I received the honor of being with you tonight I wrote to ask what I must speak about and he answer was 'twenty minutes'; so that's just what I am going to speak about.

My real subject is 'Association and What it Stands for.'

Omicron Delta Kappa, to which Dr. Wilson and I have the honor of belonging, was founded a Washington and Lee University in 1914. Chapters have been installed in various universities and colleges until there are now about fifteen chapters of Omicron Delta Kappa. We cannot get away from the matter of association; don't we each have our own particular friends and those we like to be with? There must be a union to accomplish anything. Most of the organizations that we have in the college have been for a very definite purpose, a purpose of their own. That is where I believe Omicron Delta Kappa and Alpha Delta Rho have just a little—if you will pardon me using slang—"edge" over the rest of them. Such organizations as these stand for something outside of selfishness; they bring together the leaders of the various groups; they aid in bringing about a friendly relationship between members of the different groups and thus by knowing each other the members of one group learn to like the members of another group and all work together for a common good. You cannot know a man and hate him. I am so used to being around boys that I will have to ask you to pardon me everytime I say the word "man"—just remember that everytime I say "man" I am embracing a woman.

In associations like Omicron Delta Kappa and Alpha Delta Rho we should be careful of two things: first, see that the leaders belong; second, see that no one is elected through politicking—if he or she can be useful for the common good, then he should belong to such an organization. Their motto should be 'Noblesse Oblige'. Because I am what I am I must be what I can be."

FRESHMEN WIN VOLLEY BALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Just before the Easter holiday the green and white classes gained a double victory over the upholders of the red and white. As a result the two "add" classes had to play against each other for the ten points to be awarded to the volley ball champions. The result of this game was in favor of the Freshman class which gave them ten points toward the athletic cup.

The first game, which was played between the Juniors and Seniors was an easy victory for the Juniors. The next game, played by the Freshmen and Sophomores, proved to be a hard fight which resulted in a victory for the Freshmen. The final game also proved to be a hard fight, the score finally ending 17-16 in favor of the "rats". This victory gave the class of '29 ten points toward the cup.

Track

May the 6th will most probably be field day this year. This will be a telegraphic meet between the teachers colleges of Virginia and Farmville is to be the headquarters! To make this day a success every girl must "come out" and fight for two things. First, the school, second, her class. Watch the bulletin board for announcements of track practice.

Baseball

This year every class is going to have a baseball team. Inter-class games will be staged in this event and ten points can be won toward the cup by the class baseball champion. This event and track will probably decide the final winner of the cup this year. At present all classes are about evenly matched and all have a chance. Which will be the winner? Come out and play baseball and help decide.

TRAINING SCHOOL NEWS

NATIONAL Y. W. C. A. CONVENTION IN MILWAUKEE

President-Elect to Attend

Rosalind Harrell, President-elect of the Y. W. C. A. 1926-27, will attend the National Convention which is held in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on April 21-27.

This convention meets every two years and is composed of delegates from leading Associations over the whole United States. The convention or assembly is the legislative body of the Y. W. C. A. while the National Board is the executive body.

Many persons of national and international fame will be present. One interesting feature of the convention will be a Pageant which will be composed of more than three thousand persons.

"The doctor promised to have me walking in three weeks. And sure enough he did. Yesterday I had to sell my car."

KEMPY PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

"Kempy", a comedy full of unusual humor and life was presented under the auspices of the Farmville Alumnae of S. T. C., and directed by Dr. Elizabeth Marshall. A very mixed cast of school girls, town people and Dr. Walsley added much unusualness to the play since we are accustomed to seeing plays of a different cast.

The play was full of laughter and fun all the way through and our dignified history professor added much humor to the play sending the audience into gales of laughter at every speech.

The hero, Willard Hart, acted his part well even if he was so undecided in his love affairs. Every part was a leading part and all made the play a very attractive and enjoyable one.

The proceeds of over two hundred dollars went to the Sundent Building Fund. The alumnae and Dr. Marshall as well as the cast are to be congratulated on their production of the very popular Kempy.

BENEFIT CARD PARTY

Although only a few of us have had the opportunity and pleasure of visiting Monticello, many of us have read about this beautiful home or have seen pictures of it. No one can do this without being impressed by the originality and magnificence of its beauty. Then—when we go a step further and study the life of Jefferson, we feel a real love for Monticello, his home.

For the past several years, the ownership of Monticello has been in the hands of a private family and although many people have wanted it to be a national or a state shrine, no definite movement towards purchasing it has been inaugurated until very recently. The State of Virginia did not feel that her financial state of affairs justified the purchase of Monticello. Consequently, this task was left to organizations such as the U. D. C., etc.

It view of this fact, a card party was given on Tuesday, April 13 in the Recreation Hall of S. T. C. Those who attended helped towards the purchase of Monticello and thus the purchase of a national shrine.

GREETINGS TO ALPHA DELTA RHO

Pi Kappa Omega takes great pleasure in extending its congratulations and best wishes to the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Rho. We feel that such an organization will be of inestimable and unlimited value to our college, and with such a splendid group of members, which shall include the leaders here, there can be no doubt of its continued success. Be assured of our hearty cooperation,—now and always!

SOCIAL

ALPHA DELTA RHO ENTERTAINS

On Saturday, April 10 from 4:30—6 o'clock, in the Student Building Lounge, the members of the Joan Circle of the Alpha Delta Rho Society were the gracious hostesses at a tea. Those entertained were: Dr. Easter, of Washington and Lee University; Dr. and Mrs. Wilson, of Hampden-Sidney; the members of Omicron Delta Kappa, of Hampden-Sidney College, and the members of Pi Kappa Omega.

SENIOR DINNER

In honor of their class day, the Senior class, with their honorary member, Miss Mary Clary Hiner, held a "Dutch dinner" in the Tea Room last Friday night. The room was tastefully decorated with daffodils. Between courses school and class songs were sung, with Eleanor Bennett giving a few of her popular solo selections.

The dinner was so successful that until they part in June, the Seniors have vowed at every opportunity to have a social gathering.

Zeta Tau wishes to announce the following new members:

'Mice and Men' to be Presented

Eventually marry—but who finds his cold, calculating plans "gang atary" when he loves that ward with a self-sacrificing love not even understandable to himself. And Louise McCormick will bring you the dashing, romantic good—bad "Captain Lowell"—the kind of hero every maiden dreams o'er! Of course, a play without "Chubby Gray" would be as a repast without seasoning, so assuredly her Rodger Goodlake furnishes seasoning wit galore! Anna Gris McIntosh, a new member of the Dramatic Club, is the bit of loneliness "Little Britain" who can't help upsetting "he plans o' mice and men." These are just a few of the representative characters—the cast is large and carefully trained.

In other words, if you want to see a bit of real dramatic art, if you want to spend an enjoyable evening, don't miss "Mice and Men." It's a play, once seen, Farmville isn't going to soon forget!

(Both seem to be good ideas).

Gent: "Waiter, there are two flies in my coffee. Can you explain that?"

Waiter: "Yes, sir. You see, they are twins and I just won't be separated."

The Silver Lining

Police Sergeant: "Is the man dangerously wounded?"

Patrolman: "Two of the wounds are fatal, but the other one isn't so bad."

Captain of Liner: "Hail!" (Long pause)

Gymn Instructor (unable to stand the suspense any longer): "Exhale!"

Dumb: "Don't you just love an open fire?"

Bell: "Sure: wait till the fire bell rings and we'll go to one."

"I just saw that egg who played fullback at Boodler staring at you, darling."

"Please, don't hurt him, father!"

"I wasn't going to darling."

"I can't eat tomato soup."

"Why is that?"

"My sweetie has gone broke too."

(Old Lady to young boy of 4 years)
"I want a bright young boy who wants to mail this letter for me for a penny."

Young Boy: "Lady, what you want is a dumb bell."

"Why does Mary call you muple syrup?"

"Because I am such a refined sap."

"How do you know your daughter trusts in God?"

"By the company she keeps."

Judge: "I've seen cases come and I've seen cases go."

Sheriff: "Yes, I captured 'em and you drank 'em."

"It's not the school," said the little boy, "it's the principal of the thing."

Mama: "A girl has a pure soul because of a waddy complexion."

I will now sing a little song entitled "I started paying her attention and now I'm paying her alimony."

Fish: "My brother is an agnostic."

Bone: "Really? I didn't know they had a chapter here."

TEN WEEKS

On campus now for weeks
For ten long weeks to stay,
For the impulse of one minute
Of a far past yesterday.

For a poor Chesterfield
That forgot to satisfy,
I pay with a heavy heart
And many a sorry sigh.

Lonely and blue on campus,
I think of late one night
When how easy it would have been
To tell that which was right.

Why didn't I tell it then
And save my poor old heart?
Because it seemed unfair
And how the thought did smart.

I got down on my knees
My prayers, I thought to say
But I saw the path I traveled
That one from God does stray.

Forgiveness I wanted to ask
To tell Him all I tried
But words just would not come
For my heart wanted to hide.

I saw my only way
I took it, I went to Kate
She willingly made it easy
That story I had to relate.

Penace, it is only ten weeks
And that isn't half bad,
They should have given me more
For I had played the cad.

So as o'er campus, I stray
I sorrowfully think of a night
A night I played unfair
Forgot that wrong wasn't right.

KRONIC KRACKS FROM KUTE KOLLEGE KIDS

Meban Hunt says that sophistication is doing anything you want to without feeling badly about it.

Since football is a game played with a pig skin, and since the spectators at the game root, wouldn't it be more consistent to call the field a wallow?

Alice Jackson wants to know if the people in Poland are called Poles why aren't the people in Holland called Holes?

No, Perk, you can't get footnotes from a shoe horn.

Mr. McCorkle says it must have been great sport pitching pennies in the Stone Age.

"It's all off for the night," cried the co-ed, as she wiped her face with a towel.

Frances White says that she couldn't take the course in Shakespeare over because Shakespeare never repeats!

Yes, indeed, Updike, you might say that a inorganic marriage is rickien a la king.

The oft-repeated "Please don't" has now been replaced by the subtler "let's go to the movies."

Oh, no, Bessie Meade, you don't have to have a hunting license to shoot pool.

It is the author's private opinion that a missing finger on a deaf and dumb man might most aptly be called an impediment of speech.

IV. What are the leadership qualifications of this society? Must the members simply possess leadership ability or must this ability ripen to real fruits of service on the campus?

V. What other qualifications besides leadership and scholarship do you require for membership?

VI. What are your society dues? Do they include both an initiation fee and yearly membership dues?

VII. Have you succeeded in making your society a real asset to your school?

VIII. Have you found it wise to hide a student during his or her freshman year or to use that year as a sort of probation period?

IX. Can you suggest a significant name for a similar organization?

X. Have you any information in the way of literature which you could share with us?

Of the replies from the above schools the following letter was one of the most favorable and helpful:

"I prefer to answer your questions in general as follows:

Five or six years ago Washington and Lee originated a perfectly definite local fraternity called the Omicron Delta Kappa in which membership was won by leadership, such leadership falling into four classes.

1. In moral character and moral leadership.

2. Mental ability and scholastic leadership.

3. Leadership in college publications, etc.

4. Leadership in student activities such as athletics, musical, and dramatic organizations, etc.

This combination of varied campus leaders served so useful and valuable that it is now spreading over the whole United States as what might be called a national fraternity of campus leadership.

No student would normally be elected during his freshman year, and practically none or very few during the sophomore year, but there are no distinct laws forbidding the election of genuine leaders at any time ordinarily the junior year is the preferred one.

In some institutions this splendid organization of leaders seems to devote itself to boosting the institution, looking for new students, and endeavoring to increase its enrollment.

In others its chief business has been laid out as the moral elevation, behavior, traditions, etc., of the student body. Others have taken as their big job the enforcement of an honor system, the protection and care of the campus and college property, etc. A wise use of such a splendid organization would probably lead to a variation in its efforts and aims from year to year.

Hoping the above will be of some service to you, I am, cordially yours,

THE ROTUNDA, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 1926

NUMBER 23

S. T. C. FACULTY HOLDS INTERESTING DEBATE

"Single Blessedness vs. Wedded Bliss." Well—if any subject could more fittingly decide the fate of the numberless troubled minds in this institution we'd like to have it.

We went, we heard and we were conquered, not by the Affirmative, not by the Negative, but by both sides of this momentous question and so, we are still troubled.

Not until Friday night was I aware of the fickleness of such a great majority of our Faculty members but the switching from Affirmative to Negative and vice versa by the debaters surely proclaimed the truthfulness of the fact.

Not even the Rotunda could give space for each notable point brought out by the declaimers but honorable mention, at least, must be given.

Mr. Coyner praising single blessedness states, "single blessedness promotes youthfulness" (imagine this from youthful the married Mr. Coyner), and slandering the marriage state he says that a fitting inscription for the archway of matrimony would be "all hope abandon ye who enter here."

And then Miss Davis sympathetically addressing her "diluted but honorable opponent" said, Heaven forbid that he should lose his job for promoting such a doctrine. And then "without wedded bliss the very foundation of the American home would collapse, S. T. C. would tremble, and even the Student Building would fall." "For the clinging vine to be unsupported would be a terrible state of existence and for the type who likes the phrase "let so and so do it" what would happen? Could one let George do it were there no George?" "Oh! the heavenly bliss of married life—huge branches of red roses for every anniversary. Contrast such a picture with a sad spinster gazing at a faded rose-bud unable to remember whether the incident is connected with Tom, Dick or Harry." "Perhaps matrimony may mean washing dishes but could this equal grading paper until 12 o'clock every night?" And Miss Davis quoted a love scene from Ethel Dell in concluding her oratorical message.

Mr. McCorkle argued against matrimony from a chemical standpoint. "Marriage", he says, "is like a sugar coated pill—sweet on the outside only." Referring to Kipling's "rag, a bone and a hank of hair", he said a man who even thought of marriage should as quoted from the Raggedy Man "take your dough and run chile run."

Single blessedness was praised by Dr. Walmsley who gave an enlightened and spirited talk on the dangers threatening the younger generation. History formed the basis of his theories and he cited the terrible pitfalls brought about by matrimony by instances of Caesar whose troubles began after marriage, and Washing-

TRENT AND VINCENT ATTEND CONFERENCE

On Wednesday, April 14, Kate Trent, President of Student Government at S. T. C. and incoming President, Virginia Vincent, left to attend the Eleventh Annual Conference of the Southern Inter-collegiate Association of the Student Government. President Mebane Hunt
Vice-Pres. Elizabeth Hargrave

MR. HENRY WARREN POOR

Travelogue and Moving Pictures

On Tuesday morning, April 6, Mr. Henry Warren Poor, sent to S. T. C. by Mr. Dabney Lancaster, Secretary of the State Board of Education, gave an illuminating account of his travels through the National Parks and a few other colorful parts of the western United States. A series of colored moving pictures illustrated his talk. The wonder and beauty of our own glaciers, geysers, mountains and mountain lakes were shown. He also included some scenes of Golden Gate, Catalina Islands, Pasadena, and the old Spanish missions. Mainly Mr. Poor stressed that fact that we do not have to travel outside of our own country to see great natural beauty. He dwelt upon the injustice to which we have subjected the Indians, the race now at "the end of the trail."

ALPHA CHAPTER OF TRI SIGMA CELEBRATES FOUNDERS' DAY

For many years it has been the custom of the Tri-Sigma Sorority for each chapter to observe Founders' Day by carrying out a Founders' Day program at a banquet. Twenty-eight years ago on April 20 Sigma Sigma Sigma celebrated her first birthday.

On Saturday, April 17, members of the sorority and their mothers participated in a "Wishing Banquet." Many good wishes were made on the wish bone, the birthday cake, the four leaf clover, the rabbit's foot, etc. The decorations, favors, programs, etc., were in the sorority colors—purple and white.

The guests were: Mrs. Potts, Mrs. Crute and Mrs. Beckham, of Farmville; Mrs. Wilcox and Mrs. Hargrave of Petersburg; Misses Pauline Camper, Marion Sales, Mary Rives Richardson and Mrs. George Kilmer.

SPRING AND THE CAMPUS

With the springtime comes our real interest in our Campus, perhaps because its beauty attracts the eye, perhaps because the warm weather draws us closer to it. At any rate, Spring has wrought its changes and our Campus is becoming more and more beautiful each day. Flowers are blooming, the grass has become a beautiful green, and gay leaves are appearing once more upon the trees. Even the back campus has miraculously changed from ugly brown to velvety green. It seems that Springtime makes us aware of all beauty around us. It has made us appreciate more the beautiful colnads, probably more noticeable in its whiteness against the green of Spring. It is a passageway of beautiful simplicity during the day, and bright illumination at night. Spring is the season of love and appreciation of all things beautiful. We love our Campus and we do want to keep it beautiful, don't we? Remember, we all prefer quality to quantity, and so our Campus may not be very large but it can be very beautiful.

RUFFNER LITERARY SOCIETY

The Ruffner Literary Society held its regular meeting Friday night, April 9. The new officers were elected as follows:

Alpha Chapter Sigma Sigma Sigma and the members of Delta Sigma Chi extend sincere congratulations to Gamma Theta for being the holder of the scholarship cup for the winter quarter.

FIELD DAY WILL BE OBSERVED MAY SIXTH

On Thursday, May 6, S. T. C. will hold its regular annual field day at which time our girls will show the opportunity to do two big things if they participate in any of the twelve events offered. First, they will help their class win points which result in ten additional points toward the class cup. Second, they will help place Farmville State Teachers College in better standing in the eyes of other schools. Either thing is enough to induce every girl to do her part in order to make this year's field day more successful than the preceding ones.

This year's track meet is a State Telegraphic Track Meet. All teachers colleges of Virginia will send the results of their meet here after which the results of all meets will be tabulated and announced. To make Farmville the winner of this meet is our goal.

The twelve events which will be scheduled are as follows:

Hurdles, discuss throw, 50 yard dash, baseball throw, relay race, standing broad jump, shot put, hop-step-jump, javelin throw, basketball throw, running high jump, and, running broad jump.

AN EXPLANATION

There seems to be quite a misunderstanding among the Freshman class as to what nominations and a nominating committee means. In electing new officers the student body is asked to nominate girls for the various offices. Every nomination is carefully considered by the nominating committee which has the power to eliminate and elect the candidates to be voted upon. The committee is made up of girls who know the work of the office to be filled and are capable of judging the nominated girls. Nominations are not votes and the two should not be mixed. A few nominations can place a girl as a candidate as well as a great number.

THE ALMIGHTY "A"

The frenzied chase by the modern American Midas of the almighty dollar is no more determined than that of some of the present-day students is pursuit of the almighty "A".

A mere "B" or "C" has not the same satisfying effect that a dime or nickel from father had, when you and I were young. Now the aspiring youngster is not satisfied with less than fifty cents and usually demands the greenback.

Can we blame him when we know that the other children stand in awe of him when he is the proud possessor of a dollar?
But, they are not the only ones, for his parents and older relatives all encourage him to revere the god, money; and this reverence begins with a delight in obtaining possession of the almighty dollar.

So it is with those students today with reference to their
"do-or-die" attempts to get a grade and that grade must be an
"A".

Not only their classmates, but also their teachers bow down and worship the "A" pupil.

Would that some change might be brought about by which that type of pupil might want to work only for the satisfaction of the "fourth-grade light" which is gained through taking a sheer delight in her studies with no thought of a grade entering in. This is the true purpose, rather than that artificial reward, the almighty "A".

TOO MUCH PUNCH

"Why Ann! The very idea of such a thing--you know I've often wondered why you are always trying to feature the impossible!" That was the remark I received from Dick, as we rattled along home from the dance, when I had attempted to tell him that I couldn't get into the house and into my own little bed without waking a member of the household.
"Two a. m. and all is well!" he called out softly as he left me at my door. And then I closed the door-- oh, ever so softly--and listened to the rattle, bump and knock of Dick's old Ford as he drove away into the night.

On the first step I paused to remove my slippers--for all precautions were to be taken. This feat having been accomplished--I proceeded upward in the dark, for I had turned out all the lights on the lower floor and the house was in total darkness. I clung to the rail with one hand and with the other I clung to my shoes. Goodness! had it ever been so dark and still before?
Wait! what was that--for far out in the stillness of the night I heard a "who-o-o-o, who-o-o-o." I stopped--
I hadn't realized I was cold before, but now funny little shivers began to run up, and then down, and then up again. It was strange it was so still and dark. But how absurd for me to be afraid. Why all the family was there! Yes, there but miles away. Two steps up I paused again and closed my eyes to shut out the dreadful images that awaited my arrival at the top of the stairs. It was then that I heard the long, lonely howl of some poor pup--and then I recalled all the old superstitions of such night howls.

It was with great effort that I opened my eyes to proceed on my upward journey. And then--I saw above me--two huge fiery eyes looking straight at me! I screamed and turned to flee down the stairs, but missed my step and rolled down instead.
Bump! Bump! Down I went hitting every step, and after me came rolling my shoes and my shrieks. By the time I had reached the bottom, the family had assembled at the top of the stairs, and some one had been thoughtful enough to switch on a lower hall light. Then I looked around and there sat "Gump," the family cat, looking curiously and guiltlessly at me--his victim. And then there was Mother coming down the steps to me. "Why Ann--Ann dear, are you hurt? What in the world were you trying to do?" And rubbing my bruises and bumps, I answered, "Oh!
--nothing--trying to feature the impossible!"

my house all last night."

times howl that way for nights!"
"There'll be a death alright if he lies it again tonight."

"The Missionary Voice" contains the following notice: The seniors of Scaritt College were entertained by the junior class with a colonial reception Saturday evening in the Kirby home, one of the oldest colonial houses in Nashville and now being used by Scaritt College. The feature of the evening was a play in which characters of colonial days figured. The play was written by Miss Ruth Bartholomew, a member of the junior class.

The same number of "The Missionary Voice" gives an account of the Spring meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council held in Raleigh, N. C.
It says, "the crowning night of the session was when nineteen young women, cultured, beautiful, consecrated, stepped out and pledged their lives to the service of God in a service of humanity and were commissioned to fields at home and across seas." One of the nineteen was Birdie Reynolds, a home missionary.

WINDOWS

Along the street at dusk we feel
The warmth of windows aglow
With scintillating light all radiant
Or rose-hued lights turned low.

These windows reflect the life of the Home
And we pause a bit to dream;
For the eyes are the mirrors of the
soul,
We must be as we wish to seem.

A DAY CAME

A day came when she failed to smile,
Her eyes were wondering and sad;
Something was gone from her childish heart,
A thought, perhaps, once glad.

Sunshine gone, beauty spent . . .
I know—
Once I felt disillusionment.

ATONEMENT

I woke in the night,
I was afraid!
For something whispered
"A price must be paid!"

"For what?" I asked,
My voice a-ringing;
Something whispered,
"For everything!"

I prayed that night
In the dark, alone,
For peace to come—
For a way to atone!

A breeze
Blow over the sod,
And I fell asleep—
'Twas the breath of God.

SPRING HAS COME!

Shelley, P. B., was certainly right there when he came out with the statement, "Oh, wind, if winter comes can spring be far behind?" Well, Winter has come and gone leaving the stage to the Wind—and Spring.

Spring has come!
You cannot fool a horsefly is a statement about as enlightening as that old axiomatic quip and its running mate, the one about in the Spring a young man's fancy. But what about the young girls' fancy?
Fancy! Fancy what? Old, worn-out winter clothes, the latest thing in shoes, new ways to shingle hair, worries about the "best" colors this year, and whether or not the new spring bonnet is becoming; there are perhaps some doubtful ruminations in the back of her mind about Tom,
Richard or Henry.

Spring has come!
Who made those remarks about
"long, lazy afternoons" and "soft balmy evenings"? We're laughing at him! What about the dull, damp, drizzly afternoons, the rough March winds, and the cold, disagreeable evenings?

And so many of the modern realists feel about it. But who wants to be a continual thrower of the proverbial cold water and see only the Main Street manner of living all his life? Perhaps this old world we're living in is a pretty bad place after all, but who gets any thrill out of emphasizing the fact? Good old R.
L. S. had about as hard a time as any and saw perhaps more rough spots; he didn't continually sob about it. And how we love him for it!

Who wants to be a cynic and a pessimist anyway? A little realism goes a long way in these days we are living in. Spring HAS come! And the young girls' fancy! Why not?
With all nature fairly bursting with the sheer joy of coming to life again and all life thrilling to the call of Spring. Why should we scratch the paint from our beautiful new picture and expose with sardonic pride and pleasure the rude canvas beneath?
Why not dream a little, loaf a little, work a little, play a little and enjoy the bright side of life?

V. W. B.

ON BEING SMALL

My height being exactly 4 feet 11
3-4 inches, it seems to me that I am at least "fitted" to discourse at great length On Being Small. However, the discourse may be, the length will not be very great. In fact I'm going to leave "length" out altogether.

But think of being less than five feet tall. I think all my fellow cohorts will agree that most of the time, "we" are at a terrible disad-vantage. Continually "we" are knocked about here and there because someone much larger didn't happen to be looking at the ground when she was walking or running along. It isn't such a good feeling, either, to have people looking around everywhere for "us", and "we" are right there. It makes "us" feel rather "little."

And just try to go to a dance. Did you ever see a thing? The only thing I've ever seen was the lapel to a boy's coat—and I never did think they were particularly beautiful.

Buying clothes is another terrible ordeal for "us". "Oh—what a lovely dress—I think I'll try that one on."
And after it is on, do you ever want to see a worse looking fright? The sleeves hung loosely without any hands and the hem always drags the floor with the waist line just touch-

THE DAY’S PHILOSOPHY

The pleasantest way to spend the hour between 6 and 7 A. M. is to take another nap.

“Marrying well” means marrying a legree of luxury one hasn’t the wit to earn.

If all of the feeble-minded were locked up, where would some of these magazines get their circulation?

Hint to France: A mandate is a responsibility not a target.

It isn’t necessary to kill the weaklings. Just lay on a few more taxes and let nature take its course.

No intelligence test yet devised beats the ballot.

About the best test of personality is the effort to get laundry from a Chinaman without the ticket.

It is better to hunt rabbits. Then your companions seldom place you above your knees.

When genius lived on scant fare in the old days, the idea wasn’t to eat.

Some of the dearest of the freedom of almost everything except the feminine face.

On Being Small

ing the knees.

There are always two sides to a question though—and there are a few advantages in being small. It’s the best feeling in the world to be able to “hide” behind the girl on the next row when the teacher asks a question “we” can’t answer. It’s a better feeling than that when “we” have to buy only three yards (instead of four) of material for a dress when the material is $4.00 a yard.

We are told that “looking up” is a good habit to form. If practice aids any in forming a habit—and it certainly does—“we” practice always if “we” want to see anything.

Would you like to be small?

—E. P. B.

Two dazzling eyes with baby stare,
Two ruby lips and shingled hair....
Two dancing feet, a shoulder sway....
A rippling laugh, a cumping way....
A crowd of boys, a social whirl.
And there you have
The College Girl.

The above is the N. C. State’s ‘technician’ conception of that well-known menace to college men’s habits of study, the college co-ed. Below is the Keyhole’s conception of the typical collegiate:

Two sleepy eyes with mannish stare,
A moustached lip and larded hair.
Two Charlestoning dogs and a cunning way,
A horsey laugh with bills to pay.
Strings of broken hearts but profound joy.
And there you have
The College Boy.

“It Pleases Us To Please”

A Firm like an individual is always happy when its work pleases its customers, and this is the case with the Rotunda pleasant dealings we have enjoyed with the Rotunda Staff this year. We feel, from some expressions made to us, that we have really accomplished something in our efforts to make the ROTUNDA better than ever before.

In some cases we have made mistakes, it is only human to make mistakes, but we have enjoyed the job of printing the Rotunda and “IT PLEASES US TO

At all times we solicit constructive criticism and ap-

EIGHT ANNUAL OPEN MEETING OF PI KAPPA OMEGA

The eighth annual open meeting of Pi Kappa Omega was held in the auditorium on Saturday evening, April 24, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Olive Smith Bowman, President of the society, presided and after extending a hearty welcome to all present she read a list of the various projects on which the members of the society have been working throughout this year.

Those who sat on the platform with Mrs. Bowman were Miss Mary Dinwiddie, National President of Pi Kappa Omega; Dr. J. L. Jarman; Dr. Paul N. Garber, the speaker of the evening; and Mr. James M. Grainger, who introduced the speaker.

Dr. Garber gave a most excellent lecture on the foreign policy of the United States during the past twenty-five years.

As a background for this subject, Dr. Garber cited the various foreign policies of the U. S. from 1776 up until 1900. Among these he discussed, isolation, open door, arbitration, and the Monroe Doctrine.

In conclusion he showed how, during the past twenty-five years, America has trampled down all of her policies, which she has formerly maintained.

Immediately following the open meeting there was a banquet in the tea room attended by the members of Pi Kappa Omega, visiting alumnae, visitors from Beta chapter, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Dr. Paul N. Garber, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Grainger, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle, Miss Mary Clay Hiner, Miss Winnie Hiner, Miss Jennie M. Tabb, Miss Mary E. Peck, Miss Pauline Camper, and Miss Myrtle Grenels and Mr. W. D. Bowman.

Miss Evelyn Beckham was toast-mistress and the following toasts were given:

Dawning To Our Founders
Margaret Lewis Stearnes
Morning Hours, To Active Chapters
Audrey Chewing
Noon To the National Officers
Anne Robertson
Afternoon To the Alumnae
Cornelia Dickinson
Star of the East, To Mary Dinwiddie

THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT INTERESTING DEBATES ARE SCHEDULED

We had all heard of Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia, but it never seemed so close to us as it does now since our outgoing and incoming Student Government presidents attended the Student Government Conference held there. And now that we have heard about their trip we envy them because we could not go. Stopping off at Atlanta, Kate and Virginia had the wonderful opportunity of viewing Stone Mountain, that pure granite mountain to be carved as a memorial. Then on to Macon and Wesleyan, that beautiful old Methodist college situated on a high hill overlooking the town of Macon. There were about one hundred girls present at the Conference representing the leading colleges and our girls were among the proudest because Virginia sent delegates from eight of the conference. First of all there was a reception at the home of Dr. Guillian, the president of Wesleyan. Then there was a talk by the head of the History department regarding the essential characteristics of a Student Government leader and by Dr. Green, a prominent lawyer of Macon, discussing the judicial side of Student Government. There were personal interviews; the meeting of different schools to solve common problems. Farmville found that installation services which means so much to us means little in other colleges. Our representatives told them about our beautifully impressive service and imbued them with a desire to install their officers in such a manner. There was a Conservatory Recital in the auditorium of the college, a swimming party, a supper on the campus when school songs were sung, and a garden party on the site of greater Wesleyan where the ground will be broken in June for a greater Wesleyan college. Our representatives enjoyed their trip—they met girls from other colleges—heard of their joys and sorrows, but they love old S. T. C. best of all.

On Friday a team representing the negative will arrive in Farmville from Bridgewater, one in Harrisonburg from Radford, and one in Radford from Farmville. And again the affirmative will stay at home. At both times the results will be telegraphed from one school to the other as soon as determined so the winners may be announced at the end of the program. Then to cap the climax comes the debate of the season May 14th when Hampden-Sidney and S. T. C. meet in our auditorium to find out whether "The increased fraction of the modern youth is the bane of society" or not. That night Hampden-Sidney will stand up for the affirmative, represented by Mr. C. W. Kernan and Mr. R. B. Randolph and our S. T. C. will fight for the negative with all the power and vocal ability of Eleanor Bennett and Gladys Hubbard. Hampden-Sidney's alternate is to be Mr. J. B. Southall while ours is Edith Asher.

INTER-CLASS BASEBALL GAMES TO BE PLAYED

Next week inter-class baseball games will be played. This sport, like basketball, volleyball and the others, offers the victorious class ten points toward the class cup. Which class will win this contest? This decides largely just what colors will hang on the cup. Will they be red and white or green and white? Back the team, come out and decide!

DEBATE CLUB

The Debating Club announces the following new members:

Edith Asher
Eleanor Bennett
Jean Mitchell

Attend Prayers—you will enjoy it.

April 27th, April 30th and May 14th. Next week come two big debates, the double debate with Bridgewater on Tuesday, the 25th, and the triangular with Harrisonburg and Radford on the 30th.

In the first one, Catherine Bentley and Adrienne Richards will uphold the affirmative while Evelyn Beckham and Jean Mitchell will uphold the negative of this question: Resolved "That the System of Direct Primary Nominations for State and Local Offices is Preferable to Nominations by Convention."

In the triangular, Olive Smith Bowman and Elizabeth Hutt argue for the affirmative, with Mildred Folston and Lois Westbrook standing up for the negative of: Resolved "That Virginia should concentrate her efforts upon the development of her rural possibilities rather than a metropolitan area a round Hampton Roads."

On Tuesday a team representing the negative will arrive in Farmville from Bridgewater, and a team representing the Farmville negative will arrive at Bridgewater; the affirmative being the receiving team in both cases.

On Friday one negative team will arrive in Farmville from Harrisonburg, one in Harrisonburg from Radford, and one in Radford from Farmville. And again the affirmative will stay at home. At both times the results will be telegraphed from one school to the other as soon as determined so the winners may be announced at the end of the program.

C. will fight for the negative with all the power and vocal ability of Eleanor Bennett and Gladys Hubbard. Hampden-Sidney's alternate is to be Mr. J. B. Southall while ours is Edith Asher.

Mr. Kernan represented Hampden-Sidney against us last year and has had considerable experience in debating. Mr. Randolph is a freshman but has been in one inter-collegiate debate already. He is a descendant of the John Randolph and is a native of Kansas.

"The Tiger" says that Hampden-Sidney is expecting to repeat their victory of last year, but if the student body will back on the representatives of our school there will be a chance for "The Rotunda" to talk about making a question next year.

Come on, turn out Tuesday and Friday night, Student Body, if you want us to win.

And then come and bring every body else on May 14th.

JOAN SAYS—

These beautiful spring evenings when our campus is so lovely it is only right and natural that we should want to walk up High Street and enjoy the sunset. But I wonder if perhaps we wouldn't enjoy it more if we stop for a moment before our walk to go to Prayers. Prayers last only a few minutes and in this busy life of ours there are so few minutes we find to spend with God. The Y. W. C. A. gives us a wonderful opportunity for a minute or two of quiet with God. I wonder do we appreciate it? The number of girls attending prayers is steadily decreasing just when we should want to be spending more time on thought and prayer. With all of the beauties of nature around us—flowers and trees—we should feel closer to our Maker and want to thank Him for His gifts. Let's go to prayers and help ourselves by helping others. If we go our best friend will go.

BIGGER THAN "A".

Although we will not be in the Hall of Fame if we make an all "A" report and although the sun will not stop shining if we do fall down, we strive to do our best work. And rightly. But do we not sometimes think a little too much about whether the grade is an "A" or "B" and forget too easily that we are here for something bigger than a letter?

It is not the grade, nor even the information gained, but how well we learn to use the knowledge we get that counts for the most, that will count for the most. It is not likely that Poe even remembered the grade he got on a literature course at the University of Virginia when he wrote his short stories and poems. What is learned, in proportion, can mean as much to us as to the genius. Ten years from now we will have forgotten just what we made on the course in Roman history, but maybe we will remember something of the Roman influence on civilization—which is more important.

—Breezy Read the Rotunda—write for it.

SCHOOL ORGANIZATION.

The organizations in our school belong to us. They should play a vital and important part in our lives, and not only in our lives but in the school itself. Are we making them do this? Do you feel that the organizations such as the Student Association, Y. W. C. A., Athletic Association or The Rotunda belong to you? If not—why not?

We have just elected our officers, they are ours because we elected them. Now that they are at the head of the vital parts of school life are we going to leave them with no aid—no suggestions—and worse yet are we going to tear to pieces what they try to do by criticism?

Why can't we start right by giving suggestions. If we feel that the Y. W. C. A. does not make each girl feel herself a part of it don't just criticize it and say so, look around for the reason, go to the President or some other representative, talk it over and say just what you think. If we feel that The Rotunda is not representative of the school—then say so and do your bit to help make it representative. So on with each organization.

Your class is yours—make it so. Don't skip every meeting and then say: "I didn't know what was going on. I don't approve of that."

Next week the new officers go into office and it is the duty and the privilege of every girl in school to help make the organization which these representatives are going to be in charge of really school organizations. They are ours and we have a right to feel bad if we can't seem to have any part in them, but first make sure that we can't and then find the reason.

The year 1926-27 should be one on which every S. T. C. girl will look with pride—just as she can 1925-26—but in order for it to be so, the girls who hold the responsible positions in school must learn to hold them, from now until June they are learning but we've got to help them, so don't forget that it's our place to make our organizations ours.

OUR TULIP BED

Spring has come—at last—to S. T. C. Evidences of it are everywhere the trees, shrubs, warm days, summer frocks and tennis. But to me the thing that proclaims spring the most is the gorgeous tulip bed half hidden in a corner by the tea room.

No one but Miss Mary was aware of the possible beauty that lay hidden in some bulbs and that small plot of ground. Her love of flowers and beauty led her to take advantage of the possibilities and as a result we have a bed of tulips which are a riot of color, red, yellow, white, pink and combinations. They are a spot of color which brightens not only the whole campus but also the hearts of the many girls that pass it and enjoy the beauty. To the Freshman it is especially pleasing since this is their first opportunity to enjoy its beauty. We are very grateful to Miss Mary and those who helped in the making of it and we wish to take this opportunity to thank them.

DRAMATICS AND THE MEASLES

Measles is not very pleasant under the calmest, most desirable circumstances, and certainly as a means of prohibiting the production of a play such as "Mice and Men" it is to be greatly scorned. And yet—the fault lies where? No one knows and so measles has no fear. Confident that no punishment will be inflicted it wraps itself unmolested about the most promising victims and plays havoc with the social life of great institutions. To our leading man we wish a speedy recovery and we console ourselves with the following lines of the play, "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang oft awry."

VIRGINIA CLUB HOLDS MEETING

On Monday, April 9, the Virginia Club had a very interesting meeting. The various committees gave reports, and Miss Stubbs gave an outline of the work the club hopes to complete this year. Committees were appointed to take charge of the various phases of the project and a definite program was planned.

The club decided to have its regular meeting on Monday night. At the next meeting they hope to be able to report that the material for the Prince Edward Bulletin is well on the way.

MISS MARY'S SUPPER

Tuesday night? Oh, no, we're not speaking of the Gov't meeting—something far more pleasant. Didn't you know that Miss Mary is entertaining our table tonight?

This is one of the most enjoyable affairs we girls have, and one that is looked forward to from the first of the year. All of us are anxious to be entertained, and as the Tuesday nights roll by we hear glowing reports from the girls. But no wonder! Miss Mary has invited us and what a lovely time we do have! As hostess we all agree that she is a charming one; she knows just what interests everybody. She seems to know that although we're big girls now, we still enjoy the games we loved when we were very small. And while having supper we can see, from the many delightful dishes, that she has discovered, what appeals to everyone of us. We certainly admit that an hour can not be spent more pleasantly, and the few words—"I had a lovely time"—"I enjoyed myself so much"—etc.,—can't begin to express the real joy we experience when Miss Mary entertains.

Attend Prayers—you will enjoy it.

KATE TRENT

To try to picture Kate as a Senior and then as president of the Student Government would be an impossibility, and so I combine the two to characterize this individual. As a member of the Senior class she is just what she is in the committee room—sympathetic, just and efficient. Kate's optimism is one of her greatest attributes, and as President of the Student Body carries her troubles and responsibilities and yet she neither praises her position nor burdens others with troubles. She keeps all worries hidden beneath the surface and shows to others only happiness and smiles. In the committee room Kate is not the Student Government president but The Friend. For every girl her consideration is the same and there is always with her a thorough understanding of all things. This year's work has been a terrific strain on Kate—she has been faced with problems which have never before come to the notice of the school and she has unflinchingly solved each one of them satisfactorily. We—the Student Body owe much to you Kate—you have been our friend in gladness and sadness—always the same.

"You were true for there were those who trusted,
You were pure for there were those who cared,
You were strong and there was much to suffer,
You were brave and there was much to bear."

ANN SMITH

Get Ann Smith to do it and you will get it done. She has taken the place of "Let George do it." Not only has she done things herself but she has guided a class for two years and made it an outstanding class each year. Ann's originality in getting up stunts, shows and programs has been at the call of her class. She has never tired of work and has been thoroughly unselfish in all that she has done.

Ann has worked on The Virginian for two years and has been a very capable member.

Her untiring patience as costume mistress in the Dramatic Club has been appreciated by the casts of each play. Without a person like Ann as costume mistress the plays here would certainly be lacking in style. Ann has always watched every costume grow to perfection.

What would S. T. C. be if she had a hundred workers like Ann Smith?

TO THE STUDENT BODY

It has been not only an honor but also a pleasure to work with you this year and now that my term of office is drawing near an end, I want to take this opportunity to thank you for your cooperation and help during the past year.

Without your willingness, your loyalty, and your never failing aid, I would have accomplished very little.

—Kate Trent

THE HYMN BOOKS IN CHAPEL

We girls, young ladies, students, or future teachers (whatever term may seem most suitable) at S. T. C. are a very sound, sane, and sensible lot in many respects. Our conduct on the street is impeccable, our attitude in the classroom is admirable; we conduct ourselves at all times with perfect dignity, propriety, and decorum. We consider ourselves highly civilized, broadly cultured and deeply intelligent young women. We have a profound respect for the property of others and a proprietary regard for our own belongings.

Yet somehow we are sadly amiss in one respect. We do not protect our common property. A very noticeable instance of this neglect is the case of the hymn books in chapel. There are enough books for everyone to use in singing when they are kept in the holders at the back of the seats provided for that purpose. But they are not kept there. Hardly one book can be found in a whole row in the back of the auditorium, while at the front there are books in abundance. They are lying in the seats, on the floor and crowded into the holders in any slovenly manner so that anyone passing may knock them to the floor. They are being worn out by the rough treatment we submit them to.

This condition is a disgrace to our sense of neatness or the fitness of things and is entirely due to carelessness. I am sure that we have never really given this matter any thought. It is only a small matter but it means a great deal in the life of the books and in the appearance of our auditorium.

Let us try to erase this fault from our record. When we have finished with a book let us place it long side downward in a holder by itself and when we find one on the floor let's pick it up and place it also in an empty holder.

If everyone will do this our books will last much longer, our auditorium will look much nicer and our habit of orderliness will be strengthened.

THE CALL OF THE VIOLIN

Silence,
Expectancy,
And then—
A sound,
A far, faint, plaintive cry
That grows and dips
Into the very depths,
And my soul,
Answering its call,
Follows down, down
Into an agony of despair.
I sit tense,
Every nerve strained
Listening,
Harkening to the call,
And parched
For tears,
And then—
A melody
That grows and swells
Into an overwhelming tide
Of thankfulness
And glory!
And I,
Borne on the flood,
Fly higher, higher

THE SPOTLIGHT

Ann Smith and Pannie Willis have been troubled lately by nightmares, in which they chased innumerable lanterns and wigs that would not be caught in time for the Dramatic Club play.

The truth will out—so will the measles. Ask Louise Brewer.

Runt Hargrave was heard to say that she was glad that a man's grasp could exceed her reach.

Why couldn't Mattie Rogers have found a better place to fall for her date than down the church steps?

BOY AND GIRL EDITORS AT NEW YORK CONVENTION

Scholastic Press Association Awards Prizes for Best School Newspapers and Magazines

More than 800 high school boys and girls and normal school students attended the second yearly convention of the Scholastic Press Association of Columbia University, in New York, recently. As editors of high school and normal school magazines and newspapers they represented schools in seventeen States, the District of Columbia, the Canal Zone and Canada. Their ages range from eleven to nineteen.

Silver cups were awarded as first prizes for the best student publications. The high schools were divided into three classes—schools with more than 1,000 students, schools having between 500 and 1000 students and schools of 500 or less. The awards were as follows:

Magazine Awards

Best magazines edited by students of senior high schools—The Quest, published by Central High School, Minneapolis, Minn.; The Lit, published by Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N. J.; The Homespun, published by Central High School, Greensboro, N. C.

Best magazines edited by students of junior high schools—The Nor'easter, of Northeastern Junior High Broadcaster, published by the Nashua Junior High School, of Nashua, N. H.

Best normal school magazine—The Norm, published by the Philadelphia Normal School, Philadelphia, Pa.

Newspaper Awards

Best senior high school newspapers—The Polaris Weekly, of North High School, Minneapolis, Minn.; High Life, published by the High School of Greensboro, N. C.; The Reserve Record, published by Western Reserve Academy, Hudson, Ohio.

Best junior high school newspapers—The Review, of Junior High School No. 2, Trenton, N. J.; The Magnet, of Parkersburg Junior High School, Parkersburg, W. Va.

Best normal school newspaper—The Junior College Journal, published by Junior Teachers' College, Cleveland, Ohio.

The delegates from the Greensboro, N. C., schools made the trip to New York and back in a Ford truck loaned by the Greensboro Daily Record. Gasoline was supplied by the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce. The trip was worth while, for the Greensboro schools won two prizes.

When Bessie Meade goes elsewhere people get the idea she is fond of intoxicating liquors. At S. T. C. we know that it's just Bessie Meade.

Phyllis Wood, Margaret Mackasey, Marion Grimes and Helen Wilcox have formed a club with the slogan: "To the Last Man".

Peggy Lou was caught in the act of singing "Some Sunny Day." We wonder if she was referring to Saturday and Sunday nights.

At The Enaco Theatre This Week

TUES.—HOOT GIBSON in THE SAWDUST TRAIL a stirring drama of the Wild West. It is the wildest romance of his screen career. Between love-making and taming the wildest women in the Wild West Show, he finds time to perform some of the funniest stunts you have ever seen. Also Pathé News.

WED.—Jack Hoxie in FIGHTING FUY with the famous Ranch Riders. A heart gripping romance of the great out-doors, set in a matchless background of snow-capped mountains. Big with dramatic power. Big with spectacular sensations—a thrilling chapter right out of the life of the West. A love story that will enthral you. We also start a new serial THE WINKING IDOL, this night.

THURS. & FRI.—GLORIA SWANSON in STAGE STRUCK a special Paramount picture, part of which is shown in beautiful colors. What young girl hasn't dreamed of fame and fortune behind the footlights? "Stage Struck" is the story of a girl who tried to make the dream come true. It is Glorious Gloria's greatest character role. Her richest comedy role. Her flashiest fashion role. It is luxuriously produced with many gorgeous scenes in natural Technicolor. She took a correspondence course in acting—and thought she'd make the Barrymores jealous. Good comedy each night. Mat. THURSDAY ONLY, at 4 o'clock.

SAT.—CLAA BOW and DONALD KEITH in THE PLASTIC AGE from the very popular novel by the same name. Here is a production that will entertain and appeal to all. An American college is the scene of the story, the moral development of a modern boy is the theme. The novel has been so widely read, it is useless to tell about the story. Don't miss it. Mat. at 4 o'clock. Two shows at night. 11th episode of "Battling Brewster" also.

NATIONAL Y. W. C. A. CONVENTION HELD IN MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN

Harrell, President-elect Returns May 1st

Rosalind Harrell, returning from a twelve-day trip to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where she attended the National Y. W. C. A. Convention, reports a time wonderful beyond comparison.

She left here Monday, April 19 and went to East Radford. From there on she was accompanied by Julia Gunn, East Radford's delegate to the convention. They travelled through the mountains of West Virginia, through Ohio, stopping over in Cincinnati, and through Indiana and Illinois, staying a few hours in Chicago. From there they went to Milwaukee arriving at noon on Wednesday, April 22.

After registering and getting settled in an hotel, they plunged into the convention, for the sessions were in order morning, afternoon, and evening from the first day until the last. Rosalind says she lost all count of time and of her own small self among three thousand women and college students. The morning sessions were conducted in an open forum manner, resolutions for the coming year were brought forward and discussed, amendments to the constitution were made, and the general business program ensued. Afternoons were given over to discussion groups and assemblies. (Student, Business and Industrial). Evenings brought reports, various speakers and the generalities derived at from discussion groups.

One of the most important amendments to the National Y. W. C. A. Constitution was that of putting membership on a personal basis, similar to that of student constitutions. Church membership is no longer a requisite for Y. W. C. A. membership.

The spiritual force of the convention was accentuated by the devoted exercises conducted by Dr. Glick. His dynamic personality and unbounding Christian energy were a real power. One of the most interesting and entertaining features of the convention was a Pageant "Forward Through The Ages," in which eight hundred persons participated. It was a panorama of the use of women through the ages, their sufferings, strugglings and success attained.

The delegates were entertained by the Milwaukee Association in the Elk's Home at a reception where they met the president and national board. Another and most charming affair—an international luncheon was held in Hotel Pfister. There were seventeen foreign women guests present.

The delegates were most fortunate in having the great privilege of hearing Paderewski play before an audience of fourteen thousand in Milwaukee auditorium.

TRIANGULAR DEBATE

Farmville Wins over Harrisonburg,
3-0; Loses to Radford 2-1

On the evening of April 30, at eight o'clock, a portion of the triangular debate was held in S. T. C. auditorium where a debating team from Harrisonburg State Teachers College met one from Farmville. At the same time, Mildred Folston and Lois Westbrook were representing Farmville at Radford and one of Radford's teams was debating at Harrisonburg. The subject of the triangular debate was, Resolved, That Virginia Should Concentrate Her Efforts Upon the Development of the Rural Possibilities. Rather Than the Development of a Metropolitan Area Around Hampton Roads.

At Farmville the affirmative was upheld by Olive Smith Bowman and Elizabeth Hutt with Marian Kelly and Georgie Brockett of Harrisonburg supporting the negative. Both teams supported their sides with a great deal of sound arguments and enthusiasm. Mainly the negative side stressed Hampton Roads' capability of producing great immediate revenue, while the affirmative gave a program for improvement of Virginia's poor rural sections and showed how commerce through Hampton Roads would be developed through agriculture. Dr. J. E. Walsley presided. The judges—Mr. T. J. McIlwaine, Dr. W. Twyman Williams and Dr. R. M. Waite—gave their decision unanimously in favor of the affirmative.

Saturday morning in chapel a telegram from our team at Radford was read as follows: "Lost to Radford two to one. Hope Farmville won there." Radford also won at Harrisonburg so that makes the former the final winner in the triangular debate.

The chief advantage of Farmville's recent debates, as Dr. Jarman pointed out, has been to stimulate an interest in literary activities. If this interest continues to grow, next year our teams cannot choose but win, backed as they will be by the student body.

Remember that this year one more debate will be held—Farmville versus Hampden-Sidney, May 14. A chance to show your loyalty and support!

A TRAGIC COMEDY

You have often heard of those incidents which come so near ending unfortunately but some little fairy godmother takes her and at the proper time. Previous to the triangular debate last Friday, a figure on the dining room roof was seen to draw near the back wall and glance over it time after time. Such conduct looked so suspicious that an observer in the Training School departed a fast courier to prevent the person from jumping off the roof. Up to the third floor panted the rescuer, pushed open the door to the roof and gasped! A girl had simply chosen the roof as the field of attack upon her debate.

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY GIVES MAY DAY FESTIVAL

Dutch Roberts Makes Charming Queen

Last Saturday afternoon at precisely four o'clock the great event to which the students of Hampden-Sidney College had been looking forward to all the year took place. This event was none other than their very own May Day Festival. Everyone was given a holiday on Friday in order to go into the woods and pick armfuls of lovely wild flowers to decorate the queen's throne.

All day long Saturday the students went around in a frenzy of excitement. They skipped to and fro across the campus, clapping their hands.

At last the magic hour of four rolled around and everyone gathered (thrilled to death) to witness the procession. First of all came the dear little pages, Lacey Tynes and Gordon Clarke. They were dressed in adorable Lord Fauntelroy suits. To the accompaniment of their trumpets they executed a few graceful steps. After the pages came the nymphs. Leading the nymph dance was none other than Ridley Alexander. All of them were dressed in track suits which looked too cute for anything trimmed in bright bits of tulle. Grecian bands were worn around their heads. The nymphs were Sonny Robinson, Bill Broach, Wilkes Peery, Geter Scott, Slick Strader and Frank Kinser, Parke Leekie and Neff Nance attired (or rather disguised as) butterflies appeared next in line, singing a sweet little song about the spring time and the bunny rabbits. Bob Porterfield caused many hearts to flutter as she skipped gracefully out as Diana the Huntress. Alex Hamilton and Jimmie Ayers were perfectly dear as flower girls. They gave every single person a rosebud and scattered buttercups and daisies carelessly around.

After this there was a slight pause. Everyone held his breath. The queen was coming! Oh how dainty she was as she swept up with her attendants! Dutch wore a dress of palest red trimmed with royal purple.

The maid of honor, J. B. Sparrow, chosen for the place because of her rosy cheeks followed close behind. Carrying the queen's train and dressed in suits of pink satin and lace were Mike Brinser and Spritter Adkins. The ladies of the court made a beautiful assemblage. Such famous beauties as Billy Williams, Red Richardson, Flem Hurt, Emmett Morrison, Lewis Holladay, Joe Cox, Nick Carter, George Cootes and The Mabens graced their number. With many groans and much hoisting and heaving the queen was finally established on her throne.

Then came the most exciting part of the entire program! A dancer glided upon the scene—a vision in yellow jonquils and lavender tulle. The vision began dancing. She swayed rhythmically to the strains of the soft music. She bent like a desert

STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE VS. BRIDGEWATER COLLEGE

On April 27, 1926, Bridgewater College met the State Teachers College of Farmville in a very interesting debate with Dr. J. L. Jarman as presiding officer. The subject for the debate was: Resolved, That the system of direct primary nominations for state and local officers, is preferable to nomination by convention. The negative side of this question was ably argued by Misses Ethel Coaden and Ruth Fike of Bridgewater while Misses Catherine Bentley and Adrienne Richards creditably represented Farmville on the affirmative. After much deliberation the judges rendered their decision in favor of the negative.

Before the debate, three delightful numbers were rendered by Miss Claire Black, contralto soloist.

DR. GEORGE F. PRESTON SPEAKS

On Thursday evening, April 29 an interested audience heard Dr. George F. Preston, psychiatrist of The Children's Memorial Clinic in Richmond, speak on the every-day problems as applied to psychiatry by the non-technically trained parents and teachers.

He gave many helpful suggestions and he brought out very forcefully the characteristics that a person using mental hygiene must have. Patience, common sense and imagination are the three qualities which are best understood but the task of acquiring the right point of view is a little more difficult," said Dr. Preston. "We must ask ourselves why the child acts as he does instead of what to do with him," continued Dr. Preston, as he applied his subject to the needs of teachers.

The speaker concluded his lecture by giving us the work of the whole field of "Mental Hygiene" or psychiatry as follows, "Mental Hygiene" deals with human behavior of all types and the treatment of the normal person plays just as large a part as the treatment of the abnormal."

The lecture was valuable in that the teachings can be applied easily and may well be adopted because of the reputation of the speaker, Dr. Preston as a widely known and efficient psychiatrist.

"ODDS AND ENDS OF 1926"

Saturday afternoon the members of Tri-Sigma Sorority went to Amelia in cars to present "Odds And Ends of 1926" an original collection of songs, dances, impersonations, and musical performances. During the short time spent in Amelia the girls were treated royally, indeed; and the play was supported heartily by the people. Much of the success of "Odds and Ends" was due to Eleanor Bennett and "Jack" Draper, who very kindly assisted in the performance, and to Louise McCormick, who acted as Right Hand Man.

SUPPORT THE DEBATERS CLUB.

I wonder if every student is really aware of the fact that there is a Debaters Club at S. T. C. For years the school has felt the need for just such an organization and now, our desire has been gratified. We have a Club of which we should be proud. It is answering a hope for greater achievements along a literary line and the finest material in college is being developed through the Debaters Club. Every girl has worked hard to become a member; not only for herself has she tried to make the team, but for her school. The Debaters Club represents our school. What should be our attitude toward this new organization? Surely we want success to follow every member of the Club, surely we want the debating team of S. T. C. to know only victory, but can they come out with flying colors alone? No, they need the backing of every member of the Student Body. They need the cooperation, understanding and interest of the school. Perhaps you little realize how much a little of your time and interest counts. Come to the Debates and you will want to come to come again—show the Club that you are a "true blue and loyal supporter." Remember it's the links in the chain that count, so be a link in the chain of backers and do your part that the chain may remain secure and unbroken.

BI-WEEKLY NOTES

Since our teachers have always desired to help those students who have shown a marked deficiency in their class work, there was established, some time ago, here at S. T. C. what is known as the note system. The teachers send notes only in a spirit of kindness, because they wish to help the students who are falling down on their work, and who, in nine cases out of ten, are perfectly capable of doing better. Suppose our teachers just did not care whether pupils continued to get low grades or not. Suppose they were not interested enough in them to take the trouble to keep up with their grades and send notes to those who should be warned. It is easy to guess what the consequences would be—a much larger per-centage of failure and many more discouraged and disheartened students than really are.

The benefits of the system are immediately recognized when we realize how many students appreciate the warnings, which give them a chance to pick up, and consequently work harder, so that by the end of the term they may get a better grade than they would otherwise get.

Perhaps there are some students who resent getting notes and fail to see any good to be derived from them. Of course, these students will never profit by them as long as they have this mistaken attitude. Notes are not sent with hope of benefitting these students. On the other hand, they are sent because the teachers know that the majority of girls will take them in the right spirit, and will profit by them.

The number of notes sent on last note day was somewhat alarming. But if you stop to think that there was a possibility of approximately forty-five hundred notes being sent, the number does not seem appalling. However, this number was much larger than it should have been, and it is sincerely hoped that the results of next note day will not be so discouraging.

Since most of the notes were sent to underclassmen, freshmen in particular, there must be some very big reasons for this fact. Are teachers inclined to be too exacting in their requirements of the freshmen? Perhaps they forget the gap which exists between our high schools and colleges. It is an alarmingly big gap, and it usually takes pupils some time to bridge it.

In many cases it is the pupil's fault that she falls down in her work. She is much too apt to, at first take her work lightly, and to fail entirely to exercise any seriousness of purpose or earnestness of endeavor.

Other students become entirely absorbed in outside activities to the neglect of their studies. If these students would only wait to get well established in their class work, before allying themselves with outside activities, they would, in the end, be far more able to do both more creditably.

Another practice, which may serve to remedy the situation, is to give in "Freshmen Fundamentals," which will take in methods of efficient study, the use of the library, the best use of their time in general, and something of what is expected at all times of the students her at S. T. C.

It is believed that such a course will help students to become adjusted to our systems of doing thing and habits of study.

In other words, a student will "come to herself," for, as Woodrow Wilson said, "The ease of a perfect adjustment is what a man gains when he has come to himself."

VISITORS FROM COLUMBIA

Mr. De Forest Stull and Mr. Upton spent a few days of last week in and around our college. Both men, of Columbia University, are making a study of the Teachers Colleges and Normal Schools on the Atlantic seaboard. While on our campus they commented upon our fine group of buildings and the remarkable taste displayed in their furnishings.

In chapel on April 28 the visitors were given an opportunity to talk to us students. Mr. Upton, whose specialty is arithmetic, gave us the modern viewpoint of arithmetic with its more practical problems and smaller fractions which replace the old "mental jaw-breakers." "Arithmetic," he stated, "change just as women's styles change." He illustrated this by the present vogue of the decimal.

Mr. De Forest Stull, the second speaker, claimed that he had not prepared a speech as Mr. Upton had. So in place of devoting his entire talk to his especial interest, geography, Mr. Stull gave us a few of his impressions of our college and town. He saw at once that the college received the cooperation of Farmville. Everyone who knows something about geography need not be considered a "perambulating atlas." Geography is something more than location which is a very unimportant phase. Climate and soil are far greater portions of geography need not be considered a menial school subject, but also a high school, a college and a university one.

We should like Mr. Stull and Mr. Upton to have extended their visit.

THE UNROMANTIC

Rose trees encircled us
The air was calm and sweet,
The moon shone softly
And our lips—they did meet.

Then, you fool, such a question:
"Do you think it will rain?"
You careless silly lover
I'll never love you again.

AMONG THE CAPS AND GOWNS

GERTRUDE QUINN

"A dainty maiden beyond compare;
Pretty, petit and debonaire"

Yes, that's "Bun"! There's not a person here at S. T. C. who has not felt the charm and delightful personality of our tiniest Senior.

Her capable judgment and leadership which she has shown throughout this year as vice-president of the student body, have won for her the highest esteem of the students and faculty.

"Bun's" presence as assistant supervisor in the kindergarten has meant a great deal to that department and, when one sees her among a crowd of tiny tots, one knows that she has won the heart of each.

AUDREY CHEWNING

Audrey has been with us only two years, but her excellent scholarship, her rare ability as a leader and her attractive manner and sweet disposition have won her a place in the hearts of that student body. It's hard to tell just what we will do without her for if it's got to be done, Audrey will do it, if you need a friend Audrey is there in fact when we think of not seeing Audrey with her sweet, serious smile walking down the aisle in her cap and gown, a lump comes in our throats that's rather hard to swallow. Not many girls have to their credit a record so fine as has this Senior. Socially, morally, scholarly, she has measured up to the finest things for which S. T. C. stands. Our love and best wishes that the success which has been hers through her college career will go with Audrey always.

Watch the evening sunlight,

GRAY MIST

A gray night, misty, dark and drear,
Tonight the stars neglect to shine,
And yet, beyond, the dawn is near,
A light—radiant, divine!

So is it in the path of life,
When hope and faith seem well-nigh gone,
A light upon the road appears,
And love brings in the dawn.

The Spring has stolen Robin's suit—
You see, she's garbed in green—
And you should hear the birds protest
About this robber queen.

"To think she's seventeen;

"We know she's passed a million times
And still, she dons her green."

ATHLETIC NEWS

Basketball Varsity is Presented
White Jerseys

Friday in chapel the basketball varsity composed of Hall, Perkins, Reid, Mitchell, White and Crute and the coach, Miss Graham, were presented with white slip over jerseys by the Athletic Association in appreciation of the work done by the varsity this year. In every game played the varsity gave to the school a demonstration of good sportsmanship put into actual practice. Every game was clean and fair and every victory as well as every defeat was taken with the grace and dignity of a true sport.

Field Day is Approaching

Only ten more days and preliminary try-outs for field day will be staged.
This means that there are only ten more days of practice before time for the track meet. This also means that every girl who wishes to participate in any event for the final meet must come out and practice. There are two other things that must be done.

1. Every girl who expects to compete must be weighed and measured Friday.

2. Every girl who is going to participate in any event must sign up by Saturday.

This is Baseball Week

This week all of the interclass baseball games will be played after which the best team will contribute ten points toward the class cup. The schedule for the games is as follows:
May 4—Freshmen vs. Sophomores
May 6—Sophomores vs. Juniors
May 8—Freshmen vs. Freshmen

Numerals to be Awarded for Track
An amendment has been added to the Athletic Association Constitution which enables girls to win numerals for track if a girl measures up to the requirement. If a girl wins a first, a second or third place she is qualified to win a numeral.

Rotunda to have Athletic Issue

There will be an athletic issue of the Rotunda the week following Field Day. At this time a resume of every phase of this year's athletics will be published. The staff selected for this is as follows:

Editor-in-chief Evelyn Dulaney

VARIETY

We're having changes in the menu in the dining room—why not have a few in the Tea Room menu. We understand the menu of the Tea Room is fixed by the dining room. "Variety is the spice

Tea Room would certainly be appreciated.

The jazz craze is definitely on the

some good in it.

MARRIAGE OF OLD S. T. C. GIRL

The recent marriage of Lady Jean Moore to Mr. E. Runt Hargrave of Petersburg, Va., was one of the most interesting social functions of the season. It is not known where this young and delightful couple will spend their sugar moon, but several attempts, on the part of their friends, have been attempted without success.

The church was decorated with horsehair and lavender garters hung from the cobwebby rafters above. The preacher behind the altar was playing a game of billiards with the mice while waiting for the dainty groom and buxom bride. Miss Meban Hunt opened the ceremony by delightfully rendering that old ditty "Daddy get the mowder there're onions in the milk." Then the Sensational Syncopaters struck up the wedding march in too flat. First to come was "Cheerful Chubby" Gray who rode a broncho time dance on several feet besides her own. Then Miss "Sookie" Volk toddled up the aisle rapidly demolishing a lolly-pop. The next to perform was Overbey herself, who rode a broncho to the altar carrying a butterfly in one hand, and wearing riding boots fashioned from back issues of The Rotunda. Nellie Baber and Helen Wilcox, who crawled and scrambled to their respective stations completed the wedding party. And such a party!

Suddenly all eyes were turned to the rear of the church. There walking, sedately and slowly down the aisle was Miss Moore herself. She was on her escort's arm, but her eyes were on the ground as she daintily chewed her gum. She was dressed in yellow tights and an exquisite 25 cent straw hat. Around her neck was hanging an old family heirloom of false teeth, which had been in her family for generations.
On her dainty feet were dainty, fur-lined galoshes, number 9 in size, and flapping vigorously in the gale she created as she swept up the aisle. Altogether she made a striking picture as she wended her way to her future mate.

Then young Runt himself, showed up. His best man was E. Zacharias, who had been through the asylum with him, and best understood him in his frequent digressions. Young Runt himself, wore a handsome diamond-studded nose guard, and a fur-lined cigar holder. A pair of lavender garters to match those on the rafters were about his arms holding up his gloves. His spike-tail coat dug the ground, while a broad grin of surprise plastered itself over his features.

As Miss Moore took his arm, he blushed furiously and stared rigidly at his best man's smallest toe. (The wedding party was shoeless). After an awful struggle the preacher pronounced them man and wife, and a few minutes later they set out on their honey drippings.

The congregation, which obligingly accompanied every movement with snore of various notes, yawned three times and discourteously left the church. As usual the bell was tolled during the ceremony.

MR. ARTHUR JAMES

Represents State Board of Public Welfare

On April 29, in chapel, Mr. Arthur James, of the State Board of Public Welfare, talked on the various corrective and charitable institutions of Virginia. She maintains four hospitals for the insane, costing over $1,000,000 a year. Her three thousand delinquents are housed in convict camps and the State penitentiary, while four industrial schools are provided for juvenile delinquents. This is only a part of the State's social problem. Whereas in former days of curative agencies, reformatories, etc., today a preventive system is being instituted. Examples of this are the juvenile and domestic relations courts. In the work of saving citizens for the State, we find improvements in the almshouses and jails.

SENIOR STUDENT COMMITTEE REPRESENTATIVES ELECTED

With wild riding, fast action, stirring scenes and an exciting finish. One of the most thrilling wild west pictures ever made. Also 2nd episode of THE WINKING IDOL.

THURS. & FRI.—Lon Chaney and Pricilla Dean in OUTSIDE THE LAW, a big special production. She hated him—she owed vengeance—she cast caution to the winds, took the law into her own hands and out of this welter of crime came love. A marvelous melodrama of black revenge—a tremendous hate—a triple double cross and honor amongst thieves. We recommend this is an unusually good picture. It has thrills—chills and suspense; it is the greatest crook melodrama ever screened. It has a powerful climax that will leave you limp with excitement. Also good comedy with each now. Matinee each day at 4.

SAT.—Edmund Lowe and Betty Compson in THE PALACE OF PLEASURE a special production. It is the love story of the world famous dancer LOLA MONTEZ. Her love affairs were the gossip of all Europe. BEAUTIFUL MAY DAY AT STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE

Audrey Chewning, Queen

May Day at S. T. C. has come and gone but has left behind it memories which will not be easily discarded. After all the many beautiful things that took place who, of those that saw it, could ever forget it?

The long awaited day, Saturday, May, 8, was finally ushered in at S. T. C. with sunshine and warmth. There was a stir and air of expectation all over the campus while all were eagerly awaiting the afternoon.

The program began at four o'clock and by that time a large crowd had assembled around the quadrangle in front of the school where the May Court was to be held. The balconies were filled; the street and both sides of the roped-off ground were crowded with people.

The program opened with a graceful dance by Sprites of May which was closely followed with a solo dance by Mary Culin. After this introduction the Court made its appearance. There were twenty-eight girls as attendants, all of whom, were dressed in long organdy frocks of different pastel shades, each carrying a hat of flowers. The attendants were:

Elizabeth Casey Gwen Hardy
Eleanor Zacharias Gwen Edye
Elizabeth Diehl Elizabeth Scott
Jeannette Johnston

Margaret Chandler
Florence Riss Lucille Wright
Virginia Hodgson Mary A. Blanton
Jo Culin Mary Johns
Helen Hodges Katharine Owens
Ruth Barron Marion Grimes
Louise Foster Alice Jarvis
Virginia Vincent Sylvia Siegel
Aylwin Hughson, Annie G. McIntosh
Polly Smith Mary Duncan
Helen Wilcox Harriet Booker

As the last attendant took her place the maid of honor, Miss Emma Mcbane Hunt, came out preceded by two small flower girls. Miss Hunt was dressed in a pink gown and carried a beautiful shower bouquet of sweet peas.

The came the Queen of May, Miss Audrey Chewning with her small peaches and flower girls. And was there ever a more beautiful Queen or one who looked more queenly with her white dress, veil, train and bouquet of lilies of the valley? She was a queen which S. T. C. was proud of and happy to be able to claim as her own. After Miss Chewning had taken her seat on the throne a garland of white sweet peas and greens was placed around her shoulders by the maid of honor.

The flower girls were Martha McCorkle, Ann Cocks, and May Cecil Bynum.

The pages were Henry Logan Newbill, Blanton Hanbury, Robert Gilbert, S. B. Upton and Walter Jones.

Next came the entertainment of our beautiful Queen and Court and the majority of this was done by the

MAY QUEEN AND COURT

LOCAL TALENT PRESENTS COMMUNITY CONCERT

On the evening of May 5, a very delightful and appropriate musical program was given by local talent in the State Teachers College auditorium. This concert, held under the auspices of the Music Department of the Woman's Club of Farmville, carried out the slogan of National Music Week, "Give More Thought to Music" in a manner most entertaining and uplifting to a large audience.

The Farmville Silver Band, under the remarkable direction of Mr. Cataldo, opened the program with an overture from Princess of India. Later on it gave an equally enjoyable number by Laurenbeau. S. T. C. artists took prominent parts, Dr. Jarman singing "Sunset," and Mrs. Katherine King, "Ave Maria." They also sang in group numbers. The Grainger Instrumental Quartette gave a selection. The Rosary was very beautifully sung by a quintette from the Conservatory of Music, with Mrs. Warren Bowman as violin accompanist. Misses Virginia Potts and Virginia Vincent played a duet from "Il Trovatore." Hampden-Sidney was effectively represented by Dr. Wilson singing Mandalay and Mr. Roberts and Mr. Dabney Jarman giving a violin duet. One of the closing numbers was Beethoven's "The Heavens Resound", sung by Prince Edward Music Club Chorus. The piano accompanists of the various selections were Mrs. Gills, Dr. Williams, Miss Vaughan, Miss Willis and Miss Booker.

Attend Prayers—you will enjoy it.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT INSTALLATION SERVICES

Vincent and New Committee Take Reins

Last Tuesday evening at seven o'clock, the old and new Student Committees moved slowly down the center auditorium aisle to the strains of "Alma Mater."

After they were seated on the rostrum, Kate Trent, retiring president, gave a short talk thanking the student body and faculty for their loyal support and cooperation of the past year. Virginia Vincent, the new president was then sworn in. She expressed her unbounded appreciation of her new honor and pledged herself and her new committee to the best of their ability to uphold the ideals of the college and the wishes of the student body. The remaining officers, class representatives, and members ex-officio then took their oath.

After a very beautiful and appropriate solo, "Dawn", by Mebane Hunt the two committees of 1925-26 and 1926-27 again marched out of the auditorium. This time, Virginia Vincent wore the cap and gown, a symbol of her presidency.

The new officers and committee members are now serving the student body of the college, and they earnestly beseech each girl to feel a vital part of the student organization, to live honorably the life of a loyal daughter of Alma Mater.

Virginia Hodgson says experienced couples do not fall out of hammocks because they know the ropes too well.

Annie Gris told us she knew the golden rule but she was afraid he would think her forward.

NAMES OF FOUR HONOR STUDENTS ANNOUNCED

In chapel, May 7, the names of the honor girls of the Senior and Sophomore classes were announced. Of the Seniors—Olive Smith Bowman, First Honor and Audrey Chewning, Second Honor. Of the Sophomores—Mary Alice Blanton, First Honor and Polly Riddle, Second Honor.

CHORAL CLUB PRESENTS OPERAETTA

On Monday night the Choral Club under the direction of Mrs. Katherine King entertained the school with a delightful operaetta, "The Lady of Shalott". The entire group showed splendid talent and training and the solos which were rendered by Misses Alma Smith, Lucy Marsteller and Florence McIntyre were enjoyed by all who heard them. We wish to thank Mrs. King and the members of the Choral Club for their delightful program.

RUFFNER LITERARY SOCIETY

The Ruffner Literary Society held its regular meeting Friday, May 7. Brooke Hughes had charge of the program for the meeting. Iren Halpin, Mattie Duling, Jacqueline Noell, and Carolea Harris made interesting talks on Scotch, Irish, English and American Folk songs. The society was favored with solos by Louise Pond, Lillian Savedge, and Florence Savedge.

SOPHOMORES WIN FIRST BASE BALL GAME

Interest Runs High

The first baseball game of the season was played to an enthusiastic crowd Thursday afternoon on the athletic field. The Sophomores came out ahead with a final score of 28-21, raising their score from a tie in the 3rd inning of 15-15. The game was interesting from start to finish. The Freshmen were weak in the first inning but after the beginning of the second inning they warmed up with a resolve to raise their score and made 12 runs to the Soph's 1. The 3rd inning ended with the score tied at 15-15 and Claud broke the suspense by knocking a home run, which brought in other men on bases. After this the Sophs kept their lead although the Freshmen ran the final score to 28-21.

Both teams played well and showed much practice, and the remaining games are expected to be even better, so everyone is looking forward to a big crowd and a close game Monday when the Sophomores will meet the Juniors.

Y. W. C. A. INSTALLATION SERVICE HELD

Charges Given by Old Cabinet to the New

On Wednesday night, May 5, the new Y. W. C. A. Cabinet members took their oath of office from the old. The candle light installation service was a lovely one. The candle light glow was the only lighting effect, and the old cabinet officers carried their candles lighted to give the flame to the unlighted candles of the incoming cabinet. A choir of girls sang appropriate music as the two cabinets entered.

Lucille Wright, the outgoing president, gave the charge to the new president, Rosalind Harrell, and lighted her candles the symbol of transferred service and spirit. The retiring president appealed to the student association for their sympathy and cooperative service under the new president. Each retiring girl gave a simple, challenging charge to her successor. "Hold Thou My Hand" was rendered by Helen Hodges and Virginia Potts.

MISS IDA BIERBOWER, Alumnae Editor

We are always glad to publish any desirable article or communication that may be sent to us. We wish, however, to call attention to the fact that unsigned correspondence will not be published.

The Rotunda invites letters of comment, criticism, and suggestions from its readers upon its manner of presenting and treating them. A letter, to receive consideration, must contain the name and address of the writer. These will not be published if the writer objects to the publication.

All matters of business should be addressed to the Business Manager, and all other matter should come to the Editor-in-Chief. Complaints from subscribers as regards irregularities in the delivery of The Rotunda, will be appreciated.

A WORD OF THANKS.

It was just about this time last year when people began telling me what an awful time I would have trying to edit The Rotunda. The year has passed and my hair is not grey and my disposition is not any worse than it was. This and any success the paper has met with is all due to the cooperation of a very kind and thoughtful staff. The staff has always been on the job and ready to do more than its share.

The Reporters Club has been better than ever before and their work is appreciated by the Staff.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the Staff for its splendid support and all those who have contributed to the success of our school paper. I wish all success to the new editor and staff.

MAKING THE MOST OF OUR OPPORTUNITIES.

We've heard this statement so often that it simply goes over our heads, but we really should stop once in awhile and check up on ourselves. Have we made the most of our opportunities this year? Have we entered into school activities, have we put ourselves into our class work, have we worked for what we could get out of it, or have we simply done what we've had to do? If we've bluffed through, taken our classes as a duty rather than a pleasure, staged outside of the school activities and merely criticized—then an opportunity has been lost. Those of us who are graduating will walk into a new field, full of opportunities to improve ourselves and to help others improve. There will be a chance to start again, a chance to really make the most of our life. Those who are coming back will have a new year to begin—a year that we may make the best of our lives and one we may make count for our Alma Mater. When we lose a chance to make the most of an opportunity we do not hurt ourselves alone, we hurt those with whom we associate. We surely ought to think of this now if never before, and as we begin a new year whether in S. T. C. or in some other part of the country, let's remember that if we "Give the world the best that we have the best will come back to us."

P. D. CLUB ENTERTAINS

The members of the Petersburg-Dinwiddie Club entertained Miss Olive Iler, their faculty advisor, last Saturday night at a movie party. After the show, the club and its honorary member enjoyed a jolly social time together, and delicious refreshments were served.

The Bootblack: "Light or dark, sir?"

Absent-Minded Prof.: "I'm not particular but please don't give me the neck."

AMONG THE CAPS AND GOWNS

ELIZABETH BUGG

When wordsworth wrote these lines—

"A perfect woman, nobly planned To warn, to comfort and command;"
he had no idea that they applied to "Dibby"; but they do. All who know her can testify to that. She has shown the fine qualities in her throughout every phase of her college life, and one cannot conceive of this college life without her. As a proof of her capability every honor which this college has to offer has been "Dibby's", and she has held every position, fulfilled every office, as only "Dibby" could do.

In spite of all these awe-inspiring attributes "Dibby" is known and loved by every girl at S. T. C. She and loveliness are synonyms, we can't imagine one without the other. But her greatest attraction is personality—she perfects it, and we are glad to have her go out into the world as a representative of our college.

MARGARET LEWIS STEARNES

"Peggy Lou" came to us last year from Hollins. She very quickly played her way into the position of Chairman of Music Committee of the Y. W. C. A. It is partly to her we owe the pleasure we have from the Saturday night sings. "Peggy Lou" has served as a very faithful proof-reader on the Rotunda Staff. She has been a prominent member of the College Orchestra, playing the xylophone. "Peggy Lou's" services to the school have been innumerable.

The Delta Sigma Chi Sorority has the honor of having Peggy Lou's membership. Peggy Lou is also a member of Pi Kapa Omega and Alpha Delta Rho.

MARTINA WILLIS

Martina has been working hard to put Farmville on the map, forensically speaking. It has been due largely to her efforts that we have organized a debating club and engaged in inter-collegiate contests. Her efforts along this line, as well as her willingness to serve, her general spirit of friendliness and loyalty, and her quiet pleasing personality have made her a very popular member of the class of 1926.

STUDENT COMMUNITY STUDY

That the Y. W. C. A. may be better fitted to help college girls meet the needs of life as they actually find them in rural communities, Miss Gladys Taylor, Secretary of Student Community Study of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A. paid a visit to Farmville last fall. She solicited the aid of our alumnae.

She writes that the seven alumnae from our college who agreed to keep diaries and to assist in this work have been very faithful and have sent in quantities of invaluable material.

The study is being made among the graduates of only four colleges in the United States and it is gratifying to know that the Farmville girls are rendering such valuable assistance.

VIRGINIA CLUB MEETING

The Virginia Club met Monday evening at seven o'clock in Room R.

The most important business was the appointment of a nominating committee for officers of the coming year. Accounts of specific work on certain reports were given and a definite decision was reached concerning finances for the remainder of the term.

The following new members have been invited to join the club:

Sara Spiers
Betty Jernigan
Margaret Ferguson
Pauline White
Mrs. Davidson
Fannie B. Shorter
Thelma Woodfolk
Bessie Meade Riddle
Elise Anderson
Hallie McCraw
Winnie Hines

TENNIS

Tennis is "the thing" these days. Those who have been playing are giving the courts a grand rush and if anyone wants a court it is get out before six o'clock or there is no tennis. All the courts are filled by six a. m.—and stay full until old Sol's service is too hot for even the greatest tennis fans. The afternoons are popular but after supper is the favorite time and many who go to play stay to watch those who beat them to it. It's the early bird that catches the courts.

MEASLES VERSUS MICE

The infirmity doors were opened last Wednesday and such a scampering! Out rushed all the mice who had been confined for three weeks with the measles. There was much joy in S. T. C. when it became known that the mice were out.

Now that everything is ready for action once more, the Dramatic Club has again started rehearsing for "Mice & Men." The play will be given May 21. Those who have already reserved their seats are asked to re-reserve them with the old tickets.

"Mice and Men" will be repeated during Commencement Exercises, so those girls who are remaining for Commencement are asked to wait and see the play then.

MATHEMATICS CLUB HOLDS MEETING

The Mathematics Club held its regular meeting Monday afternoon. A very enjoyable program was presented by which it was revealed that mathematics is not such a severe subject that it cannot hold something of wit and even beauty. The first number was an essay on "A, B and C" which was read by Jean Vaughan. Hazel Saunders read a paper on "Famous Women Mathematicians." The calculus class demonstrated a math garden in which blossomed all kinds of roses and even bleeding-heart. This garden was inclosed by an ivy-covered fence and guarded by a witch. An interesting talk on cycloids by Miss Carrie B. Taliaferro concluded the program.

Our idea of a kind-hearted man is one who orders a ton of soft coal when the cat insisted on sleeping in the coal bin.

Why Miss Her refuses to wear her Yale sweater to classes when it is the envy of the school already?

THE SPOTLIGHT

Skinny Craft and Skinny Watkins sadly questions, "What's in a name?"

When Amelia Johnson first came to college she was patted vigorously on the back for a week before people realized that she talked that way naturally.

Mebane Hunt is so near sighted that she flirted outrageously with a clothing store dummy for several days before she found out the terrible truth.

Liz Scott can't even seem to remember classes these days. Her Mills must be on the mind instead of on the floor.

Ellen Robeson is in love. She has all of the symptoms. However the poor boy must certainly have a lot of names.

Mary Culin once heard it said, "Smile at everyone you see." She did—and he smiled back.

Polly Stallard says that the only thing that folks seem to try to keep clean on the campus is the garbage can.

"I just came from Jack's funeral."
"Is he dead?"
"Well, if he isn't, they certainly played a dirty joke on him."

An optimist is a man who enters college and takes with him a frame for his diploma.

No Arrangements Made
The professor was calling his roll in a sort of haphazard manner one Friday afternoon. Each member of the class, as his or her name was called, responded with the usual "here" or "present".

The name, Jenkins was called. No one answered.

Finally the professor said: "Hasn't Mr. Jines any friends here?"

A Recipe For Flunks

Take a pound of bluffer, and stir in a few exercises, add an ounce or two, flavor with parties and much playing, adding dates regularly. Stir before using and serve with tears at the end of the term.

As the railroad train was stopping an old lady hailed the passing conductor, and asked, "Conductor, which door shall I get out by?"

"Either door, ma'am—the car stops at both ends."

I kissed her in the vestibule
Alas, alack!! I hate to tell
That I was such an awful fool!
I kissed her in the vestibule.
And got a kick like from a mule—
From daddy, who came down pell mell!
I kissed her in the vestibule.
And leaned against the Bell!!!

Student (at church, to visiting friend as collection plate comes around): "Keep your money, Jack; this is on me."

One On You

Did you ever
Go to a party
Not feeling especially well
But when you got there
Everyone greeted you
With a smile
And you felt better
And made wisecracks
And everybody laughed
So you pulled all your good ones
Together with some not so good
And they laughed heartily
Till you found yourself
To be the life of the party
And your cranium
Expanded
And continued expanding
Till you reached home
And found
You had not tucked in all your shirt?
I thank you.

And now we have the sad case of the college boy who spent six months in over coming halitosis only to discover that he was unpopular any how.

HAMPDEN - SIDNEY PRESENTS MINSTREL SHOW

Songs and Witticisms Delight Large Audience

On Saturday night, May 8, in the State Teachers College auditorium "Tiger Minstrels" was presented by the Hampden-Sidney Jongleurs. Jimmie Ayers filled the role of interlocutor to perfection. Chris Munt, Fritz Hamilton, Charles Kernan, Carl Lacey, Slim Wright, Joe Clark, Dickie Dudley, and Squat Palmer, as the end men, sent the audience into hysterics. Songs, both sentimental and otherwise were met with the utmost approval. Alex Hamilton executed some new and surprising steps to the Charleston. The first act ended with the singing of "Old Hampden-Sidney."

In the second act an amusing sketch was given by Dickie Dudley and Squat Palmer called "The Deuce of Spades." Much interest was added by the insertion of certain names into the conversation. Chris Munt gave a short monologue bringing in much local color. The Harmony Trio: Jimmie Ayers, Bob Grover and Alex Hamilton gave some banjo and voice selections.

The third act consisted of a brief play. Richard Richmond, Fritz Hamilton, Macon Randolph, and Chris Munt contested valiantly for the hand of Princess Berinda, Joe Clark. Of course at the crucial moment of the contest Hamp Sid appeared on the scene and claimed the fair lady.

MAY DAY AT S. T. C.

Training School.

The kindergarten and first grade took it upon their tiny shoulders to amuse the Queen. Each had a balloon of different color and led by Gertrude Quinn they danced about the lawn.

Then the sixth grade presented a Wind Dance which was gracefully done. The third grade in entertaining the Queen gave a Daisy Dance. The second grade came out on the lawn and not only did they dance but they also sang "How You Do My Partner." The fourth and fifth grades gave a dance, Sellinger's Round. In costumes of different colors the seventh grade girls did an attractive dance. Then to vary the program and also to entertain the Queen further the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grade boys, led by a competent leader, did a Dumbell Drill. The High School girls, all in white, gracefully danced around the May Pole weaving the colored streamers in and out.

The college girls next came forward. The Freshmen, in costumes, did a Barn Dance. The Sophomores, in attractive Jester costumes, gave a Jumping Jack Jubilee. The Junior and Seniors gave a Trio Waltz which was a beautiful gracegull dance.

The came the Recessional during which the Queen, Maid of Honor, and attendants retired and May Day for this year was over.

The music which was furnished by the College Orchestra was enjoyed by all.

The committee in charge of the whole program was:
Evelyn Beekham Mebane Hunt
Evelyn Peake Virginia Boyd
Gertrude Quinn

May Day this year was more beautiful than it has ever been and we all look forward with much pleasure and anticipation to next year's May Day.

KRONIC KRACKS FROM KUTE COLLEGE KIDS

Virginia Hodgson was heard to say that a college man's attentions are more regular than his intentions.

No, Alice Thomas, a parachute is not a double-barreled shot gun.

Mary Johns thinks her new dress is hot because she bought it at a fire sale.

When asked who was her idea of the dumbest man in the world Liz Young replied: "The one who thinks that the helmlock is a sewing machine attachment."

Miss Hiner: "Have you done any outside reading?"

Peg Fowler: "No, Miss Hiner, it's been too cold to read outside."

Yes, Marshal Penick, Xmas taught us one truth. Mistletoe is the berries.

Helen Wilcox's advice is not to fall in love too deep for someone is apt to throw you a line.

Phyllis Wood says her idea of embarrassment is two eyes meeting through a keyhole.

Alwyn Hughson says a real collegian thinks that a well rounded life consists of one reel after another.

If it's the woman who pays, then please inform us why are the men always broke.

THE HALL OF SHAME

We nominate for the Hall of Shame: Marion Grimes, because she talks more than Bessie Meade; Ellen Robeson, because she struts more than "Sis" Jordan; "Skinny" Watkins, because she switches more than Ann Archer Irving.

Polly Smith, because she's more in love than Peggy Lou Stearnes; Mittie Quarles, because she stammers more than Dat Myers; Virginia Hall, because she swears more than Kitty Reid; Rosalind Harrell because she's more dependable than Ann Smith.

LINES

Oh, the day's been long and dreary,
And I've sat me down to pine;
The subject of which I've grown weary
Is the modern college line.

The game is fun, and it's thrilling
To laugh, dance, flirt, and play,
But not to be in at the killing
Is tough!—what else can I say?

When your heart's tied up in a boy,
And you've loved as never before;
Can you see him flirt with some other
Keep cool, and not get sore?

Can you meet him with smiles on the morrow,
Speak gently, swear solemn love?
If you can you're different from others
On earth, or in heaven above.

Sweet Childish Innocence
"Did you make that face at me?"
roared the schoolmistress."
"No ma'am," said the little boy,
"you just happened to walk in front of it."

Freshmen
She: "Let's do something unusual."
He: "All right, you pay for the tickets."

"It Pleases Us To Please"

A Firm like an individual is always happy when its work pleases its customers, and this is the case with the pleasant dealings we have enjoyed with the Rotunda Staff this year. We feel, from some expressions made to us, that we have really accomplished something in our efforts to make the ROTUNDA better than ever before.

In some cases we have made mistakes, it is only human to make mistakes, but we have enjoyed the job of printing the Rotunda and "IT PLEASES US TO PLEASE."

At all times we solicit constructive criticism and appreciate our customers advice and wishes when we make up the job.

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY—S. T. C. DEBATE

—S. T. C.—

Last Friday evening at 8 o'clock the champion debaters of Hampden-Sidney met those of S. T. C. The auditorium was filled with expectant people who came to see if "The Increased Freedom of Modern Youth is the Hope of Society."

The well-known orator, Roy Randolph, and the fiery Charlie Kernan of Hampden-Sidney spoke in glowing terms of the progress and advancement of society under the leadership of modern youth while Catherine Bentley and Jean Mitchell threw the spotlight on the weaknesses of the life of today. Roy Randolph and Catherine Bentley dealt in moral and psychological terms, with the strength and weakness of youthful intellects. Charlie Kernan proved himself a connoisseur in modern dress by his (familiar?) knowledge of masculine and feminine array. Jean Mitchell, presented a world of facts and figures which caused her audience to gasp as they realized the costs in manners and morals of modern progress.

The youthful figures were not convinced of the weaknesses of modern youth and gave their decision to the affirmative. After the debate many of the audience went to Tavern Inn

SOPHOMORES ARE BASE BALL CHAMPIONS

—S. T. C.—

The Sophomores took the second tilt of a series of three baseball games being played between the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes. Much interest is being displayed in these games, as the champion add points toward placing their colors on the Athletic Cup, which is in the Reception Hall of S. T. C.

One game is yet to be played between the Juniors and Freshmen. This game, however, will not determine the championship, as the Sophomores have defeated both the Junior and Freshmen teams, leaving the Red and White team undefeated champions.

The Junior-Sophomore game was most interesting, the final score being 34—17 for the Sophomores.

FIELD DAY RESULTS BREAK ALL S. T. C. RECORDS

—S. T. C.—

We are mighty proud of the results of field day this year, disregarding entirely the class element or who won the most points. We are proud for S. T. C. This year is our record-breaking year, in every event the score was better than we have ever made before. How we will compare with the other colleges who entered the telegraphic meet,—has not yet been ascertained—but as far as we compare with ourselves we've taken a long stride forward. We feel quite a thrill over our athletes.

BLUE RIDGE PAGEANT IS PRESENTED

—S. T. C.—

Realistic Scene Written By Rosalind Harrell

—S. T. C.—

A typical, true to life scene of Blue Ridge was brought to us Friday night in the form of a pageant Rosalind Harrell had written into its very lines the spiritual depth, the outward beauty, and the wholesome sport and good time element of Blue Ridge. The scene was written around actual people present at the conference last summer—with a side panorama of particular meaning.

The Smith's Glee Club group formed the background of Blue Ridge girls and the following cast participated:

LAMBS DEFEAT KITTENS IN BASE BALL GAME

—S. T. C.—

Thousands Grouped on Farmville Hills to Witness Game

—S. T. C.—

In a brisk game of baseball last Friday afternoon the Lambs overwhelmingly defeated the Kittens with a score of 13-3-4 to 13-1-2. The action took place on the training school playground and was witnessed by thousands of people. The custom of having the best baseball players in school divided into two teams, the Lambs and the Kittens was inaugurated this year by Miss B. E. O. Graham. She thought that it would be so sweet for her girls to have a little contest among themselves.

Those paying for the Lambs were Mabel Cross, Mary Vaughan, Phyllis Wood, Aylwin Hughson, Helen Hodges, Elizabeth Scott, Margaret Mackasey, Mebane Hunt, and Polly Smith.

Those playing for the Kittens were Frances Sale, Bun Quinn, Helen Hart, Margaret Ferguson, Sis Jordan, Ellen Robeson, Amelia Johnson, Carroll Cromwell and Lucy Haile Overbey.

The Lambs were at the bat in the first inning and Lucy Haile pitched for the Kittens. The action was started vigorously when Mabel Cross hit (?) the ball and sent it flying away while she scampered to first base. Phyllis Wood was next at the bat. The ball had scarcely left Lucy Haile's hand when Phyllis shrieked that her sweetheart was coming down the street. When everyone turned to look she made a two base hit. (At least she was on second base when everyone turned around). At about this time Bun Quinn broke into tears because she wanted so badly to hit at the pretty ball. Nothing else would appease her so the Lambs had to go out in the field and the Kittens came to the bat. Bun went about hitting the ball in a very systematic manner. By long division and trigonometry she came to the conclusion that the ball would be two inches on the other side of her nose at the time she desired to hit it. However, by the time she decided this, it was too late and she had three strikes to her credit. She desired to have more but they were refused her.

Sis Jordan next came to the bat. She declared that she wouldn't play any more 'cause she didn't even want to hit the ole ball anyway. She was just waving at her boy friend. The other members of her team sided with her and the game was called off for the day. Miss Maude K. Taliaferro as umpire decided the score much to the satisfaction of everyone.

THE FASHION SHOW

—S. T. C.—

Charming models! Lovely frocks! Attractive girls! Slender silk-clad ankles! Surely every modiste of Paris and Fifth Avenue lent his combined skill and effort to the fashioning of the beautiful models which were exhibited in the auditorium Wednesday evening at seven-thirty. The occasion was the annual Fashion Show of the classes in sewing. This included the work done by the training school classes as well as the college classes in sewing.

ATHLETIC'S CONTRIBUTION.

—S. T. C.—

Are athletics essential or beneficial for the development of a girl or the standing of a school? Is an athlete only physically developed while the other phases of life are neglected? So after these two questions are asked and quite often the answer is given by one who has made no investigation to verify his conclusion. But, let us look at our own school and see what athletics have done for us.

In order to give the best and in turn receive the best from life we must be mentally, physically and morally efficient. An athlete has practical training in all three of these lines. He isn't merely told how to meet situations and is then given one situation after another and told us just how to meet each one as it comes. His lesson doesn't stop at this. He is given final tests—tests in experience in which he is thrown into many situations that demand immediate action. He has to apply in a practical and life situation what he has formerly learned.

Is mental training fostered in athletics? Well, if one's mind isn't developed when he has to decide quickly and clearly just what should be done every time immediate action is necessary, a better example cannot be given. Every time the body works the mind has decided how to work. Athletes are mentally developed. When looking over athletics it will be found that they are the ones who are the most practical in classes and that they get good grades. In fact, if they don't get an average grade they are not allowed to participate in athletics.

Moral lessons are also given an athlete. He is taught fairness and squareness of play, the necessity of grit and of consideration for others, and in general, the advantage and necessity of absolute true sportsmanship.

It is needless to tabulate the contribution made by athletics to the body development. This is the greatest and most evident contribution. To be physically fit is one of the blessings of life. No one can be physically fit without training of some form. Therefore athletics, by developing one mentally, morally and physically, are beneficial not only to the individual but also to the school.

—S. T. C.—

DON'T KNOCK—BOOST!

—S. T. C.—

If there is anything that makes co-operation, spirit and athletic backing impossible it is continuous knocking and nagging. It is just as disastrous to a school as water is to fire. No team, no student body or no individual is likely to improve under knocking blows. It is just the wrong method at the wrong time. If any one or anything need "jacking-up" any method is better than knocking. If one is dissatisfied with something a change can be obtained in any way better than by nagging. Try it.

There are so many things in athletics that we can boast of but there is one thing that deserves special mention. We have one of the best athletic equipments in the state. The athletic supply, which was practically nothing two years ago, now lacks nothing. Everything necessary for basketball, track, field events, and monogram practice is on hand. Not only are the supplies present for these things but there is also an A-1 place on which all these things can be played; tennis courts, a gymnasium and an athletic field. We also have the girls so why kick—boost!

THE FRIENDLY HEART

—S. T. C.—

Friend, universal, everlasting; supreme gift to man!
A spirit gropes in darkness
Seeking utterance to some human ear.
Thoughts are born and visions soar
But die or fall lest someone Lends an understanding mind.
If no one's ear were e're attuned
To vibrations of a heart, panting
With its burden of overwhelming consciousness
Of love of man and thoughts of man—
The world would give no balm to bleeding of enraptured souls.

BASKETBALL RESUME

—S. T. C.—

The slogan of our Basketball team this year was "A Victorious Varsity". As we look back upon our season—we see that we did have a victorious season.

Farmville 15	Harrisonburg 9

Farmville 42	Averett 21

The girls winning their letters this year were:

Orline White (Guard). Orline played a steady game throughout the season, in spite of a bad ankle. She defended the opponents goal so that it made it practically impossible for them to roll up the score.

Elizabeth Crute (Guard). Crute helped to make our season a victorious one her outstanding work in the Harrisonburg game was noticed by all.

Jean Mitchell (Center). Jumping Jean would be a good nick-name for Jean. She did not only jump, but she showed some beautiful floor work. We wish that we were going to have Jean with us again next year.

Kitty Reid (Side Center). That streak of lightning that just passed was Kitty Reid. The passing in our center was the best in the State. Kitty was always just where she should be.

Helen Hall (Forward). Our steady forward, who rolled up the score for old S. T. C. Little Iris played a hard, steady game the whole season. We

INTERCLASS VOLLEY BALL RESUME

—S. T. C.—

Freshmen Champions

—S. T. C.—

Volley ball was introduced for the first time in our school last year and they who thought they could never make a class team were surprised to find a hidden talent that could serve and volley the balls over the net very easily.

The inter-class games were played after the basketball season just before the Easter holiday. The Juniors proved a too strong foe for the dignified Seniors, winning two successive games with scores 15 to 11 and 15 to 6.

The Sophomores and Freshmen clashed for the second time in their athletic career. The Sophomores who had never known defeat faced it when the Freshmen won two victories, 15-6 and 15-13.

The finals had to be played between the Juniors and Freshmen, sister classes. The green and white fought green and white but the Freshmen downed their older sisters the first game, 15-4. The Juniors realized that it wasn't such a joke to let their younger sisters beat them with such a score and put up a hard fight for the second game. This was the most exciting game of the season, the teams tying the score 14-14. The side winning two successive points first would determine the winner. Luck seemed to be with the Freshmen and after a hard fought battle they achieved the coveted two points, thus winning the championship which gave them ten points toward the class cup.

TENNIS

—S. T. C.—

Each year the Athletic Council adds a new phase to its life. This year a tennis tournament was scheduled in which anyone in school could participate. It was decided that only singles would be played and a loving cup would be presented to the winner. Everyone had an equal chance, and everyone wondered who would "walk away" with the honor.

There were about thirty contestants in the tournament, and it took about three weeks to play off the preliminaries. The final tennis game was staged and the contest was a hard fought battle between Vincent of '27 and Morris of '29.

The first set was won by Morris with the score of 8-6. The second set was a game of endurance which finally ended in Morris' favor with a score of 6-3. Each girl proved more efficient in her "returning" than she did in her "serving".

Mildred Morris was the champion! She is the owner of the individual cup which the Athletic Association offered to the tennis champion of S. T. C. Who will be the champion next year?

The Athletic Association has decided to schedule an inter-class tennis tournament next year besides the individual tournament. It is hoped that this will cause much enthusiasm and each class will try to produce the best team. From the appearance of the tennis courts now we foresee a very brilliant future for the tennis tournaments at S. T. C.

Miss Graham: "So the monogram hikers displayed bare knees?"

I knew she was dense
But dense is no name.
She said, "They're thick,

"When Issy appears on the court, the crowd bursts into cheers," boasted a proud friend.
"Wonderful!" ejaculated the other.
"Is she captain?"
"No, the cheer leader."

"Mother," asked little Willie, "Is it wrong to pray for rain?"
"Of course not," she replied. "Why?"
"I promised to take the girl next door to a ball game Saturday and I've just found out she doesn't know what an umpire is for."

Chapin 1: "Anybody's a fool to pay money to see this kind of basketball."

Chapin 2: "Well, they always give you four quarters for a dollar."

Liz: "What're these muscle shoals I've been reading so much about lately?"

Jackie: "Search me. Sort of a nutated iron, I suppose?"

He (after answering lots of fool questions): "Don't you know anything about basketball?"

Mary D.: "Yes, a few jokes."

She: "How did you feel when the fullback kicked you in the head?"
He: "I didn't!"

VARSITY DEFEATS BEATEN-UP COLLEGE

—S. T. C.—

Last Friday night the Varsity Basketball team defeated Beaten-up College in a very interesting game. From the first minute of the game, when the referee, Miss Grace Russell, blew with excitement.

The entire team played a remarkable game, but the floor work of Mrs. Edwards was one of the most outstanding features. Her agility in covering the floor and her eye for the basket have not been equalled on the floor this year. Her co-worker, Anne Robinson, also played a good game, showing remarkable head work.

When the whistle blew the ball was easily tapped by our jumping center Kitty Moffitt to the side center, Rosalind Harrell. It was then quickly passed to Mrs. Edwards who gracefully and carelessly tossed a goal.

Our guards, Mary Booker and Katherine Dashields displayed excellent team work, throughout the game.

We are proud of our team, and we will back them to the bitter end.

Helen Hall observed the otehr day that everything else about an automobile may stop but the payments will always run on.

Jean Mitchell says some men are hopeless in love, but then most men are hopeless anyway.

No, Jackie, the Constitution of the United States is not in The Body of Congress.

dent administered the oath of office to Viola Woodson. She then administered it to the other officers in turn: Orlene White Vice-President
Gwen Hardy Treasurer
Edith Asher Secretary

Jackie Woodson then said a few words, expressing her appreciation of the honor given her, and her determination to give the best of herself to the Athletic Association and to carry on its work to the best of her ability. The record books were given to the new secretary and treasurer by the secretary and treasurer going out of office. The student body then arose and sang "Onward Farmville."

On leaving this office, "Zack" may cerry with her the satisfaction of a job well done. She has done excellent work as president of the Athletic Association and has done much to build it up and place it upon its present high plane. In her place comes one who is thoroughly capable to carry on this work, and who will not fail to give her best to the Athletic Association and its work. She has the backing of a good corps of fellow workers, and with the support of the student body as a whole, we may hope for the fine work of this organization to be carried on efficiently throughout the coming year, and it is also hoped that athletics may be participated in by a greater majority of the school during 1927-'28.

THE MONOGRAM CLUB

—S. T. C.—

The Monogram Club is an organization which has come into its own for the first time, this year. Much interest in its activities has been shown throughout the school in all classes. Due to Miss Graham's work and interest the club has risen from something vague and unknown, to a real tangible factor in the athletics of the school. For the first time, also, a college monogram really means something to strive for, because to become the winner of one, a person has to attain a certain standard, which marks her as excelling in physical ability. The persons who have attained this standard and have won their monogram this year are:

Jackie Woodson
Jean Mitchell
Juliet Jones
Elizabeth Crute
Mary Smith
Elizabeth Epperson
Mary Jane Wilkinson

With the addition of these as members, even greater and better things are expected from the Monogram Club during the coming year.

"It Pleases Us To Please"

A Firm like an individual is always happy when its work pleases its customers, and this is the case with the pleasant dealings we have enjoyed with the Rotunda Staff this year. We feel, from some expressions made to us, that we have really accomplished something in our efforts to make the ROTUNDA better than ever before.

In some cases we have made mistakes, it is only human to make mistakes, but we have enjoyed the job of printing the Rotunda and "IT PLEASES US TO PLEASE."

At all times we solicit constructive criticism and appreciate our customers advice and wishes when we make up the job.

"MICE AND MEN" SHOWS TO CAPACITY AUDIENCE

The old saying to the effect that all things come to those who wait was amply justified in the estimate of a large and enthusiastic audience which witnessed on Friday night the delayed and long anticipated performance of "Mice and Men" by the Dramatic Club.

The production of this rather old fashioned and somewhat stereotyped romance was charming in costume, pleasing in setting and entirely delectable in its presentation of a lovely heroine whose beauty and grace and natural ease and charm did much to compensate for her want of any great dramatic talent.

Miss Louise Brewer in the role of Mark Embury handled her inherently, somewhat monotonous part with remarkable ability. Her movements were marked by as much masculine dignity as it would be possible for a woman to attain and her voice was particularly pleasing in quality.

Miss Louise McCormick and Miss Amanda Grey in the roles of Capt. George Lovell, the dashing and romantic young lover and Roger Goodlake, the rheumatic and splenetic old gentleman, played their respective parts in a manner quite convincing.

As the beautiful coquette, "sweet sister Joanna," the spoilt and vain young wife of the doting Roger Goodlake, Miss Mary Morton Riddle measured well up to the high standard of beauty of person and charm of manner set by Miss Annie Griswold McIntosh in the role of Peggy, the naive and irresponsible "foundling" who turns out to be her rival and the heroine of the play.

Miss Eleanor Bennett as Mrs. Deborah and Miss Virginia Graves as Peter performed their task of supplying the comic interludes and the explanation of situations with great success.

Miss Lucille Wright as Sir Harry Trimblestone showed considerable facility in the manipulation of a monologue. Miss Katherine Reid as Kit Barniger made a graceful dancing master and Miss Isabel Payne was a mirth-provoking kitchen maid.

Though they stand ast in the catalogue of characters, the orphans with the monitors, the Matron and the Beadle, were far from least in their share of the entertainment afforded.

It would be indeed a gross oversight if mention were not made of the beautiful new curtain and charmingly decorated screens, which made possible the effective settings of the play. To Miss Coulling assisted by Misses Carrie Sherin and Frances Willis our thanks are due for the artistic decoration of the screens.

THE FACULTY AND FINALS

The Seniors feel that their finals this year will be especially successful because of the cooperation of everyone who has been requested to help. For a long time each senior class thought that the Faculty should have a greater part in the exercises on the morning of Commencement. As the candidates for degrees walked slowly by, they thought how much happier they would feel if the professor who had guided and instructed them through four years were wearing the robes, their achievements entitled them to don. The Seniors of 1926, knowing the hearty spirit of enthusiasm and cooperation always shown by the Faculty, requested that they wear caps and gowns on the morning of commencement. With bated breath they waited for a reply and—they were not disappointed!

One of our dearest dreams will come true: On the morning of June eighth, there will leave from the Student Building, as dignified a scholastic body as ever walked the grounds of an educational institution. The Faculty of S. T. C., in academic procession, will lead the graduates of 1926, down the stately colonnades of the State Teachers College toward the commencement of their professional life.

MISS LONDON RESIGNS AS Y. W. C. A. SECRETARY

It is with more regret than we know how to express that we learn of Miss Willie London's resignation, to take place in June. The school's record of Y. W. C. A. work for the past several years has owed its best to her. Not only the Cabinet girls have felt her influence, but her talks at prayers, her plans for the coming of new girls, her general attitude of comradeship and fellowship, have endeared her to the student body. She has been particularly competent and efficient as a Y. W. C. A. Secretary because she understands girls, how to work with them and how to bring out the best in them. Whatever her plans are for next year, she takes with her our love and our appreciation for the standard of Y. W. C. A. work she has modeled and is leaving us.

LETTERS TO THE GRADUATES

Dear Girls of 1924:

Don't you think you have been away from home long enough? We who are still at your Alma Mater feel that it is high time you were returning—returning for a visit at any time you can come, returning for Commencement to see your sisters receive their degrees, and (best of all) returning as students for next fall so that these same sisters will have a good excuse for their own return in 1928 to see you receive your degrees.

With best wishes for each and every one of you,

Yours very truly,
J. L. JARMAN

Dear Girls:

Do you remember that when you were Freshman and Sophomores you had a "Silent Partner" who promised you that she would always be interested in your welfare and in all that concerned you and your happiness?

Whether you remember her or not, she remembers you and sends to you her best wishes and the hope that you will soon return to complete your course. A large number of your Class is going out this year—capped and gowned and hooded—and your Silent Partner hopes that from year to year some of you will come back to your Alma Mater so that she will, even in the years to come, still have some members of the Class with her.

She sends each and every one of you her love and best wishes and would love to see you back at any time.

COTILLION CLUB HAS PICNIC AT FARMVILLE LAKE

On Monday afternoon, May 24, 1926, the Cotillion Club had a glorious picnic at Farmville Lake. The girls left about four-thirty and returned about seven-thirty. They went out in a Ford truck and took a great deal of delicious food which was enjoyed by all after much scampering and playing around the lake. One of the best assets of the picnic was our ideal chaperone, Miss Iler. Everybody had a wonderful time and they are all looking forward to next year's picnic.

COLLEGE DAY

College Day at S. T. C. was Saturday, May 22, when all girls coming for their degree marched in after the Seniors, in chapel. Lucille Wright told, in a short talk, how her four successive years at college had been of benefit to her. On Thursday, May 20, Pauline White, a Junior, had pointed out some of the marked advantages attending a four-year college career.

On Tuesday afternoon, Miss Mix and Miss Stubbs entertained the members of Gamma Theta Sorority at a delightful picnic at Lithia Springs from five to seven-thirty o'clock.

ARE YOU COMING BACK FOR A DEGREE?

From the present reports it seems that out of the Sophomore class of over three hundred girls only about fifty are returning for a degree. This means that the Junior class of next year will fall below the standard, in number, of this year's Junior class and break our record of having a large degree class each year.

Have these girls who have decided to end their school days now, considered what this means? Have you thought of the advantages of having a degree and of the delight of two more years in college?

The time is soon coming when the teaches in every grade will be required to have a degree in order that the most proficient work may be done, because you are not taking Course IV does not mean that you have to change your course. A girl may get her degree working in any course now. Stop just once or twice and think what this degree will mean to you. Not only will a degree aid you materially in your life work, but the time that you spend here at S. T. C. working on a degree will be filled with the joys of school life, and in the making of life-long friendship. The first two years of college are bound to be adjustment periods to a great extent and when you return your third year, you will already feel that you have become adjusted.

Ask any junior or senior or any other student anywhere who holds a degree and see what they advise you to do. S. T. C. is an Alma Mater to be proud of and she wants to continue her record of an ever increasing number in the degree class. The class of 1928 can't be the one to let this record fall—so before you make up your mind to leave here forever as a student consider the thing from every standpoint and see if the greatest sacrifice will not be rewarded.

OUR ALUMNAE

As commencement draws near and all hearts turn to our Alma Mater as the soul center of thoughts, actions and interest, our alumnae will return in large numbers to witness again the final exercises of our school year. We look forward to their visit and are glad that this anticipation will soon be a realization.

It is a pleasure to see girls and talk to girls, who have had the same work, experienced similar joys and counteracted the same kind of tasks that we have had. We have so many common interests, that commencement without our alumnae would be incomplete. They are a necessary part of every big thing we do. They are "us grown up."

As we, who are now college students, are designated in large numbers each year to fill our places as worthy alumnae, we hope that the magnetic force which draws the present alumnae to us, will not only continue its influence in our lives, but will also give us the beneficial influence over the future college students that the present alumnae has had over us.

DID YOU PARTICIPATE IN FIELD DAY?

"Hurrah! for Field Day, we're going to have holiday." Yes, that's the way more than half the school spent the day—as a holiday, disregarding what the holiday was given for. About a hundred girls, including contestants and spectators, were out on the field. Where were the other seven hundred? In bed, down town, loafing—enjoying "the holiday" in a purely selfish way. Dr. Jarman gave holiday Field Day in order that students of S. T. C. might participate or be spectators at the Inter-Collegiate telegraphic meet. There were only about sixty girls participating in any of the events. What kind of a Student Body have we that there should be only sixty students to uphold the athletic standing of their Alma Mater? Certainly more than 10 per cent of our Student Body are capable of entering some kind of athletic event. Perhaps some girls cannot enter any event, but at least all of our girls are able to stand up long enough to watch the meet. Those few girls who did watch the meet seemed to enjoy it immensely. The spirit of the few spectators was fine. Next year girls, let's show Dr. Jarman that we are interested in athletics by coming out 100 per cent strong. As either a contestant or a spectator, we can show our loyalty to S. T. C.

SECOND-HAND

Peg, big sister, had the choice of everything. She was not selfish, but it seemed always to fall to her lot to be the one to be suited. Then too, she was four years older than I, and that makes a bit of difference in having the choice of everything.

Billy, who was none other than I, had the choice of everything—everything that was left or handed-down by Peg. Sometimes I felt slighted. Sometimes I felt that Mother was unfair to me. Just because it happened to be my luck to be four years younger than Peg, was no reason why it should be my luck to get all the left-overs and hand-me-downs.

Peg was pretty. Somehow or other, "big sis" always is pretty or attractive in some way. The younger sisters and brothers always admire and copy her. But always secretly, by all means, never let "big sis" know that you really admire her or think she is pretty. Oh no, that would make her conceited. It there is anything little brothers and sisters detest, it is "prissyness." Anyway, Peg was a blonde with big blue eyes, and just about five-feet-two. Her red-rose mouth curled up in the corners with merriment. But those same blue eyes and red-rose mouth could make you shiver with fear. Peg was always the belle of the party. Boys liked her and would quarrel over the somehow-mixed-up-date. The best debater was the winner and the envied. Peg was sweet and lovable, a bunch of beauty and merriment.

Poor little me! I had none of these lovely characteristics. The best of families always has a black sheep and it was my luck, to be the black sheep in mother's family. I had only one freckle and that was all over my face; hair that never would stay straight; teeth that came in crooked; and legs that were all out of proportion with the rest of my body. That was I!

I shall never forget the dance Beverly Bell gave. It was in that spring-time and somehow or other (I don't exactly remember just how this did happen) I was invited to the dance given by Peg's friend, Beverly. Peg, of course, wanted a new dress. (I did too, but I never had any luck, so why want?) And Peg got the dress.

Peg had a beautiful little blue satin. I had always loved it and loved Peg in it. Why couldn't Peg wear it and let me have a new dress? No, after much persuading, Peg got the new gold lace dress and I got the remodeled blue.

Peg primped for that dance more than she had ever primped. (And that is saying a lot) It did not take me ten minutes to dress, I know. Mother fussed over me, but it was hopeless. I was made plain and plain I must be. I envied Peg. She was so adorable-looking in the new dress. I had learned by this time that it was needless to fret about my well-being. I always got there and got back, so it was needless to worry about anything happening to me now.

Bob Harding was at the dance. He was the ambition of every female member of the younger set. Peg of course, had first choice. He "fell flat" for her.

That's been more than three years ago, now. Peg's married, but not to Bob. Oh, no, that was one time I liked Peg's hand-me-down. Bob is mine, all for "keeps."

JAMES McNEILL WHISTLER

Someone has said, "Pictures make the personality of a home." Then we have much to be thankful for because our school is a home and a home with a personality. We have many, many beautiful pictures but one of those we love best is found in Miss Mary's sitting room. It is "The Portrait of the Artist Mother," by Whistler. I think the reason we love this picture is because of its simplicity. A figure of an old lady against a soft background, who from the folds of her black gown to her tiny lace cap gives one the feeling of tenderness and dignity. Charles Caffin in describing the picture says, "It is not the first blossoming of motherhood, but the ripened form of it that the mother feels as she looks back with a traveling gaze along the path of hopes and fear, of joy and pain that she has trodden."

The artist of the picture—James A. McNeill Whistler—was an American. From the time he was twenty he made his home in foreign lands traveling from Japan to France and England. Thus we see the influence of the various schools in his painting. From the Japanese he learned the art of simplicity—that of the value of leaving out rather than putting in. However, he is so cosmopolitan in his art that American and European schools claim him.

Whistler is recognized as the most artistic of all modern artists and America is proud to claim him as one of her sons.

BEAUTY'S KINGDOM

I Dawn

The fairy maids of Princess Beauty Are gathering dew drops, To paint the morning sky. Swiftly they scatter them, violet and gold.

A vaporous, misty cloud. Now rises in the hazy distance. Water lilies bloom on the shadowy lake.

Violets peep above a sea of blue. Her crimson chariot rushes through the sky, Scattering golden pollen.

II Moon Rise

The Princess Beauty summons her archers

To shoot spangled arrows into a dark blue canopy.

Slowly, yes, slowly the pale Queen rises from her throne And stands looking through the trees, And all is still.

PROMISE

I saw a rainbow upon the sky A thing of color Whose exquisite beauty Was alike a pain and a caress To my tormented soul.

The colors therein speak, Rose, green, and violet, Flame, and molten gold Glowed 'cross my vision bleared By stains of worldliness.

Rose for promised joy, and green The tender hope of youth; Violet, exultingly sad, the Pleasure—pain of transient grief That gladdens life.

But flame—the color of a hurt, A love-torn heart, The ardent passion tint; Last, gold—the vision held steadfast Through the maze. Divine light, divine promise, Fulfilment. —V. B.

It's easy enough to be pleasant When there's prospect of going down town, But the girl worthwhile is the girl who can smile When campused—the whole year round. It's easy enough to be pleasant With a moon and a man and a song But the girl worthwhile is the girl who can smile When the chaperon is along. M. C.

ADVISORY BOARD ENTERTAINS Y. W. C. A. CABINET

Speaking of delightful teas, surely few could surpass the original one given by the members of the Advisory Board to the new Cabinet girls. Miss Norris greeted all with a movie or fairy tale name to be pinned on their backs—the respective names to be guessed. It took Dr. Walmsley an unforgivably long time to guess that he was "Sunny Jim", Miss Penny that she was "Kathleen Norris" and our Miss London that she was a "Flapper"! The appeared delicious punch and cakes to top off the afternoon, and the girls left with a heart-felt note of thanks to the Board for a most enjoyable afternoon.

KRONIC KRACKS FROM KUTE AMONG THE CAPS AND GOWNS COLLEGE KIDS

Alice Jackson says just because a girl's named Ivy is no sign she's a clinging vine.

We nominate for the Hall of Fame Ann Smith because she can eat more and stay thinner than any girl in school.

Mary Darden was heard to remark that some flappers reminded her of an electric fuse; they were so very shocking.

Oh no, Charlotte Baxter, "The Beginning of Wisdom" isn't the same as a college house party.

Ola Thomas says electricity is a wonderful thing but so many people make light of it.

"Runt" Hargrave advanced her opinion that just because a man's a cake-eater doesn't mean he won't take a little apple sauce.

We suggest the following title for a popular number "Life is only a song with everyone else out of tune."

Dot Myers says that some poor fish are so tight all they ever tip is a scale.

PICKNICKERS OF H-S. C. AND S. T. C. HAVE JOLLY TIME

"In the Spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of . . ." well, in this instance to weenies and marshmallows toasted over an outdoor fire, and to fun galore that always goes with an informal, truly picnic supper. It all grew out of the delightful invitation of the Hampden-Sidney Y. M. C. A. cabinet to the S. T. C. Y. W. C. A. cabinet girls, asking them to an outing to Farmville Lake Saturday afternoon. Of course, Miss London was chaperone and you know how her smile sort of gives everybody that holiday feeling, don't you? Even the weather could not daunt the crowd, for when the rain started to fall, they removed themselves and the fire to the pavilion and staged an "indoor outing."

The minor casualties such as pushing one stubborn car up the hill, and "Cille" Wright and Dickie Dudley suffering a collision in the strenuous game of "cat and rat", and our opposing debate of the night before, eating innumerable and countless potato chips haven't resulted in any dire results. Pannie Willis' memoirs on "My First Attempt at Fire Making" ought to prove interesting reading some day.

It may be original to have a picnic under any roof other than the sky—but the suggestion is passed on as a good one to any crowd that hopes to have a thoroughly jolly time, as the two cabinets had Saturday!

Mice and Men

Between acts and since this laudable organization speaks so audibly for itself there is no necessity to say anything further concerning it.

"Mice and Men" will be repeated for the benefit of the visitors during Commencement Week.

Misses Virginia Potts, Gertrude Watkins, Helen Hart, and Virginia Boxley attended a house party at Kenbridge.

OLIVE SMITH BOWMAN

Olive hails from the sunny South, Georgia, to be exact, and we are here to say that it was a happy day for S. T. C. when she decided to become one of her daughters. She has the honor of possessing the most well-rounded personality on our campus. Her versatility is astonishing for she excels in every line, athletics, literary, artistic, musical, forensic, and commercial. She excels or should we say precedes in still another line, that is matrimonial. Her happy and contented mein this year has caused even the most misanthropic senior to resolve not to teach long. Finally, she is a leader, spiritually, intellectually and practically, one whom her classmates, as well as the Faculty, delight to honor and praise.

ELEANOR ZACHARIAS

"Zac" is an ideal girl. She is one who can play as much as she wants to, work as hard as the most busy, study as well as the most studious, and get the biggest results from all she does. When a girl puts her very best into her work, she cannot fail to get good results from it; and we all know that "Zac" has gone at everything she has done with a zest.

Everyone loves to be with "Zach", she is refreshingly different and very lovable. When some one said "To see her is to love her" we had no idea that those words applied to one Eleanor Zacharias—but they do and we are glad that we've had the pleasure of knowing her and of loving her.

ANNE ROBERTSON

Anne is our most intellectual Senior, also one of the most capable and dependable girls in school. She has served her Alma Mater in many capacities during her four years here, and the school will feel her departure keenly in the years to come.

The Freshmen are especially dependent upon Ann, since she possesses untold knowledge of birds, flowers, trees and bugs—any time you see Anne she is surrounded by a group of Freshmen clamoring for advice concerning the weed or questioning the singing of some bird heard in the grey dawn. For Anne we wish success and greatest happiness in whatever she may undertake.

ELEANOR BENNETT

Eleanor has only been a member of our Student Body for one year, but in that time she has grown in their hearts and admiration. She first attracted our attention by her willingness and her gift as a singer. Her old favorite "Hard Hearted Hannah" was the first song in which she appealed to us. She can sing the song with all the effect needed, but those who know Eleanor best never think of her as "Hard Hearted". Along with her voice Eleanor has a most attractive stage presence and, has done some excellent work in the dramatic club.

We see Eleanor's more serious business side when we look at the work she has done as Assistant business manager of the annual and business manager of the Dramatic Club, in both positions she has shown marked ability.

Her very attractive and pleasing personality have won her many friends, and her sunny smile and ready sympathy will be missed next year. However, from all reports, Eleanor may soon drop from her repertoire of songs the one entitled "I'm No Man's Mamma Now."

SPLENDID LECTURES HOLD STUDENTS ATTENTION ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS

Messrs. Thomas Skeychill and Hindus
Speak in Chapel and at Night

When S. T. C. awoke Wednesday morning, May 26, it was unaware of the pleasant surprise which awaited it. The students got up and went thru the daily routine and things happened as they had daily until chapel time. Then our surprise came. Yes, on the 10:26 train in the form of rather forms of two men, Mr. Skeychill and Mr. Hindus. Dr. Jarman had asked us in the beginning of chapel to wait a few minutes until he came back. We did wait,—some rather impatiently. Finally he came back with a man, which was nothing unusual, since we have many men to come with Dr. Jarman to lecture to us. After a small introduction by Dr. Jarman, the man, Mr. Skeychill, arose and began to talk to us; not to lecture to us, not to speak to us but to talk to us; to tell us things we would be interested in.

Five minutes after he began the student body realized this was a different kind of speaker and ten minutes after, he had every person interested and eager to know what he was going to say next. He began with a short and very informal introduction and then passed on to his subject, which was, "Three Attempts to Reach the Top of Mount Everest." He told not only about the people that organized these expeditions and about their efforts on the mountain but he also brought in something of the people and country of Tibet, where Mount Everest is located. His description was detailed to the extent that everyone in the audience had a clear picture in her mind. He brought before us the courage and endurance of man and also some of the old world. His talk was very good and the time passed almost before anyone knew it.

Not only was his talk interesting but he had a personality, which on the stage, reached out and held the audience, until he had finished what he was saying. His stage manner was unusual and much to be admired. He stood erect,—never shifting from one foot to the other,—never gesturing but speaking right to his audience in a straight-forward, clear manner.

All day long the school buzzed—buzzed about Mr. Skeychill, his talk and the man he had brought with him, a Mr. Hindus. Mr. Skeychill is an Australian and Mr. Hindus a Russian.

Mr. Skeychill was to give a lecture at seven in the auditorium and at twenty minutes to seven the girls began to fill the seats. By the time he was here the auditorium was filled. His subject that night was "Mussolini and Fascism." How many in that audience knew about Mussolini and Fascism when they came in is not known but how many knew when he finished is known. Everyone did.

Mr. Skeychill's lecture began with Mussolini as a boy, his life until he began to fiddle with politics and express his radical ideas and then along with his life Skeychill brought in Fascism, what it was, what it did and what it accomplished. He developed the whole movement for us and showed us, by first explaining Mussolini's character, how Mussolini was the only man in Italy to head and carry out this rebellion. He described for us so vividly the Fascists as they came to Rome that we could feel tense excitement and sympathy for them. Then when he told about Mussolini's entrance and exit from the legislature house of Rome we felt as though Mussolini was right there in our midst. Finally he drew his speech to a close by comparing America's democracy with such an autocratic form of government and why Mussolini is able to carry on this government. After he finished we did not care to leave the world of imagination about Italy for the very realistic study of our common place subjects.

The next morning, Thursday, chapel was filled, every seat possible being taken. You ask why. Mr. Skeychill was going to talk of course. That morning he told us the lecture he was to give was one of his favorites, "The Young Elizabethans." He depicted the men of England that went to fight in the World War as adventurers of Queen Elizabeth's time. He said that many of these adventurers were poets. He compared the poets of the World War with those of other wars and one striking point he brought out was the fact that the verse-makers of former wars were not men who went to fight while the poets of the late war were men who were out on the front lines. Then he gave us all a treat by repeating some of the poems of the World War. He brought to us that day something which we will never forget.

The next and last time Mr. Skeychill spoke was Thursday night. He had been here in March and had given a lecture called "The Trojan Way." This had, unfortunately been on a Saturday night and in comparison with the number of students in school only a few attended. At the request of Dr. Jarman Mr. Skeychill consented to repeat the lecture that night. Again the auditorium was filled and that night his speech turned out to be one of the most graphic, vivid, and interesting descriptions ever given in this auditorium. It was about the war on Turkey which took place in Dardanelles section of south eastern Europe. His description was so vivid, his words so well chosen that every one in the audience could not only see the scene but the wonderful coloring of the water, land, sky and objects in that semi-tropical setting. His purpose was, I believe, to show

CLASS SONGS IN CHAPEL

Beginning Wednesday morning the classes, as is the usual custom, take part of the chapel hour to sing farewell songs to each other, the Faculty, their honorary member, Dr. Jarman and the school. The sentiments expressed in these songs bring tears to our eyes and a pull on our heart-strings, or else they bring laughter and mirth. However, they are beautiful and the sincerity with which they are sung truly makes us realize that school is drawing to a close and we have only a few more days together.

It is a beautiful custom and there surely can't be a more sincere and truly effective way of expressing love and appreciation than through song. The songs are original ones written to familiar tunes. This old custom seems to be being carried out in its most beautiful form this year.

Dr. Dunn is Professor in the Department of Rural Education in Teachers College and has made notable contributions not only in her chosen field but also in that of Elementary Education. She is a speaker of note, having delivered addresses in many colleges of many states. It is also of special interest to know that Dr. Dunn was a former resident of Farmville and a member of the College faculty. The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Following the address, the annual reception given to the graduates and alumnae will be given in the parlors of the College.

AN APPRECIATION

Regretting Miss Willie London's resignation as secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association and wishing to express our appreciation of what she has meant to the spiritual life of the college, we, the Advisory Board of the Association, adopt the following resolutions:

First, that we value highly her sympathy, her understanding and love of people, especially of girls, her kindly judgments, and her tact in dealing with the varied problems of the Association;

Second, that we appreciate her untiring devotion and singleness of purpose in deepening the spiritual life of our college;

Third, that we recognize her success in leading students to high Christian standards.

SENTIMENT AT GRADUATION.

Sentimentality is not considered good taste. In fact it has come to be looked upon as connoting something of the insincere; and maybe its frequent corruptions have justified this tendency toward that reaction. However, we feel that the sentiments coming to the minds of us at S. T. C. this June have a basis which cannot be called softness.

Let us review briefly the springs from which these sentiments rise; for after all that is what counts.

It is natural after living in one home for nine months, to become attached to that domicile, even though one may abuse and revile it at times. And in the rather emotional stress of parting with best friends perhaps forever—or so our thoughts are apt to run—a sentimental feeling for the dear Alma Mater springs suddenly into existence. The halls and columns of our stately college seem the happiest of settings for the happiest years of our lives—the carefree, jubilant college years. After all what is it that makes the throat clog and the eye moist when Finals come and those who are leaving for good walk up and down the campus for the last time? It is more than the thought of friends to be separated; it is even more than the mere thrill of a period in our lives ended. It is above all a certain something that subtly radiates from every arcade walk, every classic column, and every graceful tree. It is the background of the past in which pain and pleasure have played such a big and inspiring part.

*"They hail and arcades with their calm classic air,
They creep with blossom potentially fair,
They trees and they fountains, they unencumbered walls
Will live in their memory whatever befalls.
The far from they care and protection they come
They still hold their dear old well-beloved home."*

Finals and the end of the year may ever take away a rich stream of the young womanhood that has been maintaining the life of S. T. C. for years; and yet the following fall brings new women who, with inspirations left by those gone before, do "carry on." Commencement is truly for those leaving; the beginning of their life work—yet how real also is it a commencement for those remaining; a beginning of their responsibility in carrying on the life of the college.

So those of us who remain feel this and realize our responsibility and privilege. It is for us to keep faith, "to lift it high!"—V. W. B.

GREETINGS TO ALUMNAE!

It is with great pleasure that we welcome the alumnae back for Commencement. They are always welcome and it does us all good when we realize that the girls who have left have not lost interest, but still come back. Our alumnae are a vital part of the College and the more who return the more we feel like rejoicing.

Perhaps this is as good a time as any to express our thanks to the alumnae for the many ways they have aided us. The spirit which they keep up throughout the State, and the large sums that they have sent us for the Student Building have spurred us on to work in order to feel worthy.

The Sophomores and Seniors of this year will soon be among our alumnae and we are counting on them not only to help keep up the spirit but to make it even finer.

We're mighty glad to have every one of the alumnae here, and we hope that the inspiration they may gain from seeing Commencement and by noting our progress, will draw them even closer to us and encourage them to come back more often.

AMERICAN LEGION DANCE

A number of S. T. C. girls, chaperoned by Mrs. Laing, attended the dance given by the American Legion, at the Armory on Thursday night.

The hall was beautifully decorated with flags, and punch was served by Mrs. Garland throughout the entire dance. There was round dancing and square dancing, while the figures were called by Mr. John Stokes. The girls who attended declared it a perfect success.

LECTURES HOLD STUDENTS (Continued from Page One)

the horror and futility of war. From the time he began he held the audience in a breathless spell. When the abrupt end came silence reigned and no one seemed to realize that the world that they had been allowed to peep at had been cut off.

This was the last that was seen of Mr. Skeyhill on the stage but he was often on the campus and between signing annuals and playing tennis he was talking to the girls in a friendly manner.

His friend, a Russian named Hindus, came with no intention of making any speech whatsoever but he gave in and talked in chapel. His subject was "Adventures in the Old World." By the way of introduction he told something of his own life, a few incidents which took place when he was living in a tenement house in New York City. His speech covered some thing of Copenhagen in Denmark, also Denmark's countryside, Stockholm in Sweden and then he passed on to Finland. He brought out many of the customs and idiosyncracies of those people. He had to bring his speech to a close rather abruptly because of lack of time since the chapel period was nearly up.

Saturday morning he also spoke and continued his subject of the day before "Adventures in the Old World." He dwelt on or rather built up his speech around Russia and the Russian peasants. First, he told us of the difficulty of obtaining permission to enter Russia. Then he informed us of many of the conditions existing among the peasant class and also of many of their customs and their manner of living. As before he had to stop because of the brevity of time although we would have liked to have heard more. Mr. Hindus, we understand, is leaving for Russia in two weeks and along with him go our wishes for a great deal of success in his trip.

Never have any lectures at S. T. C. been enjoyed as much and this weekend will remain long in the memories of all the girls.

PICNIC AT WILLIS MOUNTAIN

On Saturday afternoon, May 29, the girls of Cottage K had a delightful picnic at Willis Mountain. The girls left soon after dinner and went in a truck. Much pep was shown in the songs on the rides, but the real test of sportsmanship was shown when every girl climbed to the top of the mountain. Many pictures were taken of the girls "Sitting on Top of the World." The appetite which resulted from the climb up the peak was satisfied with the most delicious picnic food to be had.

PEGGY REVERSES STUDIO

acter" has and always will be a vital part of the mental equipment of every actor and actress who aspires to success. They have got to "get into" the part they play. For instance, if an actor, fond of snappy attire in real life, were to appear in that outfit in a part in a picture which necessitated his resorting to the mannerisms of a stevedore there would be no such things as serious pictures . . . everything would be burlesque comedies.

In "Helen's Babies" appearing at the EACO theatre Saturday, June 5, Baby Peggy, who is starred in this Principal Pictures Master Production, just reverses studio ethics. She is just her own self since the part she plays is that of "Toddie" and, as "Toddie" is a genuine, fun-loving and affectionate youngster, the reason is quite obvious. Adv

PICNIC FOR BIOLOGY CLASS

On Wednesday afternoon, May 26, a delightful picnic was given by Mr. and Mrs. Fattig to the students majoring and minoring in Biology. Two cars and a large bus conveyed the "picnicers" to Farmville Lake where, about six o'clock, a delicious sandwich supper was served, which included everything one could possibly desire or had ever associated with picnics, from pickle to ice cream. They returned about seven after the most enjoyable of picnics. The members of the Biology Class wish to express their appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Fattig for such a wonderful afternoon.

ON FALLING

I've always had the highest respect for babies because they are the only people in the world who can fall all over themselves without seeming to feel the slightest humiliation. They fall on their sides and have to be picked up; they fall on their backs and roll; they sit down heavily and scramble up themselves; but the only time when they seem to object at all is when they fall on their heads, and then I don't think they feel at all humiliated. Their equanimity excels that of older persons.

Have you ever noticed how very much irritated a man is when he slips on a banana peel or loses his balance on an icy street? He hastily collects himself, rises, and rushes off, with many agonized backward glances, hoping fervently that nobody he knew saw him, and cursing violently to himself. But perhaps we should class adults as extremists in this behavior.

Little girls don't like to fall down, mainly because it soils their nice, fresh dresses. The effects of the fall itself receive no consideration whatever, as long as the dress is not hurt.

But the ideal way to behave is to behave as little boys do when they fall. They don't have to be picked up; they don't curse; they don't cry; and they don't care if their clothes are dusty. They "grin and bare it," beautifully, to all outward appearances, but I've always suspected that deep in their hearts is a firm determination to get it back on the fellows who tripped them. Since everybody does, I suppose it's human nature to resent a fall, but I wish somebody would please tell me why.

PIERIAN LITERARY SOCIETY
ENJOYS PICNIC

On June 28th the Pierian Literary Society enjoyed a delightful picnic at Lithia Springs. They left about fifty carrying with them many good things to eat. Everyone had "one grand and glorious time" and was very loathe to leave at seven-thirty, but there's no reason why, there's not to make reply, onward to S. T. C. plunged the picnickers.

Music was played during the tea. A few solos were rendered by Miss Mebane Hunt and a recitation by Miss Lorah Brewer.

The afternoon was made more enjoyable by the presence of Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary, and the Junior class man, Miss Grenels.

Everyone fully enjoyed the hour which was concluded by the singing of "Alma Mater."

ROTUNDA STAFF TREATS ITSELF

Gives Itself a Very Good Time

At daybreak somewhere around six thirty o'clock on Wednesday, June 2 the Rotunda Staff ate breakfast. Eating breakfast isn't such an unusual occurrence to the staff, but breaking their fast in the meadow among the birds, and wide open spaces may be considered "different" at any rate. Habits are difficult to break, so these intellects simply continued their fixed habits. Instead of folding Rotundas, the folded nice delicious dark-brown black spotted, bacon into rolls. The dogs barked so they gave them some dog like attention and immediately consumed them. The staff is original to the fullest extent; therefore, they would not be so commonplace as to have muddy coffee. They became frivolous and drank dark liquid out of a bottle which made them all somewhat "dopy."

Then a terrible thing occurred and it isn't even news for the reporters. A large size cow, and a mammoth horse rushed on from both sides. But the staff did not elect an editor-in-chief for nothing. She showed her executive ability as soon as possible, ordered the grand cows, and obtrusive horse to go away. The animals fled. The staff ate on!

A clear call sounded in the distance, not the "Call of the Wild," but the call of the intelligent, so grabbing a dish, a spoon, a coco-cola top each after telling everybody else of the grand time she was having, each member answered the call, better known as the bell.

Lucy Haile—"Lordy—Eleanor has eaten a whole can of plums."

Dolittle—"Gosh—call the plumber—quick!"

Mary Culin says you don't have to be crazy to dance the Charleston, but it helps.

"Have you a Charles Dickens in your home?" asked a polite book agent.

"No!" she snapped.

"Or a Robert Louis Stevenson?"

"No!"

"Or a Eugene Field?"

"No; we ain't and what's more we don't run a boarding house here, either. If you are looking for them fellows you might try the house across the street."

Hodgson: "Polly says that she intends to keep her youth."

Kitty Reid: "Guess she does—she never introduces him to anybody."

Peggy Lou: "What's better than a nice idea?"

Sonny: "Why, you dear."

Fools throw kisses, but wise men deliver them in person.

Zig: "Why is it that girls kiss each other and men do not?"

Zag: "Because girls have nothing better to kiss and men have."

Mae to Dot Myers, who was walking with Amelia: "You are not very particular who you walk with."

Dot: "I know it. Don't you want to walk with me?"

Mebane: "I just saw 'Red' down town. I understand she was trying to sell her shoes."

Edith: "Sell her shoes? What's the big idea?"

Mebane: "Well, she'd just come out of a shoe-maker's shop and she said she had 'em half soled."

Books and Life

Dreams have a way of coming true
In story-books one reads

But dreams have a way of failing you
In every-day life one leads.

Love has a way of winning your heart
In story-books one reads.

But love has a way of falling apart—
In every-day life one leads.

Phyllis Wood says love with men is not a sentiment—but an idea.

Mattie Rodgers says that she may be a linguist but she can't understand Dutch.

How can two red lips drive away the blues unless the colors clash?

KRONIC KRACKS FROM KUTE COLLEGE KIDS

Ann Smith is sure that had Cornelia been exhibiting the infant Gracchi to a modern incomes tax expert, she would have said: "These are my exemptions."

Eleanor Benett says in the interest of patriotism it should be set forth that every American boy stands an equal chance of becoming Peggy Hopkins Joyce's next husband.

The Universal Watch Word—Tick!

Sadie Baird says she knows a girl so old-fashioned she thinks debutantes still carry flasks!

Hattie Blankenship says men have found dying for freedom much simpler than getting it.

Mary remarked that there may be some question as to whether the younger generation is going, but it certainly gets there.

Olive Smith Bowman says what this country needs is a good insecticide for radio bugs.

No, "Dibby" Bugg, fix crackers are not a Uneceda product.

Audrey Chewning says be good and you'll be admired; don't and you'll be envied.

Harriet Coleman thinks a certain old saying should be changed thusly: An apple a day keeps the fruit growers in cigarette money.

Mable Cross says the tightest guy in the world is a man who borrow three cents for stamps so he won't have to break a nickel.

Mamie Daniel thinks the maxim should be this now—She who hesitates is old-fashioned.

Mrs. Edwards wants to know if Diogenes returned today would he be looking for an honest summer resort circular?

VIRGINIA CLUB MEETS

wards, president of the Virginia Club. Mrs. Edwards stated the purpose of the club that of serving the State in the most constructive manner possible.

The Virginia Club has been working on a survey of Prince Edward County. The work has been carried on by various committees. Every member of the club being on some one committee. These various committees appointed chairmen to give a brief digest of the work done by that committee at the meeting with the Council. The following digest was given:

1. History of Prince Edward County Alice Anderson
2. The Counties' Towns, Elizabeth Bugg
3. Counties Natural Resources Audrey Chewning
4. County's Industries, Bessie Gordon Jones
5. The County's People, Anne Robertson
6. The Schools of Prince Edward County Daphne Gilliam
7. The County's Food, Gertrude Quinn
8. The Library Committee, Grace Chambers
9. Report from Sociology Class Eleanor Bennett

Most interesting facts were gained from these reports, and the committee reported that they had found the people of the county not only willink but anxious to aid in the research work.

Nearly every committee felt that their work had only been begun and that there is still a wide field to be covered. The county's towns and the county's industries seemed to have been more nearly completed than had the others, owing to the availability of the material. Some very interesting historical facts were given and some interesting statistics in regard to schools and population were quoted. As a result of the reports everyone interested was avahind and we are looking forward to a completion of the survey next year.

After the reports from the Virginia Club had been completed Judge Watkins thanked the girls on behalf of the County Council, and assured them that they had the sincere thanks and cooperation of the entire county.

The members of the club and of the sociology class enjoyed the opportunity of meeting with the Council, and they all hope that as our work is done they may again have the chance to share their results with this interested group.

"THE POWER THAT LIES BEHIND THE THRONE"

To Miss Barlow, an indispensable power, the Sophomore and Senior classes wish to express their appreciation. Without her aid and ready assistance May Day would have been impossible and the artistic dances to be presented during Commencement would have been a failure. It is hard for an audience to realize the work that is necessary to make such an undertaking possible. Miss Barlow has given her time, energy and enthusiasm to make such activities a success and it is with grateful hearts we express our appreciation to her.

We also wish to thank the committees assisting her.
Music—Helen Hodges, Margaret Wilkins.
Dance—Gertrude Quinn, Virginia Boyd, Evelyn Peake.
Costume—Clara Thompson, Hattie Blankenship.

DRAMATIC CLUB GIVES PICNIC

Much to the delight of all the dramatic ability in school, last Saturday proved to be a delightful "picnic day." At four o'clock William was ready with the truck. All of the "dramatics" placed themselves within the truck, leaving large, wide spaces for packages of food. And such food! The party went to Farmville Lake, the Dramatic Club had the honor of having Mr. Skeyhill and Mr. Hindus as their guests. After playing, joking, and talking intelligently a few minutes, food was suggested. A suggestion of food on a Dramatic Club picnic means action! Everyone helps to unwrap sandwiches, open "dopes," discover special choice pieces of pickle, see how much cream one could hold, and in general, tried to find out how much one member could consume. After having a very delightful time, they piled into the truck again. This time no room was left for food? The picnic proved to be an excellent rehearsal of happiness, much to the satisfaction of Miss Wheeler, whom everyone was so glad to have on the party.

At The Eaco Theatre Next Week

MON. Hoot Gibson in TAMING THE WEST. Here is the swiftest romance that was ever put on the screen. Just one continuous whirlwind of bucking brocs, fist fights, love-making, speeding automobiles and galloping hoofs. Adapted from "The Range Dwellers" by N. M. Bowers. It's about a wild riding cowboy who stepped on the gas. Also episode 7 of SCARLET STREAK.

TUES.—Jack Hoxie in DON DARE-DEVIL, a picture of fiery Spanish beauties, quick action outlaws and a big gang of devil-may-care ranch riders galloping hell-for-leather in a big gun battle behind their reckless boss, Don Dare Devil. Just one big whirl of excitement and romance. Also Pathe News.

WED.—William Desmond in STRAIGHT THROUGH, a clean, rousing drama of the cattle country and filled with the thunder of flying hoofs and spectacular fights, with the famous ranch riders. Talk about fight! If you want to see a real "he" man scrap don't miss the tremendous battle between the gambler and big Bill. Also 7th episode of THE WINKING IDOL.

THURS. & FRI.—Betty Compson, Ricardo Cortez, Ernest Torrence and Wallace Beery in THE PONY EXPRESS, a Special Paramount Picture. The Pony Express rides the trails of thrills across. Pony hoofs thunder across the continent from Missouri to California, and East and West are linked again as they were in 1860. Across 2,000 miles of unblazed tract. Thru scorching sun and black of night. Through ice and snow and raiding Indians. Eight days and nights of perilous riding and unmatched heroism. From this thrilling page of history, the screen's greatest director of epic romances has wrought his successor to The Covered Wagon. Not for a day, not for a year it will live in the heart of America forever! Also good comedy.

SAT.—Kenneth Harlan, Helen Chadwick, Mary Carr and Rosemary Theby in "THE RE-CREATION OF BRIAN KENT from the famous novel by Harold Bell Wright. There is sweetness and irresistible power in this play with a man who lost faith in himself by trusting a frivolous woman, and who "found" himself through his love for a loyal woman. It will play on your heart strings and bring forth the music of better emotions. Also second episode of THE FLAME FIGHTER. Two shows at 7:15 and 9 o'clock.
